A GUIDE to the MONTESSORI METHOD

By ELLEN YALE STEVENS

Member Montessori American Committee, Principal Brooklyn Heights Seminary, Graduate Chicago University and Teachers' College Columbia University.

This book gives exactly what many mothers and teachers are looking for in a way that they can find it nowhere else.

IT CONTAINS:

A clear explanation of the method step by step
Full directions as to use of the material
A correct interpretation of the underlying psychology
Suggestions as to adaptation to American conditions
A view of Montessori's deeper message to our times.

No book can be a substitute for "The Montessori Method" itself, but this furnishes an interpretation which will dispel misconceptions of Montessori theories. It is by an educational expert who has studied under Montessori personally and combines authority with sympathy.

EARLY PRESS COMMENTS ON

JOHN FOX JR.'S

MOST POWERFUL NOVEL

The Heart of the Hills

"It is by long odds the author's strongest book."—Boston Globe.

"Rarely has a more sympathetic character been drawn in fiction than Mavis, the mountain heroine."—N. Y. World.

"The scenic descriptions are full of poetry and color."—Chicago Record-Herald.

V. V.'s EYES

By HENRY SYDNOR HARRISON

V. V.'s EYES

By THE AUTHOR OF "QUEED"

As "Queed" was primarily a book about a man, so "V. V.'s Eyes" is primarily a story about a girl. No hint or synopsis of the story can give a just impression of the book's living quality. Readers of "Queed" can guess something of the whimsical charm of style of the new book, but even they will find a surprise awaiting them in the breadth, depth and intensity of its power.

(Ready in May.) With pictures by R. M. Crosby. $1.35 net. Postage 13 cents.

A New Novel

BY

J. C. Snaith

Author of "Broke of Covenden," "The Principal Girl," etc.

An Affair of State

THE British Government with its back to the wall and organized labor at its throat; the monarch, on a very unstable seat, endeavoring to prevent the complete paralysis of national life which threatens in a universal strike; and the reins of control in the hands of a very clever Duchess and James Draper, once haberdasher, now Prime Minister—these are some of the contending forces in Mr. Snaith's new romance.

THE story is told almost entirely in conversation, brilliant and arresting, and there is not a lengthy description of person or scene in the book. This is a remarkable feat in itself and adds wonderfully to a theme essentially dramatic and eventful. The rise of James Draper from haberdasher to Prime Minister is a spectacular thing and the working of the tremendous forces of a moribund aristocracy bent on crushing him are described by Mr. Snaith in a way that makes one eager to know the outcome.

A Romance of English Life

BY

Mrs. Humphry Ward

Author of "Lady Rose's Daughter," "The Marriage of William Ashe," etc.

The Mating of Lydia

LYDIA PENFOLD is a young and charming artist, drawing in the Lake country for her living, and of a poetic and unworldly temper. Equally poetic and unworldly is the young landowner Lord Tatham who falls deeply in love with her. But his possessions weigh nothing with her, and unconsciously she is drawn away from him by the attraction of the other hero of the book, the young brieflesa barrister Claude Faversham, whom an accident brings upon the scene. The old eccentric and tyrant, Edmund Melrose, who possesses immense wealth and a house filled with treasures of art, gets Faversham into his power, makes him his agent and tool in the oppression of his estates, and bribes him with the hope of a vast inheritance. But in Lydia's eyes, Melrose's wealth is poisoned, and Faversham must choose between her and it. The novel is a study of rival passions as between Faversham and Tatham, and of a conflict of conscience as between Lydia and Faversham; while the sinister and tyrannical figure of Melrose broods over the whole. By what tragedy the problem is loosed the reader must learn. The scene is laid amid the beautiful scenery of the Cumberland fells, where readers of Robert Elsmere, and Fenwick's Career, and Helbeck of Bannisdale will find themselves at home.

The Long Awaited New Farnol Novel

THE AMATEUR GENTLEMAN

By JEFFERY FARNOL

Author of "The Broad Highway," etc.

¶ This eagerly awaited new novel from the pen of the author of "The Broad Highway" (140th thousand) is now ready It possesses the same qualities which gave that book its universal appeal—the charm of style, the fresh, unusual humor, the vigorous yet whimsical characterizations, and promises to be equally popular.

¶ Barnabas Barty, a country-bred youth, son of the retired champion pugilist of England, is left a fortune; he sets forth for London to "become a gentleman," has many adventures, meets people of widely different types, and falls in love with a fascinating heroine.

Many who have read THE AMATEUR GENTLEMAN as it appeared serially pronounced it an even greater work of fiction than "The Broad Highway." THE AMATEUR GENTLEMAN will be widely advertised and is certain to be one of the big successes of the year. Have you ordered a sufficient stock?

NEW SPRING BOOKS OF

READY APRIL FIRST

A NOVEL OF BEAUTY AND HAPPINESS

A MIDSUMMER WOOING

By MARY E. STONE BASSETT

Author of "Judith's Garden" and "The Little Green Door." Illustrated in Color. Decorated Cover. $1.25 net; postpaid, $1.37.

When tired of novels either too strenuous or simply dull, come close to nature with this author, laugh at the delicious humor with which the experiences of a gardening "match-maker" are treated, and reluctantly leave the story, charmed and invigorated. The real heroine is the woman who tells the story. She finds true happiness in her luxuriant garden and successfully deals with the whims of quaint natures until she brings about a happy wedding by means of her summer-house "just large enough for two." The handsomely presented book pleases the eye, and the author's bright wit and cheery optimism delight the mind.

THE FAMILY: An Historical and Social Study

By CHARLES FRANKLIN THWING

President of Western Reserve University

Revised and Enlarged Edition. Price, net, $1.60; postpaid, $1.75.

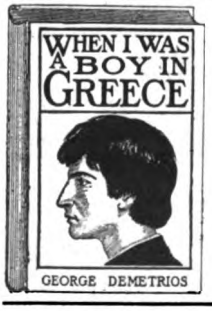
This standard work has been reset, after a thorough revision by the author. Combining that which has stood the test of college classrooms, public libraries, and the homes of intelligent people for twenty-seven years, with the latest deductions from research and statistics, it is easily the best-fitted of all works of its kind to meet the need of information on one of the greatest questions of our time.

A STORY GARDEN—For Little Children

By MAUD LINDSAY

Author of "Mother Stories" and "More Mother Stories." With Introduction by EMILIE POULSSON. Profusely illustrated by F. Liley Young. Square 8vo. Cloth. Price, net, $1.00; postpaid, $1.10.

Equally suitable for home or school is this happily named, happily written "garden of stories" by an expert in the very difficult art of worthily interesting the little ones. There are twenty stories in large, clear type, and each with a full-page picture and smaller decorative illustrations by an excellent artist, and every detail has been planned to delight the eye and mind of our little people and those who love them.



PRUE'S JOLLY WINTER

Sixth Volume of the "Prue Books."

By AMY BROOKS

Illustrated by the Author. $1.00.

Prue Weston, the same lively little Prue that so many already love, enjoys a winter so jolly that more than ever will like to read about it. The story closes with a round of good times and a warm-hearted display of child friendship.

WHEN I WAS A BOY IN GREECE

By GEORGE DEMETRIOS

Fourth Title in "Children of Other Lands Series."

A graphic account is given of the home and school life, and the tasks and pleasures of a real boy in a land strange to us. Naturally, much is said of relations with the Turks and the book has peculiar importance from the Balkan war. The young author was compelled to witness very thrilling scenes before coming to this land of opportunity.

DAVE PORTER AND THE RUNAWAYS: Or Last Days at Oak Hall

Ninth Volume of "Dave Porter Series."

By EDWARD STRATEMEYER

Illustrated by H. Richard Boehm. 12mo. Cloth. Price, $1.25.

This volume tells of the young hero's final term at the Academy which he had attended for several years. Dave Porter will now be more popular than ever with the thousands of readers of this series. There is no call to buy cheap, impossible stuff for boys' reading while there is such a book as this available.

THE SILVER ISLAND OF THE CHIPPEWA

By D. LANGE

Author of "On the Trail of the Sioux." Illustrated by Stanley L. Wood. Net, $1.00; postpaid, $1.10.

Here is a boy's book that amounts to something. It tells of the famous Silver Island in Lake Superior from which it is a fact that ore to the value of $3,089,000 was taken. Much is told of Indian nature and ways by one who thoroughly knows the subject, also of nature and woodcraft along with the accounts of exciting adventures with which the book teems. The young heroes are good to know, and the tone of the story is wholesome throughout.

ST. DUNSTAN BOY SCOUTS

Fourth Volume of "St. Dunstan Series."

By WARREN L. ELDRED

Illustrated by Arthur O. Scott. Large 12mo. Cloth. Price, $1.50.

The boys of the school called "St. Dunstan" in this series, types of the best sort of American youth, good fellows and good students, in most cases, but not too good, become interested in the "Boy Scout" movement and organize a company at the school. There is work for them of a mysterious and puzzling nature, and they acquit themselves well. In conclusion, they have a very enjoyable week's "hike." The story is complete in itself, and especially separated from other titles of the series by the "Boy Scout" feature.

THE RED HOUSE CHILDREN AT GRAFTON

Second Volume of "Little Red House Series."

By AMANDA M. DOUGLAS

Illustrated by Louise Wyman. Price, net, $1.00; postpaid, $1.10.

Eight—yes, eight—bright children, with a kind and loving mother, make up the Red House family, and the change to better circumstances through a new father, and a good one, does not in the least "spoil" them. On the contrary, a new home gives greater opportunities that are sensibly made use of. The story is complete in itself, though the children have already become well known in a previous volume. Miss Douglas has created a permanent addition to the book friends of a wide circle of young readers, and their elders can well enjoy with them the excellent and amusing character drawing.

A New Allan Quatermain Story

By Sir RIDER HAGGARD

CHILD OF STORM

With colored Frontispiece and two other Illustrations. Crown 8vo. $1.35 net. By mail, $1.45.

A weird story of the warlike Zulus while still a reigning nation, in all their superstitious madness and blood-stained grandeur; of the time of the Impis and the witch-finders and the rival princes of the Royal House. The story of the fascinating and wicked Mameena, a kind of Zulu Helen, is here told by Allan Quatermain and is the second of the three romances referred to in the Editor's notes to Sir Rider Haggard's lately published "Marie." Other books in which Allan Quatermain appears are "King Solomon's Mines," "Allan Quatermain," "Allan's Wife" and "Maiwa's Revenge."

"As a literary creation, Allan Quatermain is worthy to rank with any of modern times as a hero and a gentleman. We can hardly hear too much of him."—The Argonaut.

"The series of romances about Allan Quatermain ... will some day be read even as the great series by Dumas is read."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SERMON NOTES

By John Henry Cardinal Newman

Crown 8vo. [Shortly.

Cardinal Newman left behind him two MS. volumes filled with notes or memoranda of Sermons and Catechetical Instructions delivered by him during the years 1847 to 1879. Besides their utility to priests and teachers, these notes should appeal to all lovers of Newman's writings. So characteristic of him are they, in spite of their brevity, that their authorship would be at once recognized even if they appeared without his name.

The Last Century in Europe, 1814-1910

By C. E. M. Hawkesworth

ASSISTANT MASTER AT RUGBY SCHOOL

Crown 8vo. $1.40 net. (Postage 15 cents.)

"It possesses a merit rare in books of the class to which it belongs—it permits itself to be read through, almost at a sitting, in spite of its length, without conscious effort. The arrangement is good; the inter-relation of events not obviously connected with each other is clearly seen and shown. Moreover, there is a very creditable endeavor to indicate the personalities, as well as to record the achievements, of the protagonists in the European drama."—The Times (London).

DEW AND MILDEW:

Semi-Detached Stories From Karabad, India

By Percival Christopher Wren

Crown 8vo. $1.35 net. (Postage 12 cents.)

"Few stories dealing with the hybrid Anglo-Indian civilization, as virile, as compelling, as instinct with life, as these have appeared since 'Plain Tales from the Hills.'"—Boston Transcript.

SOCIOLOGY APPLIED TO PRACTICAL POLITICS

By J. BEATTIE CROZIER, Author of "Civilization and Progress," etc. 8vo. $3.00 net. (Postage 15 cents).

Deals with the burning question of Socialism and with the arguments of its different groups of supporters; with the problem of Free Trade interpreted from the standpoint of the New Political Economy; with Sociological Schemes such as those of Mr. Wells and Herr Houston Chamberlain, as well as with the all-important problems of the Mixing of Races, Race Degeneration, and the like.

THE INDIVIDUAL AND REALITY

An Essay Touching the First Principles of Metaphysics

By EDWARD DOUGLAS FAWCETT. 8vo. $4.25 net. (Postage 16 cents).

"The reader will find much of just discrimination and apt characterization in these well-printed pages with their fresh literary style — . . . much, too, that is suggestive and intellectually stimulating in the way of alert inquiry and up-to-date metaphysical speculation."—Journal of Philosophy, Psychology and Scientific Methods.

BENZIGER BROTHERS' BOOKS
NEW PUBLICATIONS

FOUR BIG SPRING NOVELS

"PAT"

By KATHARINE TYNAN HINKSON. Author of "The Story of Cecilia," etc.
8vo, cloth, net, $1.35

"Pat," Katharine Tynan's latest novel, arouses the reader's interest on the very first page. The story centers about a repentant mother, who has greatly sinned when Pat was a baby, but whose nobility of self-abnegation is equalled by her love for him, from whom her sin had separated her. Pat knows nothing of her existen e; that his mother lives is kept from him by his father's people of the "better class" who force her to hide in distant parts. No one knows where she has gone. Pat finally finds out she is his mother, and starts his quest for her. He does not care for the scorn of "convention"; he loves her and he searches the world for several years, and finally meets her to kiss her faded cheeks and to close her eyes in death. He returns home a changed man. The sweetness of the ensuing love story will charm the reader as much as the preceding pathos will move him.

The Wedding Bells of Glendalough

By MICHAEL EARLS, S.J. Author of "Stuore," etc.
8vo, cloth, net, $1.35

You may be tempted to guess at the leading issues of "The Wedding Bells of Glendalough" when you read its title, but you are sure to guess wrong if you do not read the story. It is true that there are two hearts as one at the very beginning of the story, and that the wedding bells ring at the end; but, even knowing that much of the synopsis, you will not be able to hint at the various lights and shadows throughout the narrative—the crossing of pathways of vital importance, the majestic silence in sacrifice, the hideous cloak of hypocrisy, and a divorce that follows, the awful dream that came true, and at length the "pearl beyond price."

THE MIGHTY FRIEND

A Modern Romance of Labor-Warfare, Country Life, and Love
By PIERRE L'ERMITE. Authorized Translation by John Hannon
8vo, 620 pages, with jacket in 4 colors, 18 illustrations, net, $1.50.
Crowned by the French Academy

A gripping tale of love and war, of plot and counterplot, a big story told in a big way. The question which furnishes the motif for this strong, purposeful drama is one of vital importance to the individual, the family, and the nation.

THEIR CHOICE

By HENRIETTA DANA SKINNER
12mo, cloth, with frontispiece, $1.00
"A love story that is different"

So much has been made of this phrase that in its application to Henrietta Dana Skinner's novelette, "Their Choice," it but faintly indicates the originality of style and plot which makes her story so fascinating a contribution to literature, and one which can not fail to hold the reader in a delightful uncertainty of interest and enjoyment.

NEW FICTION

An Important New Novelist

UNCHARTED SEAS

By ROBERT ADGER BOWEN

The first novel of a new author of serious importance. Mr. Bowen tells us a story of his native Southland, tense in plot, fascinating in the development of character, vigorous in depicting the clash of warring personalities, charming in its setting, zestful in its quiet, insistent good humor. Among his characters he portrays a charming woman of the world, a strong but unyielding woman of an older school, an original and delightful young girl, a heartening young New Yorker and a spoiled darling who, as a type of the egoist, "deserves," as one critic says, "to be placed in the same gallery with the portraits of Sir Willoughby, in George Meredith's 'Egoist' and Miss Sedgwick's Tante." To savour the quality of Mr. Bowen's writing and to learn to know his people is to become acquainted with an American novelist who should go far.

TOMMY TREGENNIS

By MARY E. PHILLIPS

A delightfully fresh and original story of life and adventures in a Cornish fishing village, one of those rare books that appeal to readers of all ages. The publishers believe that they are presenting to the American public a book which can be not unfairly compared in charm and literary art to James Stephens's "Mary, Mary," which a general chorus of critics has declared to be the finest literary achievement among the fiction of 1912.

$1.20 net; by mail, $1.35

"From beginning to end his story is the freshest, most delightful, and most human comedy. I loved his Cornish home and his mother and the London ladies who come to lodge with her (in which visit one sees perhaps the genesis of the tale) and all his relations. Most of all I loved—as who would not?—Tommy himself, that vexatious, changeable, unexpected and wholly fascinating piece of actual childhood. I doubt if the kind has ever been more truthfully and sympathetically studied. Even on the occasion when he entirely spoils the picnic, devised by the ladies for his benefit, and spoils it by conduct actively hateful, you feel his charm. But Tommy is a person to know, not to hear about; very certainly you will be blessed in his acquaintance."—Punch.

READY SHORTLY

The Call of the Cumberlands

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

WHEN CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK writes about the Kentucky mountains, he writes with the pen of truth dipped into the inkwell of knowledge. He knows his people; he knows their thoughts, their beliefs, their legends. This is a story of wide horizons and has the tang and clearness of mountain air; the granite strength of hills that were old before the Alps or the Rockies rose from the sea. There is the power of strong contrast, the warring of elemental forces, and over all the influence of a love as refreshing and fragrant as the breeze that blows across the blooming elder bushes and pink-hearted laurel.

The illustrations are by Douglas Duer and are well worthy of the story they illustrate.

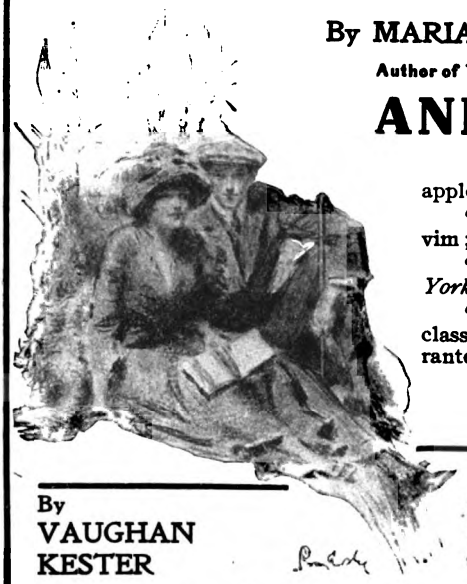
A Song of Sixpence

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

A SONG OF SIXPENCE is the astonishing life-story of a girl who has been raised to believe that physical beauty is a woman's greatest asset in the struggle for existence. The book is notable, not alone because of its tense and dramatic story, but because of the masterly way in which it handles a vital, although not usually discussed, question of the day.

The story of Emmy Moran is the story of a type of woman all too common in the life about us. It presents a remarkable analysis of the mental processes of a woman who utilizes the power of sex attraction to further her ends. In this day and generation, when the question of woman and her training looms so large on the social horizon, this unusual study of woman's life cannot fail to prove of absorbing interest. In the opinion of the publishers, A SONG OF SIXPENCE is a big book, and one which has a big purpose. It handles some vital questions of the day without gloves, but always with sincerity and dignity.



The story is told with such splendid characterization, and in so vivid and human a style, that the reader's interest is held, unflagging, from the very first line. As a literary effort, it is no less noteworthy.

THE SPRING OUTLOOK.

A YEAR ago the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY took occasion to call attention to the extraordinary increase in the number of spring publications, an increase of nearly 50 per cent. over the year previous, and a concurrent depreciation in quality. This year it congratulates the trade upon a reversal in both respects; this year's spring announcement list is perceptibly shorter than last year's, while the general standard of the spring offerings is appreciably higher.

Take FICTION as the class of most selling importance. Almost every publisher has at least one novel which offers just hope of reaching coveted place in the Bookman's "six best"—"V. V.'s Eyes," by the author of "Queed"; Mary Roberts Rinehart's latest; Miss Robin's "My Little Sister"; Harpers, with "The Judgment House"—to name but a few. Some fortunate publishers, like Little, Brown & Company, with their "Amateur Gentleman" and "Happy Warrior," and Doubleday, Page & Company, with "The Flirt" and their new Porter book, seem to be fortunate in the possession of two or three prospective best sellers. This is all as it should be, and the retail trade will undoubtedly respond in due measure—as, indeed, it is already doing.

This latter is the fact, if we trust surface indications. Last year was not distinctly retrogressive for the trade as a whole, but it certainly marked no forward advance. Sales have been better so far this year than in the same period last, and there is an optimism and buoyancy abroad, despite the hesitancy in general business, that augurs well for the year.

One brand-new publishing house, F. G. Browne & Company, is welcomed to a Spring Announcement Number for the first time. Now, if we could only extend as hearty a welcome to two or three—or ten—brand-new, live retail bookstores!

THE only copyright act enacted at the last session of Congress was the Morrison Bill, introduced originally in a previous session, which became law March 2, amending Section 55 of the Copyright Code, a bill approved by the Copyright Office, and printed in its final form in another column. The amendments are to the effect that in the case of a foreign author, the name of his country, or if domiciled in this country, the circumstances of his residence, should be included in the certificate of registration, and also that in the case of a published work the date of publication should be stated. Both these amendments are desirable to make definite the conditions and term of copyright. In the courts, several important points are to be noted. The Macy cases in their latest form were argued before the Supreme Court last week, and an early decision is expected, though this will probably determine only a point of legal practice and not the general principle involved. The briefs in this case so clearly review the Macy litigation, and are of such general interest to the trade, that it has seemed worth while to reprint them practically in full elsewhere in this issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The decision in the newspaper case of Du Puy v. Camden Post-Telegraph, by Judge Rellstab, in the United States District Court of Trenton, N. J., is probably not of importance, as it ignores decisions already made in the higher United States courts, as to the so-called "innocent infringer" and quite ignores the fact that the copyright code preserves common law rights in the case of unpublished material. The decision by Justice Ray in the case of Waltham Watch Co. v. Charles Keene is in process of appeal, and this case should be watched with interest, as the decision seems to involve a new definition of a combination. The text of the decision is not yet before us, so that we cannot speak with definiteness on this point.

THE BRIEFS IN THE "MACY CASE."

PRACTICALLY COMPLETE TEXT OF THE BRIEFS FOR BOTH PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS IN THE "MACY CASE" ARGUED ORALLY LAST WEEK, FRIDAY, BEFORE THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

BRIEF FOR THE PLAINTIFFS IN ERROR.

ISIDOR STRAUS and NATHAN STRAUS, Composing the Firm of R. H. MACY & Co.

STATEMENT.

THIS is a Writ of Error to review a judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of New York entered upon the remittur of the Court of Appeals, the highest Court of said State in which a decision in this cause can be had, which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court entered on the 20th of May, 1909.

THE ACTION.

This action was commenced on the 3rd day of December, 1902, by R. H. Macy & Company, who conduct a large department store in the City of New York, against the defendants, the American Publishers' Association, a New York corporation, which is composed of publishers of about seventy-five per cent. of all books throughout the United States, and many of its members, and against the American Book Sellers' Association, a voluntary unincorporated association, composed of a large majority of all the book sellers at wholesale and at retail throughout the United States, and some of its members, to enjoin them from carrying into effect various contracts, combinations or conspiracies which were entered into in May, 1901, for the purpose of maintaining a fixed price at retail for all copyrighted books, and of controlling the supply and sale of all books, whether copyrighted or uncopyrighted.

The complaint, after describing the character of the parties and the usual course of business prior to 1901, alleges (Par. 15, page 17) that during the year 1900 a number of prominent publishers, including the defendants, for the purpose of securing to themselves an unreasonable and extortionate profit, and with the intent to prevent competition in the sale of books, and for the purpose of establishing and maintaining the prices of all books published by them, or any of them, and all books dealt in by them, or any of them, and preventing competition in the sale thereof, unlawfully, illegally and contrary to the public policy and the statutes of the State of New York and of the United States, and more especially of a certain statute of the United States passed July 2, 1890, and more particularly described as "an Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraint and monopolies," combined and associated themselves together, and as a part of their unlawful combination, formed the American Publishers' Association, a membership corporation, which included amongst its members a large majority of the publishers of all books in the State of New York and throughout the United States. That as a further portion of such unlawful combination, the American Publishers' Association and its various members adopted a Resolution and entered into an agreement, which was intended to prevent the cutting or reducing of prices on copyrighted books published by the members of the association, and the members of the association agreed that all copyrighted books published by any of them, after May 1, 1901, should be published and sold at retail at fixed prices without any discounts (Par. 16). As a further part of such unlawful scheme, it was agreed that such net copyrighted books, and all other books, whether copyrighted or not, or whether published by the members or not, should be sold to those book sellers only who would maintain the retail net price of copyrighted books for one year, and to those jobbers only who would sell books at wholesale to no one known to them to cut the retail price, or whose name would be given to them by the association as one who cut such price; that an office was established for the purpose of carrying out this plan, and that the members agreed to aid in the formation of a book sellers' association which was to co-operate with the American Publishers' Association in carrying out their unlawful scheme of maintaining the net retail price. Thereupon the American Book Sellers' Association was formed, composed of a large majority of book sellers at wholesale and retail throughout the United States, for the avowed purpose of co-operating with the American Publishers' Association in the maintenance of the prices on copyrighted books, and preventing competition in the sale thereof, and in the supply of all books, whether copyrighted or not. Thereupon these two associations and their respective members did in fact co-operate in carrying out their plans, and after the 1st of May, 1901, maintained a combination whereby competition in the State of New York, as well as throughout the States of the United States, in the supply and price of books, had been and was restrained or prevented (Pars. 18 and 19).

Plaintiffs, it is further alleged, were invited to join the combination, but refused, and thereupon the defendants conspired to injure the plaintiffs in their business and sought by threats and intimidation to prevent all persons engaged in publishing, buying or selling books from dealing with the plaintiffs, and by various means interfered with the conduct of plaintiffs' business, and injured the same, and that many dealers and publishers, both belonging to said associations and others, refused to sell books at any price to the plaintiffs by reason of threats and coercion exercised by the defendants. The relief demanded was that the combination be declared unlawful and void, and that the defendants be enjoined from carrying the same into effect, and that the defendants be further enjoined from interfering with the plaintiffs' business, or methods of purchasing books, or from threatening or punishing any persons for dealing with them, and from blacklisting them, and to recover the damages which they may have suffered.

On the 13th of December, 1902, all the defendants excepting Fleming H. Revell Co. and Fowler & Wells and Legatt Brothers, against whom the action had been discontinued, demurred to the complaint on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. These demurrers were sustained at Special Term by Mr. Justice O'Gorman. From the interlocutory judgment entered thereon an appeal was taken to the Appellate Division of the First Department, which reversed the interlocutory judgment by a divided Court, Mr. Justice Ingraham writing the prevailing opinion, and Mr. Justice McLaughlin writing a short dissenting memorandum in which the Presiding Justice Van Brunt concurred, on the ground that the seller of property in respect to which he has a monopoly, can impose any conditions as to its resale he sees fit. Mr. Justice McLaughlin based his dissent on the case of Park & Sons v. The National Druggist Asso., 175 N. Y., 1, in which the manufacturers of certain proprietary articles entered into an agreement, which, in effect, was to maintain the price put upon such articles by the respective manufacturers thereof; he thought that the publishers of copyrighted books had the same right.

The Appellate Division granted permission to appeal to the Court of Appeals and certified to that Court the question whether the complaint stated facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. In February, 1904, that Court affirmed the decision of the Appellate Division (177 N. Y., 473).

Chief Judge Parker, writing the prevailing opinion, said amongst other things, as follows:

"That case and many others were considered recently by the United States Supreme Court in Bement v. National Harrow Co. (186 U. S. 70), Mr. Justice PECKHAM writing. After an examination of the cases which may be said to restrict the exceptions which grow out of a proper exercise of the police power of the State of which Patterson v. Kentucky (97 U. S., 501) is an illustration—he says (186 U. S. 91): 'Notwithstanding these exceptions, the general rule is absolute freedom in the use or sale of rights under the patent laws of the United States. The very object of these laws is monopoly, and the rule is, with few exceptions, that any conditions which are not in their very nature illegal with regard to this kind of property, imposed by the patentee and agreed to by the licensee for the right to manufacture or use or sell the article, will be upheld by the Courts. The fact that the conditions in the contracts keep up the monopoly or fix prices does not render them illegal.'

That reasoning is employed as to patent rights. It is equally applicable to copyrights, the protection of which was perhaps the leading object of the association and agreement attacked in this action. And it points to the principle underlying the decision in the Park & Sons Co. case (175 N. Y. 1), upon which the defendants apparently rest their claim that the judgment of the Appellate Division should be reversed. But there is a feature in this case not to be found in that one, and which requires a different judgment than the one rendered therein—which will now be pointed out.

While the leading object of this association and agreement purports to be to secure to the owner and publisher of copyrighted books that protection which the Federal government permits them to enjoy for the reasons stated by Chief Justice MARSHALL (supra), it does not stop there. It also affects the right of a dealer to sell books not copyrighted at the price he chooses, or to sell at all, if he fails to comply with the rules of the association. A combination creating a monopoly of the sale of books not protected by copyright offends against the law of this State as much as if it related to bluestone (164 N. Y. 401), or to envelopes (166 N. Y. 292), and according to this complaint, which must be accepted as true on this review, such an outcome is not only possible but probable. But it is not of moment whether such a result is probable or not, for the test to be applied is, What may be done under the agreement?"

Judges Gray and Bartlett dissented in separate opinions, the fundamental idea of Judge Gray's opinion being that publishers of a copyrighted book may fix the price at which it is to be resold by virtue of the monopoly granted by the Federal statute, and that what may be lawfully done by each publisher, he may unite with others in doing (page 491).

In accordance with the permission granted by the Court of Appeals, the defendants withdrew their demurrer and on the 16th day of April, 1904, served an answer. A motion was made to make such answers more definite and certain, which was, in part, granted by the Appellate Division (96 A. D., 315), and thereafter an amended answer was served by the American Publishers' Association on the 9th day of September, 1904, and by the American Booksellers' Association on the 12th day of September, 1904. These answers set up as separate defenses (Record, fols. 107-116) that certain amendments were adopted in March, 1904, restricting the operations of the combination to copyrighted books only; that they had under the statutes and Constitution of the United States the sole liberty of printing, publishing and vending such copyrighted books, and that the combination is in all respects in accordance with the laws of the State of New York and of the United States of America (fols. 115 and 123).

A demurrer to these two separate defenses was overruled (103 A. D., 277). Thereafter and on the 13th day of May, 1907, the case came up for trial at a Special Term of the Supreme Court before Mr. Justice Dowling without a jury. Before that case came up for trial, several members of the American Publishers' Association, influenced, no doubt, by the opinions filed by the Judges of the Court of Appeals, which held that the proprietor of a copyright unquestionably had the power to control the ultimate retail price of his book by virtue of the United States copyright laws, brought actions against R. H. Macy & Co. to restrain them from selling books at less than the price fixed by the respective publishers, and maintained by the rules of the two associations. These actions, Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus and Scribner v. Straus, came up for hearing at Circuit and had been decided in favor of the defendants and against the publishers on the ground that the copyright statutes did not have the virtue claimed for them, and neither enabled the owners to fix the ultimate retail price nor empowered them to enter into combinations which as to uncopyrighted books would be condemned by the Federal Anti-Trust Law (139 Fed. Rep., 155). The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit had affirmed these judgments on the ground that the copyright statutes practically secured to the owner the monopoly of reprinting, but that when the proprietor had sold the book he had exercised his monopoly of vending, and thereafter he could not control the retail price by virtue of the copyright statutes.

These decisions were called to the attention of Judge Dowling as conclusive upon the question of the extent of the copyright laws; that the opinions of the Court of Appeals which held a different view were, therefore, inoperative, being based upon an erroneous conception of the Federal laws. Judge Dowling refused to adopt this view (see Record, page 171), and awarded judgment to the plaintiffs for only such damages as they had suffered by reason of the combination covering uncopyrighted books, and refused to give any relief as to copyrighted books. Judge Dowling in his decision (Record, page 113), which was filed on the 19th day of November, 1907, made a number of findings of fact which, in all particulars, sustained the allegations of the complaint, as well as other additional facts which had developed upon the trial, and which will be more fully discussed later on.

From the interlocutory judgment so entered, or at least that portion of it which denied relief as to copyrighted books, the plaintiffs appealed to the Appellate Division. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, the appeal was taken solely for the purpose of correcting the conclusions of law erroneously drawn by the Trial Justice from the findings of fact contained in his decision.

Before that appeal was heard in the Appellate Division, the Bobbs-Merrill and Scribner cases had been affirmed in the United States Supreme Court (210 U. S., 339). The Appellate Division by a divided court affirmed the judgment below, Judge Ingraham and Judge McLaughlin, however, filing dissenting opinions on the ground that the decision in the Bobbs-Merrill and Scribner cases in the United States Supreme Court had placed copyrighted books in the same class, so far as this action was concerned, as uncopyrighted books, and that a combination in restraint of trade in the one was likewise a combination in restraint of trade in the other and equally unlawful (127 A. D., 935). No appeal lying from the order of affirmance as a mater of right, the Appellate Division granted permission to appeal and certified to the Court of Appeals the following question: "Are the plaintiffs under the findings of fact contained in the decision in this case entitled, in so far as copyrighted books are concerned, to the relief demanded in the complaint, or to any relief as against the defendants in this action?"

The hearing in the Court of Appeals took place in November, 1908, and in December of that year the Court affirmed the judgment of the Court below by a divided Court of four to three, Judge Gray writing the prevailing opinion, in which he refused to recede from the position taken by him in his dissenting opinion in the 176th New York. Judge Willard Bartlett dissented on the ground that the view taken by the Court upon the first appeal as to the effect of the copyright laws upon the subject matter of agreements which are attacked as being in restraint of trade, had been rejected in the Bobbs-Merrill case (210 U. S., 339). As the judgment appealed from was interlocutory, no appeal could be taken to this Court, and plaintiffs were compelled to go back to Special Term, secure the entry of a final judgment granting them relief only as to uncopyrighted books and to appeal from that portion of the judgment denying relief as to copyrighted books directly to the Court of Appeals, bringing up for review the interlocutory judgment. The judgment of affirmance in the Court of Appeals (199 N. Y., 548) was duly remitted to the Supreme Court of New York, and the final judgment of that Court, entered on the remittitur, is now brought here for review.

THE FACTS.

There is and can be no dispute whatsoever about the facts in this case. They are all contained so far as this appeal is concerned in the findings of fact filed by Mr. Justice Dowling on the trial of this case at Special Term (page 115 of the Record).

It appears that prior to and since May, 1901, the plaintiffs were conducting a retail department store in the City of New York, under the firm name of R. H. Macy & Company. They conducted amongst others, a department for the retail sale of all kinds of copyrighted and uncopyrighted books, which in volume amounted to $250,000 a year.

The defendant, American Publishers' Association, was organized under the laws of the State of New York on the 31st day of December, 1900. Its members were corporations, firms and individuals engaged in the business of publishing copyrighted and uncopyrighted books and selling the same at wholesale, or retail, or both, throughout the various States and Territories of the United States. Only publishers of books were eligible to membership in the American Publishers' Association. Its membership included all the well-known publishers who did in the neighborhood of seventy-five per cent. of the publishing business, not only in the State of New York, but in the whole United States, both in copyrighted and uncopyrighted books. (Finding 8, page 117).

A number of the members published only copyrighted books, and other members published both copyrighted and uncopyrighted books.

The American Booksellers' Association is a voluntary unincorporated association, composed of wholesale and retail booksellers throughout the States and Territories of the United States. Its membership included a large majority in numbers and in extent of business of both the wholesale and retail book trade, and they all dealt in copyrighted and uncopyrighted books. (Findings 13, 14, page 118).

Prior to May, 1901, books were sold at retail at so-called "list prices," the list price being the published price, from which the retailer allowed various discounts to various people. The plaintiffs had never allowed any discounts, but always sold their books at fixed prices without discount. During the spring and fall of 1900, a number of prominent publishers and booksellers conferred together for the purpose of concerted action looking towards the maintenance of a fixed price by all dealers in copyrighted books. The publishers appointed an Organization Committee which communicated with various booksellers throughout the United States, inviting answers to various questions concerning the establishment of a fixed price, and the prevention of competition in the sale of copyrighted books. (Finding 19, page 118.)

Digitized by Google

On February 13, 1901, the American Publishers' Association adopted a resolution which all its members agreed to observe. That resolution was as follows (Ex. A, page 44):

[Here quoted only in part.]

The following plan to correct some of the evils connected with the cutting of prices on copyrighted books was adopted at the meeting of the American Publishers' Association, held February 13, 1901:

I. That the members of the American Publishers' Association agree that all copyrighted books first issued by them after May 1, 1901, shall be published at net prices, which it is recommended shall be reduced from the prices at which similar books have been issued heretofore: Provided, however, that there shall be exempt from this agreement all school books, such works of fiction (not juveniles) and new editions as the individual publisher may desire, books published by subscription and not through the trade, and such other books as are not sold through the trade.

III THAT the members of the Association agree that such net copyrighted books and all other of their books shall be sold by them to those booksellers only who will maintain the retail price of such net copyrighted books for one year and to those booksellers and jobbers only who will sell their books further to no one known to them to cut such net prices or whose name has been given to them by the Association as one who cuts such prices or who fails to abide by such fair and reasonable rules and regulations as may be established by local associations as hereinafter provided. A dealer or bookseller may be defined as one who makes it a regular part of his business to sell books and carries stock of them for pulic sale.

V. That the Association suggests a discount on net copyrighted books of twenty-five per cent. to dealers as a general discount, leaving the question of discount, however, entirely to the individual publisher.

VI. That after the expiration of a year from the publication of any such net copyrighted book, dealers shall not be held to the above restrictions and may sell such book at a cut price, but if on learning of such action the publisher shall desire to buy back at purchase price the copies then remaining in the dealers' hands, they must be so resold to him on demand.

VIII. That for the purpose of carrying out the above plan the directors of the Association be authorized to establish an office and engage a suitable person as manager, and endeavor to secure from all dealers in books assent to the above conditions of sale. Under the direction of the Board the Manager shall investigate all cases of cutting reported and when directed shall send out notices to the Association, jobbers and the trade, of any persons violating the above provisions.

IX. That it shall be the duty of all members of the Association to report immediately to the said office all cases of the cutting of prices which may come to their knowledge.

X. That the Association through its agents and members aid in the formation of booksellers' associations in the important centres and cities in the United States, the object of which associations shall be to assist the Publishers' Association in maintaining prices on net books as aforesaid, and to establish such lawful rules and regulations respecting the conduct of business in their locality as will tend to secure fair, honorable and uniform methods of business in each important centre or section of the country. That the Association pledge itself to support such local associations by every means in its power in maintaining such lawful rules and regulations as may in this way be agreed to.

The members of the American Booksellers' Association, sympathizing with the avowed object of the publishers, and their association, to sell at a uniform price all copies of the same copyrighted books to be thereafter published by any member of the American Publishers' Association at a net price, adopted a resolution and entered into agreement to cooperate with the Publisher's Association, and its members, in the maintenance of such net price system. That resolution appears as Exhibit H, page 109, and is as follows:

"Reform Resolution No. 1.

Whereas, The American Publishers' Association has adopted a net-price system and entered into an agreement for its maintenance, by which the members of said Association will cut off the supply of all their books, net, copyrighted or otherwise, to any dealer who fails to maintain the net price of any or all books published under the net price system:

1. Now, therefore, be it Resolved, that this, the American Booksellers' Association, in convention assembled, accept the said net price system, with the distinct understanding that it is the intention of the American Publishers' Association to include fiction under the net-price system as rapidly as posible, and

2. Furthermore, be it Resolved, that all members of the American Booksellers' Association shall give to each of the members of the American Publishers' Association, and to all publishers who co-operate with them in the maintenance of the net-price system, our most cordial support; and that to this end we agree not to buy, not to keep in stock nor to offer for sale, after due notification, the books of any publisher who declines to support the net-price system.

3. Furthermore, be it Resolved, that we instruct our secretary promptly to notify all members of this Association that this resolution is applicable and in force with reference to any publisher who shall have made it manifest that he is unwilling to co-operate with this Association, and with the members of the Publishers' Association, in the maintenance of the net-price system.

4. Furthermore, be it Resolved, that the resolution on being ratified by two-thirds of the members of this Association, voting by formal ballot, shall immediately become a law to each and all of the members of this Association; and if it shall appear upon the presentment of any three members of this Association that a member has purchased, put in stock, or offered for sale, the books of a publisher who has been formally denounced, such member shall be expelled from membership in this Association, and all members of this Association shall then and thereafter be restrained from supplying any books to such expelled member at a discount from the usual net price.

5. Furthermore, be it Resolved, that all members of this Association shall be restrained from furnishing any books, at less than the net or usual retail price, to any dealer who shall have been denounced by the Publishers' Association for cutting the price of net books, or for otherwise violating the net-price system, and who shall have been therefore cut off by the members of the Publishers' Association from the supply of their books.

6. Furthermore, be it Resolved, that all members of this Association shall endeavor to keep in stock and push the sale of net books so long as they are reasonably in demand, provided such discount is allowed by the publishers to the dealers as will yield them a living profit; and they shall maintain the net price of the same in accordance with the terms of the publishers' agreement for the maintenance of the net-price system."

Said resolutions were intended to and did in fact go into effect on the 1st day of May, 1901, since which time the two associations, and their respective members, continually combined and co-operated to carry into effect the rules, regulations and agreements adopted. The majority of copyrighted books were since that time published at net prices pursuant to the rules of the Publishers' Association, and a large majority of all dealers throughout the United States, in accordance with such rules, maintained the net prices of copyrighted books, and competition in the price of such copyrighted books at retail was almost completely destroyed thereby. (Finding 25, page 120). The general methods employed by the defendants to effect their purpose were as follows:

The Publishers' Association received information from the Booksellers' Association as to price cutting and from others, but made investigation for itself before taking action; the Booksellers' Association giving advice and suggestions from time to time. The various members gave information of price cutting to their respective associations, and if the fact was established, the American Publishers' Association issued a list to its members and to the large jobbing houses, directing them to discontinue the sale of any books of any kind, whether copyrighted, or uncopyrighted, to the offenders named in such list. Such list was also furnished to the Booksellers' Association and was published in the monthly report of the Secretary, and sent to all the trade, under the heading of "DEALERS WHOSE SUPPLIES HAVE BEEN CUT OFF." The publishers further investigated whether a dealer, or publisher, had sold books of any kind, copyrighted or uncopyrighted, to an offender mentioned in the cut-off list, and if it was found that he had furnished books, whether copyrighted or uncopyrighted, such publisher or dealer was likewise placed upon the cut-off list, which thereafter was sent to members of the Publishers' Association, and also published by the Secretary of the Booksellers, and circulated among the trade at large. In order not only to punish actual price cutting, but to prevent it as far as possible, the publishers circulated a so-called List no. 2, which contained names of dealers who were suspected of intending to sell the so-called price cutters, and its members, and the wholesale jobbers, were warned not to sell any books of any kind, whether copyrighted or uncopyrighted, to any individuals on that list until they had signed an agreement to abide by the rules and regulations of the publishers. (Finding 31, page 121.) That agreement was as follows:

"AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION.

In consideration of discount allowed on books bought from ..... we hereby agree that for one year from date of publication we will not sell net books at less than the retail prices fixed by the respective publishers, nor fiction published after February 1, 1902, at a greater discount than 28 per cent, at retail, as provided by the rules of the American Publishers' Association. We further agree that we will not sell books published by members of the American Publishers' Association to any dealer known to us to cut prices of net books or of new fiction, except as provided above."

The cut-off list was circulated not only amongst the members of the Publishers Association, but also amongst jobbers or wholesale dealers, and any dealer who had been placed on such list was not removed therefrom unless he gave satisfactory assurances that he neither would sell at retail at less than the price fixed, nor sell at wholesale or retail to any person accused of selling at retail at less than that price. The Booksellers' Association and its members actively co-operated with the Publishers' Association and its members in this plan, and its method of execution. In order, moreover, to increase the membership and power of its allied association, the Booksellers' Association invited publishers of copyrighted as well as uncopyrighted books to join the American Publishers' Association and abide by its rules. The Association had entered into a special agreement with the Organization Committee of the Publishers' Association, that they would not buy, nor put in stock, nor offer for sale, the books of any publisher who did not join the American Publishers' Association, and publishers of uncopyrighted books were informed that all booksellers were pledged not to deal in the books of any firm, either copyrighted or uncopyrighted, which did not co-operate with the American Publishers' Association, and that co-operation could only be maintained through joining the Publisher's Association (Findings 38-41, page 123), the object, of course, being to compel publishers of uncopyrighted books to refuse to sell to any dealer who sold copyrighted books in violation of the rules. A number of such publishers did in fact join, and several who did not join were placed on the cut-off list, and the rules of the two associations were strictly applied to them. Under these agreements and the methods by which they were enforced, any retail dealer who failed to maintain the net price, or any wholesale dealer who supplied books to such a dealer, was cut off from his supply of books of any kind, copyrighted or uncopyrighted, and was thereafter unable to buy any kind of books in the ordinary or usual method.

The plaintiffs had been invited to join the Booksellers' Association and had refused to do so. On May 1, 1901, they sold the copyrighted book, "Tarry Thou Until I Come," at $1.24 per volume. The net price was $1.40. The Publishers' Association requested plaintiffs to sell the book at the net price of $1.40. They refused. Thereupon the American Publishers' Association advised its members to discontinue the sale of any and all books to R. H. Macy & Co. The Booksellers issued a cut-off list containing the name of R. H. Macy & Co. Thereafter the plaintiffs in the ordinary course of business were unable to secure a supply of books for the department except in unusual ways. (Findings 44-50, pages 124 et seq). They continued, however, to sell the books of the same character, size and style at the same prices after May 1, 1901, as prior to that time, and in each instance such price was less than the net price fixed by the publishers. Every effort was made to ascertain the source of plaintiffs' book supply, including the employment of spies and detectives, and when persons who sold books to the plaintiffs were discovered, they were placed upon the cut-off lists and were deprived of the power to buy books in the usual course. In some instances dealers who had sold to R. H. Macy & Co. were wholly ruined and driven out of business, and the American Booksellers' Association widely circulated the names of such dealers and warned everybody in the trade, whether a member of either association or not, to avoid the fate of such booksellers. Circulars were also issued not only to the members of the two associations, but to all the members of the trade, warning them not to deal with the plaintiffs. (Findings 55-59, page 125 et seq.)

In 1902, the Publishers' Association, at the request of the booksellers, modified its rules so as to provide that books of fiction could be sold at a restricted price, instead of a net price, meaning thereby that the former list price was re-established with a maximum discount fixed by the associations.

After the decision of the Court of Appeals upon the demurrer, in 1904, the two associations changed their rules and regulations, for the purpose of making them comply with the decision of that Court by excluding uncopyrighted books from their operations. The change thus made, so far as material here, is shown in Paragraph 3 of Exhibit "G," page 105, and is as follows:

"III. That the members of the Association agree that copyrighted books shall be sold by them to those booksellers only who will maintain the retail price of such net copyrighted books for one year, and to those booksellers and jobbers only who will sell their copyrighted books, except at retail, to no one who cuts such net prices.

A dealer or bookseller may be defined as one who makes it a regular part of his business to sell books, and carries stock of them for public sale.

It is further agreed by the members of the Association that they will not themselves offer, nor sell their copyrighted books to any one who offers protected books in combination with a periodical, at less than the trade subscription price of such periodical plus the NET or minimum price of the book."

The change in the American Booksellers' Association agreement is to like effect and is set forth in Paragraph 2 of Exhibit "I," page 111. The two associations, however, continued the same methods of ascertaining the plaintiffs' supply of copyrighted books, of cut-off lists and of circulars to the trade, and the plaintiffs were compelled to purchase copyrighted books in unusual and indirect ways. About the 19th day of January, 1907, the American Publishers' Association again amended its rules (incorporated in the decision of the Court, page 129). It purports in its preamble, to rescind the agreement of 1901, and then adopts a plan which is practically identical with the former resolutions, with the exception of substituting a recommendation to the members of the association to maintain prices instead of an agreement. The adoption of that resolution, however, did not stop the activity of the association nor change its methods. They continued to issue the cut-off lists upon which the name of the plaintiffs had appeared since 1901, and the manager of the association still continued to look after its affairs. Since the amendment was adopted, both the associations and their respective members continued precisely the same course as to the sale of books as had been established prior to the adoption of such resolution.

The Court made the further findings (findings 70-78, both inclusive, page 128):

That the copyrighted books covered by the rules included books, the copyrights of which were not owned by members of the American Publishers' Association.

That the American Publishers' Association was not the owner of and had no interest in the copyrights of any of the books published since the 1st day of May, 1901, or prior thereto.

That the American Booksellers' Association was not the owner of and had no interest in the copyrights of any of the books published since the 1st of May, 1901, or prior thereto.

That the members of the American Booksellers' Association, who were not publishers, were not the owners of, and had no interest in, any of the copyrights to any books published since the 1st of May, 1901, or prior thereto.

That the members of the American Publishers' Association were each sole owners of the copyrights published by them respectively.

That none of the copyrights of the books published were owned by any other firm or individual than the one to which such member belonged.

The Court also found that the members of the two associations resided in, and carried on their business of selling books, in many different States of the Union, and were engaged in the business of purchasing books, copyrighted or uncopyrighted, from each other and from other persons in many States other than the State in which the purchaser resided and did business.

That the rules of the two associations, and the agreements of their respective members, were applied against all publishers and dealers in books throughout the different States of the Union, whether such publishers and dealers were members of either association or not, and whether they purchased books in one State for transportation and delivery in another, or for delivery in the State where purchased. The Court also expressly held that the members of the two associations purchased, distributed and sold since May 1st, 1901, and still purchase, distribute and sell at wholesale and retail, the large majority of all copyrighted and uncopyrighted books dealt in throughout the various States and Territories of the United States.

The Court found as a Conclusion of Law (page 136) that the agreements and combination were intended to and did prevent competition in the supply and price of books, copyrighted and uncopyrighted, from May 1, 1901, to April 1, 1904. That in so far as uncopyrighted books were concerned, they were unlawful restraints of trade and interfered unduly with the price and supply of books and were intended to establish and maintain a monopoly in the production and sale.

He then expressly held that the combination was not unlawful so far as copyrighted books published by members of the association were concerned, and that plaintiffs were not entitled to any relief, either at law or in equity, against the defendants by reason of any acts of the two associations, or their members concerning copyrighted books.

He refused to find as a conclusion of law, although so requested, that the agreements, resolutions or combinations set forth in the complaint, affected interstate commerce, and were unlawful and contrary to the statutes of the United States, and more particularly the Sherman Anti-Trust Law (Paragraph 5, page 162).

He refused to find further that the owners of several separate copyrights are not empowered to enter into any contract or agreement or combination between themselves concerning the supply and price of books published under separate copyrights, which would be unlawful and contrary to the statutes of the United States against combinations in restraint of trade if entered into with reference to the supply of uncopyrighted books (Par. 9, page 163).

He refused to find that the sole owner of a copyright cannot, after publication, and after he has parted with the title to the copyrighted book, continue to control the sale of such books by reason of any statutory right granted to him. That such control, if it can be secured at all, must be obtained by contract, express or implied, in the same manner as for uncopyrighted books, or any other articles of personal property (Par. 10, page 164).

Due exceptions were taken both to those conclusions of law which denied plaintiffs' right to injunction and damages as to copyrighted books, as well as to the refusal to find the conclusions of law submitted by the plaintiffs which declared the combinations and agreements both as to copyrighted and uncopyrighted books, contrary to the Sherman Anti-Trust Act of July 2, 1890.

Under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure (Sec. 998) these exceptions raised the question whether the learned trial Justice had committed error either in the conclusions that he in fact did draw, or in refusing to find those that were submitted to him.

As the sole questions to be raised on appeal were whether on the state of facts as found by the Trial Justice the proper principles of law had been applied, the appeal was taken solely on the judgment roll, and the evidence taken at the trial was not included in the record.

A writ of error was sued out to this Court on the ground that (Assignments of Error, page 209):

I.

Said Court erred in holding that the agreements, resolutions or combinations set forth in the complaint which were entered into by the defendants were not unlawful, illegal and contrary to the statutes of the United States, and more particularly of the statute passed on July 2, 1890, known as "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," in so far as concerns copyrighted books.

II.

Error in deciding that the owners of several separate copyrights are empowered to enter by virtue of the copyright laws into contracts or agreements or combinations between themselves concerning the supply and price of books published under their separate copyrights, which would be unlawful and contrary to the statute of the United States passed on the 2nd day of July, 1890, known as "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies" if such books were not copyrighted.

III.

Error in holding and deciding that the resolutions and agreements purporting to restrict the effect of the combinations, arrangements or contracts to copyrighted books set forth in the complaint were lawful and not contrary to the aforementioned statute of the United States known as "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

IV.

Error in holding and deciding that the owner or proprietor of a copyright can, by virtue of the copyright statutes of the United States, after he has parted with the title to the copyrighted book, continue to control the sale or resale of such books by reason of the copyright law in violation of the aforementioned statute of the United States known as "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

V.

Error in refusing to hold and decide that the plaintiffs in error were entitled to an injunction and to recover damages against the defendants because of the acts of the defendants in carrying out the arrangements, agreements or contracts set forth in the complaint entered into for the purpose of maintaining and fixing the price of copyrighted works throughout the United States of America and of depriving the plaintiffs in error of their power to purchase copyrighted or uncopyrighted books in the ordinary course of business contrary to the aforementioned statute of the United States passed July 2nd, 1890, known as "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

ARGUMENT.

POINT I.

Jurisdiction.

This Court has jurisdiction to review the judgment of the State Court, because that judgment decided against the plaintiffs-in-error a federal right specially set up and asserted by them in the State Courts, which if decided in their favor would have required a contrary judgment.

(a) The federal right thus specially asserted by the plaintiffs-in-error was that the combinations, conspiracies and conduct of the defendants greatly exceeded the lawful extent of the monopoly given to owners of copyrights by the copyright statutes, and in fact constituted an unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce in the supply and price of copyrighted books, and a violation of the prohibitions of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, known as the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Digitized by Google

The rights asserted by plaintiffs-in-error under this statute against the defense of the copyright laws set up by the defendants in the State Court would, if decided in favor of plaintiffs-in-error, have necessarily required a contrary judgment from the State Court.

For a full discussion of the question of jurisdiction the plaintiffs-in-error beg leave to refer to the brief submitted by them in this Court on the 19th day of February, 1912, in opposition to defendants' motion to dismiss or affirm.

The plaintiffs-in-error presented to the trial Court distinct findings of fact and conclusions of law requesting a definite construction of the federal anti-trust act in their favor on the points involved; findings of fact 5, 8, 12, 13, 14, 19, 25, 28, 38, and especially 76, 77, 78 (all found by the Court, Rec., pp. 115 et seq.); conclusions of law V, VII and IX (Rec., pp. 162-163); and duly excepted to the refusal of the trial Court to make these rulings of law; plaintiff's exceptions XV, XVII, XIX, XX (Rec., fols. 501-507), and are strictly within the rule of Seaboard Air Line Ry. Co. v. Duvall, 225 U. S., 477.

(b) In September, 1909, after the final decision of the State Court, the plaintiffs-in-error commenced an action in the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York against the defendants to recover treble damages under the federal anti-trust act. The defendants pleaded the judgment of the State Court in bar as being res adjudicata in favor of the defendants on the question whether the alleged combinations, conspiracies and conduct constituted a violation of the federal anti-trust act, and finally moved for judgment on the pleadings. Judgment in their favor on this plea was ordered by Judge Lacombe, before whom the motion was heard, and from the final judgment thereon entered the plaintiffs appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and on November 7th, 1912, that Court affirmed the judgment (see the opinions of Judge Lacombe and of the C. C. A. in that case submitted herewith).

As the action in the United States Circuit Court proceeded entirely on alleged violations of the federal anti-trust act, the decisions of the Circuit Court and of the Circuit Court of Appeals, sustaining the plea, must necessarily proceed on the ground that the decisions and final judgment of the Court of Appeals and Supreme Court of the State of New York involved a determination that the combination, conspiracies and conduct alleged against the defendants did not constitute a violation of the federal anti-trust act.

The opinions of the Circuit Court and of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the Second Circuit are submitted, therefore, as authorities in support of our argument in the present case that a federal question is involved as above stated. Such opinions are as follows:

MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS.

LACOMBE, C. J.

The pleading and profert of the record in the other suit brings such record properly before this Court to be considered in disposing of this motion.

The case seems to be on all-fours with Clabaugh v. Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, 181 Fed. Rep., 706. Complainants should not have satisfaction in money twice for the same wrong. Their brief practically concedes this so far at least as concerns damages for uncopyrighted books between May 1st, 1901, and April 30th, 1904 (see page 10). If they had recovered in the other suit for the copyrighted books and the judgment been satisfied, they would have to make the same concession as to these. If they failed so to recover, not because they could not make proof of defendant's acts or their own losses, but because the State Courts erred in determining the measure of the monopoly given by the copyright statutes, that error will be corrected by the U. S. Supreme Court on the appeal now pending; and, when it is corrected, they will be able to secure the judgment to which their proofs may entitle them.

Even if I felt some doubt about the soundness of the conclusion expressed in the Clabaugh case, I should nevertheless be inclined to grant this motion, because it disposes in advance of a controlling legal proposition, whose disposition may possibly relieve both sides and the court and the jury from a long trial involving very many items of proof.

Motion granted.

Before

COXE, WARD and NOYES,
Circuit Judges.

WARD, Circuit Judge:

October 1, 1909, the plaintiffs began this action at law to recover treble damages against the defendants under the Federal Anti-Trust Law of July 2, 1890. The complaint alleges that the defendants, publishers of books, combined to organize a membership corporation under the laws of New York called the American Publishers Association, of which they were members and which included a majority of the publishers in the United States and of which the other defendants were the directors for the first year and also officers or directors of defendant corporations; that the purpose of the association was to maintain the retail price of copyrighted books and was to be effected by an agreement of the publishers to sell their books, copyrighted or uncopyrighted, only to such dealers as would maintain the net retail price of the copyrighted books; that in further prosecution of the combination the defendants aided the organization of a voluntary unincorporated association to co-operate with the Publishers Association, called the American Booksellers Association, which included a majority of the booksellers of the United States; that the purpose of this organization was to bring about an agreement between the booksellers to maintain the retail price of the publishers' copyrighted books by refusing to sell the books, copyrighted or uncopyrighted, of any publisher who declined to support the combination and by refusing to sell any books at less than the usual retail price to any bookseller who cut the retail price of the publishers' copyrighted books; that these combinations went into operation May 1, 1901, and have been continued ever since, contrary to the provisions of the Anti-trust Law of July 2, 1890, except that in about the month of March, 1904, the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, in an action brought against the defendants herein and others, having declared the foregoing agreements unlawful so far as uncopyrighted books were concerned, the Publishers Association and Booksellers Association modified the said agreements so as to exclude uncopyrighted books, but continued the same illegal combination and conduct in respect to copyrighted books; that because the plaintiffs refused to conform to the regulations of these combinations they were put on a cut-off list, their business followed up by detectives and their supply of books cut off, to their damage in the sum of $125,000.

The answer of the defendants contained, among other things, a separate defense to the effect that the plaintiffs had brought an action in equity in the Supreme Court of the State of New York December 3, 1902, against them (except defendants Scribner, Scott, Brett, Putnam, Harvey and Appleton, who were trustees and officers of certain of the defendants), for the same cause of action in which the defendants (except the defendants aforesaid) appeared and in which it was so proceeded that the said agreements were held invalid as to uncopyrighted books and valid as to copyrighted books, and an interlocutory judgment was entered May 20, 1909, restraining the defendants from interfering in any way with the purchase by the plaintiffs of uncopyrighted books and directing the plaintiffs' damages to be ascertained by a referee, which judgment was on appeal affirmed by the Appellate Division and by the Court of Appeals. The Referee having subsequently ascertained the damages, final judgment was entered on his report for $3,673.60, damages and costs, from which judgment the plaintiffs appealed to the Court of Appeals, which affirmed the same. Thereupon they took a writ of error to the final judgment of the Supreme Court of New York, which is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States. The said judgment was pleaded as res adjudicata of all the matters complained of and profert of the same was made.

The plaintiffs replied to this defense that the judgment in the State Court was not res adjudicata, and that the cause of action was not the same as that in the action in the State Court because damages in respect to copyrighted books was excluded in the latter action, because the present action was founded on the Federal statute under which the State Court had no jurisdiction, because there were additional parties to this action and because different periods of time were covered.

The defendants having moved for judgment on the pleadings, LACOMBE, J., granted the motion and dismissed the complaint.

The first contention of the plaintiffs in error is that the record of the cause in the State Court should not have been inspected by the Circuit Judge, because it was not annexed as an exhibit to the answer. This is a very technical objection, especially in view of the fact that the action was referred to by the plaintiffs themselves in their complaint. It would prove a cumbersome practice to load such records upon pleadings. By the profert the record became a part of the pleading and the Court was bound to inspect it as such. That is the practice in this Circuit (Bogart v. Hinds, 25 F. R 484), and there is abundant authority elsewhere (American Bell Co. v. Southern Bell Co., 34 F. R. 803; Dickerson v. Green, 53 F. R. 247; Germain v. Wilgus, 67 Fed. Rep. 597; Heaton v. Schlochtmeyer, 69 F. R. 592). No testimony or affidavits were necessary. The pleadings show that the agreements and conduct complained of in the action in the State Court are exactly the same as those complained of in this action except that, as the plaintiffs themselves have alleged in the complaint, the agreements have been modified since the decision in the Court of Appeals in one particular, viz., so as to confine them entirely to copyrighted books. The combination after this modification was in no sense a new combination.

Reliance is also placed upon the refusal of the Supreme Court in Pacific Railroad of Missouri v. Missouri Pacific Railway, 11 U. S. 505, to consider the record of a case referred to in the bill. That was a demurrer to the bill and the Supreme Court said the record of the case mentioned could not be considered because it was not certified to the Supreme Court as part of the record in the Circuit Court. In this case, however, the transcript of the record of the cause in the State Court on writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States is a part of the record and contains the judgment roll of the State Court stipulated by the parties to be correct and certification waived.

The point is also made that the judgment was not res adjudicata because of the appeal pending to the United States Supreme Court. This fact does not suspend the operation of the judgment as an estoppel (Parkhurst v. Bardell, 110 N. Y. 386; Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499; 510; Freeman on Judgments, Ses. 328).

The fact that the judgment in the State Court depended upon the State statutes and that the complaint in this case is founded on the Federal statute which is not within the jurisdiction of the State Court makes no difference. The plaintiffs having the option to go into either Court chose the State Court and their claim having been there adjudicated, cannot be presented the second time to any other Court (Clabaugh v. Southern Wholesale Grocers Association, 181 F. R. 706). It may be admitted that the State Court erroneously held, in view of the subsequent decision of the Supreme Court in Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 339, that the agreements complained of were valid so far as copyrighted books were concerned and that therefore as a matter of law the plaintiffs could not recover damages in respect to them at any time. Still, this question was actually involved in the cause before the State Court which was competent to decide it. Having done so, its judgment is binding in any subsequent action between the same parties for all time (Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351). If the plaintiffs are entitled to any relief they can obtain it only in the original action.

The judgment in the State Court is not prevented from being a bar because of the additional parties in this Court. They were officers of the Publishers Association at its organization, were members and officers of the defendant corporations, took an active part in organizing the combinations complained of, were included in the injunction issued in the State Court action, and were so stated to be in the complaint in this Court. They must be regarded as privy to that action.

The fact that evidence of damages in this action may cover a longer period of time than was covered by the action in the State Court is immaterial. The thing that was adjudicated between the parties in the State Court was that the plaintiffs could recover no damages in respect to copyrighted books at all, be the period of the combination long or short. The decree is affirmed.

The defendants in error claimed in that case that the State Court had no jurisdiction of an action to recover treble damages under Section 7 of the federal act, and that so far as the judgments and opinions of the State Courts affected any rights of these plaintiffs under the federal anti-trust act, such decisions were not binding as authority upon the federal Courts.

POINT II.

The State Court erred in holding that the agreements, resolutions or combinations set forth in the complaint which were entered into by the defendants were not unlawful, illegal and contrary to the statutes of the United States, and more particularly of the statute passed on July 2, 1890, known as "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," in so far as concerns copyrighted books.

The purpose of the American Publishers Association was to secure the establishment of a fixed price for copyrighted books and to prevent competition in the sale thereof (finding 18 et seq., page 118; Exhibit A, page 44, fol. 130; Exhibit I, page 111, fol. 331). It is obvious that the publishers, some of whom conducted wholesale as well as retail stores (finding 5, page 116) desired to remove from their path in the retail trade all dealers who, satisfied with a smaller profit than was deemed proper, might compete with them for business by reducing the retail price. The wholesale price of books was fixed to a large extent by the retail price. Prior to the time of the combination, the list price, less forty per cent., was the ordinary wholesale price of books (finding 48, page 125). After May, 1901, a discount for wholesale purchasers was twenty-five per cent. from the net price fixed, with additional discounts for larger quantities (finding 49, page 125; see also Par. 5, Exhibit A, fol. 134). The first step necessary was, of course, to remove competition amongst themselves in their own and each other's publications, so they agreed to establish a fixed price at retail at which all copyrighted books should be sold after a given date (excepting school books and such works of fiction, not juveniles, and new editions, as the individual publisher might desire, excluding books published by subscription and not through the trade). Each publisher voluntarily deprived himself of the power to reduce or vary the retail price of his own publications for a fixed period. If the distribution of books to the public were only in the hands of the publishers, this agreement would have been sufficient to effect all their purposes, but there exists a large class of retail booksellers who purchase at wholesale, either directly from the publishers, or from the wholesale book jobbers. To secure the publishers against outside attacks, these retailers had to be whipped into line, and for that purpose the publishers held out, on the one hand, the temptation of increased profits by the removal of the competition of department stores (finding 92, fol. 399), and on the other hand, the threat that the prominent publishers of the United States, constituting seventy-five per cent. of all the trade, would refuse dealings of any kind with such retailers unless they agreed that they would maintain the established price, not only on the books purchased by them from each individual publisher, but upon all net books sold by any other publisher, that is to say, if Scribner's Sons sold one of their copyrighted publications to a dealer under an agreement to maintain the price fixed by the publisher, a failure to observe that agreement with Scribners, and a sale of that book at less than the fixed price, would be followed by a refusal of all the publishers, who were members of the association, to sell to such retailer any book of any kind, whether copyrighted or uncopyrighted, whether published in the United States or abroad. The ordinary bookseller would, of course, in the absence of any other source of supply be compelled either to submit to the plan of the publisher for maintaining retail prices or shut up his shop. But other sources of supply were open to the retailer, and these had to be stopped. There are wholesalers in books, who are not publishers, and if books could be bought from them without any restrictions as to price, the retailers obviously had the power to secure the full stock of goods at wholesale without submitting to any irksome restraints.

The publishers' agreement, however, provided (Par. 3, Exhibit A, page 44) that they would sell to those booksellers and jobbers only who would resell their book to no one known to them to cut the net price on books, or whose name was given to them by the association as one who cut such price, or failed to abide by the rules of the association. This completed the chain of control from the publishers directly to the consumer. The wholesale dealer being neither publisher nor retail dealer, had little interest in the maintenance of the retail price, but was dependent upon the publishers for his stock of both copyrighted and uncopyrighted books, and if seventy-five per cent. of the publishers of books throughout the United States agreed not to sell him books of any kind except under certain conditions, he had but little choice. He necessarily either complied or surrendered his business. But even with this control, the publishers were not satisfied. There are publishers who printed only uncopyrighted books. As they had no interest in the destruction of competition in the retail price of copyrighted books, the Publishers Association were not likely to induce them to become members, or abide by its rules. Apparently, however, it was deemed necessary to force them into the combination, and the Booksellers Association, composed of a large majority of the retail booksellers throughout the United States, was called upon to assist in effecting this purpose. Accordingly the Organization Committee of the American Publishers Association entered into a special agreement with the members of the American Booksellers Association whereby the members of the latter association bound themselves "not to buy, not to put in stock, not to offer for sale the books of any publisher who shall have finally declined to cooperate in the maintenance of the net price system by joining the American Publishers Association and issuing books under the net price system (finding 38, fol. 368, page 123; Exhibit H; page 109, fol. 327). Publishers of uncopyrighted books were informed by the booksellers of this special agreement as well as that co-operation with the American Publishers Association could only be maintained through joining the American Publishers Association, "and by abiding by all its rules and regulations" (findings 39-40, page 123). The sole object of securing the allegiance of the publishers of uncopyrighted books to the rules and regulations of the Publishers Association was, and could only be, to prevent them from selling uncopyrighted books to dealers who were known to cut the price on copyrighted books, or who resold them to such dealers.

The nature, purpose, object and effect of these resolutions and agreements were clearly to prevent competition in the retail price of copyrighted books, and one of the means adopted to secure this end was, and was intended to be, the restraint and control of competition in the supply of books of any and all kinds, with the ultimate design of so controlling such supply that the violator of these arbitrary rules could be effectually driven out of business. Nor were these agreements mere empty threats. Spies, boycotts and cut-off lists were in fact resorted to. Some individuals who had supplied the plaintiffs with books were wholly ruined and driven out of business (finding 57, page 126). The names of such persons were held out as a horrible example not only to the members of the two associations but to the trade at large (finding 58). The whole trade was warned against dealings with plaintiffs (finding 59).

When in 1904, the Court of Appeals rendered its decision, the two associations amended their rules so as to make them apply to copyrighted books only. No other change took place, and the defendants claim that the agreements were lawful because they affected only copyrighted books, but their methods were continued in precisely the same way as theretofore.

In 1907, another change was made in the resolutions by which it was pretended that they were rescinded, but they were, in fact, re-enacted with a substitution of the word "recommendation" instead of "agreement." The same cut-off lists, the same boycotts were, however, continued, and the Court expressly found that no change took place in the methods of the two associations. At that time, the combination had been in force for approximately six years. The Court of Appeals had decided that it was lawful. The system had become well established. There was absolutely no change in the methods pursued. It may well be assumed, therefore, that this change from an agreement to a recommendation was a change in form only, and not in substance.

That these agreements restrained trade is obvious.

That they have been entered into by seventy-five per cent: of the publishers of the United States and by a large majority of the booksellers of the United States is established.

That they affected interstate commerce as well as intrastate trade and operated to restrain trade or commerce among the several States necessarily follows from the trial Court's findings of fact.

Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211
Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375.

The Court of Appeals (177 N. Y. 473) in fact held that in so far as uncopyrighted books were concerned, the combination was in restraint of trade, and it requires little reasoning to show that it contains every element of illegality as to effect, intent, and method of execution condemned by this Court in the latest, as well as many of the previous decisions.

In Montague v. Lowry (supra) an association was formed in California by manufacturers of and dealers in tiles, mantels and grates. The result of the agreement, when carried out, was to prevent a dealer in tiles who was not a member of the association from purchasing the same upon any terms from any of the manufacturers who were such members. The non-member dealer was also prevented, by the agreement, from buying tiles of any dealer in San Francisco, who was a member, excepting at a greatly enhanced price. This Court decided that the combination affected interstate commerce and was in restraint of trade.

In that case, the action was brought against the association and its members to recover damages by a dealer who had been injured. It closely resembled the facts in the case at bar, because the purpose was largely the same, that is to say, the maintenance of prices and the control of the supply of tiles.

In Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons (supra), the plaintiff in error was the owner of a secret process for the manufacture of a proprietary medicine. He established a system of a series of contracts, whose purpose was to fix and control the price for all sales, whether at wholesale or at retail. There was in that case no direct charge of a combination or conspiracy in which others took part. Nevertheless this Court held that the agreements with the trade, having been made with most of the jobbers and wholesale druggists and a majority of the retail druggists of the country, and having for their purpose the control of the entire trade, they related directly to interstate as as well as intrastate trade, and operated to restrain trade or commerce among the several States, and that a manufacturer, in the absence of statutory privileges, cannot control prices and destroy competition by agreements which have that for their sole purpose.

The agreements made in that case by the owner of a proprietary article closely resembled the agreements made in the case at bar in so far as price maintenance is concerned and in its provision for the punishment of offenders.

In Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Co. v. United States (supra), the combinations and agreements affected a patented article, but as the purpose of the license in that case largely tended to fix and maintain prices and prevent competition, the Court held that the mere fact that it covered a patented article did not save it from the condemnation of the anti-trust law.

The same condemnation has been passed upon similar combinations by the Courts in most of the States:

POINT III.

The State Court erred in deciding that the owners of several separate copyrights are empowered to enter by virtue of the copyright laws into contracts or agreements or combinations between themselves concerning the supply and price of books published under their separate copyrights, which would be unlawful and contrary to the statute of the United States passed on the 2d day of July, 1890, known as "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies" if such books were not copyrighted.

Even if the owners of copyrights had the powers under the then existing copyright law erroneously assumed by the Court of Appeals, they nevertheless did not possess the power to enter into contracts amongst themselves, or with others, to extend the monopoly of their respective copyrights beyond the limits granted by the Federal statutes.

It is undeniably true that the owner of a patent, or the owner of a copyright, has a special grant of monopoly, but that does not imply that he can, by reason of such grant, make contracts outside of the boundaries of his monopoly which the patent or copyright laws will protect and secure to him. He is not the beneficiary of a general charter of immunity and privilege exempting him from those restraints of law which surround other and less favored citizens. Even when his personal acts are within the rights expressly granted to him, it does not necessarily follow that he may unite with others in doing the same thing, even if it be of common advantage. The vice in such instances would lie in the combination. Whenever he enters into agreements which transcend what is necessary to protect the monopoly which the law confers upon him, his agreements are subject to the same tests and rules of law as when he is dealing in a wholly unprotected article. This was hinted at in the case of Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S., 70, and finally decided by this Court in the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Co. v. United States.

In the Bement case, the Court held that conditions imposed by the patentee and agreed to by the licensee as to the right to manufacture, use or sell, the article would be upheld though the license might contain conditions which otherwise would be condemned. But as was stated at page 94:

"The plain purpose of the provision was to prevent the defendant from infringing upon the rights of others under other patents, and it had no purpose to stifle competition in the harrow business more than the patent provided for, nor was its purpose to prevent the licensee from attempting to make any improvement in harrows."

It then goes on to say:

"It must, therefore, be conceded that the escrow agreement above set forth looks to the signing by the parties mentioned therein of contracts similar to those between the parties to this suit, designated A and B, and containing like conditions relating to the patents respectively owned by such parties. But there is no finding by the Referee that such contracts were in fact entered into by those other parties nor that they constituted a combination of most if not all of the persons or corporations engaged in the business concerning which the agreements between the parties to these were made. If such similar agreements had been made and if, when executed, they would have formed an illegal combination within the Act of Congress, we cannot presume for the purpose of reversing this judgment in the absence of any finding to that effect, that they were made and became effective as an illegal combination. As between these parties we hold that the agreements A and B actually entered into were not a violation of the Act."

In the Standard Sanitary cases (supra), the owner of several patents gave uniform licenses for a certain process of enameling iron ware to a large majority of the manufacturers. It granted to the licensees the right to use the patents upon certain terms and conditions, amongst others, a schedule of prices as established from time to time, to be maintained by all jobbers and dealers. Various penalties were affixed for a breach of the license. Mr. Justice McKenna, delivering the opinion of the Court, says:

"By the agreements, they were combined, subjected themselves to certain rules and regulations among others not to sell their product to the jobbers except at a price fixed not by trade and competitive conditions but by the decision of the committee of six of their number, and zones of sales were created. And the jobbers were brought into the combination and made its subjection complete and its purpose successful. Unless they entered the combination they could obtain no enameled ware from any manufacturer who was in the combination, and the condition of entry was not to resell to plumbers except at the prices determined by the manufacturers."

He further says:

"The agreements clearly, therefore, transcended what was necessary to protect the use of the patent or the monopoly which the law conferred upon it," and after distinguishing the Bement case and the case of Henry v. A. B. Dick Co. (224 U. S., 1), he says:

"The agreements in the case at bar combined the manufacturers and jobbers of enameled ware very much to the same purpose and results as the association of manufacturers and dealers in tiles combined them in Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S., 38, which combination was condemned by this court as offending the Sherman Law. The added element of the patent in the case at bar cannot confer immunity from a like condemnation, for the reasons we have stated. And this we say without entering into the consideration of the distinction of rights for which the Government contends between a patented article and a patented tool used in the manufacture of an unpatented article. Rights conferred by patents are indeed very definite and extensive, but they do not give any more than other rights a universal license against positive prohibitions. The Sherman Law is a limitation of rights, rights which may be pushed to evil consequences and therefore restrained."

In that case, the patentee attempted to evade the effect of the Sherman Law by licensing the various manufacturers who constituted the majority of the trade. That license agreement did, in fact, give to the licensee rights which theretofore they did not enjoy, but the condition of enjoyment was practically the maintenance of uniform prices.

In the case at bar, there is no pretense of any license agreement. It is expressly found by the Trial Court that each owner was the independent possessor of the copyright of books which he published and that none of the other publishers had any interest therein. The booksellers and the wholesale dealers had absolutely no interest in the copyright.

The agreements further controlled the supply and price of the books published under copyrights owned by the members of the American Publishers Association, and also the supply, in the first instance, of all books whether copyrighted or not, and after 1904, of all copyrighted books whether published by the members of the Publishers Association, or not.

As in similar cases, the defendants claimed that the establishment and maintenance of prices, and the other regulations which they adopted were beneficial to the trade and acquiesced in by a large majority of the trade. But as was said by Mr. Justice Hughes, in

Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons:

"The agreements or combinations between dealers having for their sole purpose the destruction of competition and the fixing of prices are injurious to the public interests and void. They are not saved by the advantages which the participants expect to derive from the enhanced price to the consumer."

The case of Henry v. Dick (supra), as has been pointed out by Mr. Justice McKenna in Standard Sanitary cases, is not antagonistic to the views therein expressed. In that case, in construing the patent law, this Court decided that the owner of a patent had a right to control its use, and that when he exercised that right within the field of his express monopoly, he could restrain another or different use by virtue of the patent law. This, however, cannot be twisted into an authority for the proposition that the owner of a patent can combine with the owners of all other similar patents to protect the use of his machine or of those of other patentees for the purpose of dominating or controlling an entire trade, and of excluding from such trade and destroying the business of any person who ventured to violate the license agreement of one, or several of the patentees who are parties to such agreement. If any portion of the opinion of Mr. Justice Lurton in the Dick case can be construed to uphold a different view, it was not necessary to the decision on the facts then before him, was clearly obiter, and was certainly not adopted in the Standard Sanitary cases.

POINT IV.

The Court of Appeals erroneously held that the owner of a copyright has the power, by virtue of the copyright statutes, to control the ultimate retail price, and erred in deciding that the owner or proprietor of a copyright can, by virtue of the copyright statutes of the United States, after he has parted with the title to the copyrighted book, continue to control the sale or resale of such books by virtue of the copyright law in violation of the aforementioned statute of the United States known as "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

The vice of the agreements in question here is the fact that the owners of the separate copyrights have combined to fix and maintain the price on their respective books and to control the supply thereof. The decision of the Court of Appeals assumed that inasmuch as the owner of a patent had the right to control its use, that the owner of a copyright could, by analogy, control the price and that if he so could control the price he could lawfully unite with others in doing so. As shown in the previous argument, even assuming that the owner of a copyright could control the ultimate retail price, he might not have the right to unite with others in doing what he could lawfully do himself.

The Court, however, wholly misinterpreted the scope and extent of the copyright laws and despite the decision in the Bobbs-Merrill and Scribner cases, 210 U. S., 339, the Court refused to change its opinion, because "The question of the extent to which the rights conferred by the copyright statutes may be protected by contract is still an open one in the United States Supreme Court. The case of Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus (210 U. S., 339,) differs in the important fact that there was no such contract as was in question here. . . . Until the United States Supreme Court has pronounced differently upon such an agreement concerning the future sales of copyrighted books as is now in question, our former decision stands as the law of the case; however, it may be argued that in some other action the decision of the federal tribunal warrants a different inference as to the interpretation to be given to the copyright statute" (193 N. Y., 498).

Judge Willard Bartlett, writing the dissenting opinion, states what plaintiffs believe is the correct rule that should have been adopted by the Court:

"The view which this Court adopted upon the first appeal in this case as to the effect of the copyright laws of the United States upon the subject matter of the agreements which are attacked as being in restraint of trade has, it seems to me, been quite distinctly rejected in a subsequent decision by the Supreme Court of the United States in a litigation to which the plaintiffs here were parties (Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S., 339). On the previous appeal in this court, Chief Judge PARKER after quoting the language used by the United States Supreme Court in Bement v. National Harrow Co. (186 U. S., 70), to the effect that the courts would uphold any conditions not in their very nature illegal in regard to patents, imposed by the patentee and agreed to by the licensee, for the right to manufacture or use or sell the article, went on to say that such reasoning, although employed in the case cited in respect to patent rights, was 'equally applicable to copyrights.' On the other hand, Mr. Justice DAY, writing for the Supreme Court of the United States in the Bobbs-Merrill case, expressly declares that 'there are differences between the patent and copyright statutes in the extent of the protection granted by them,' and cites with approval an opinion by Circuit Judge LURTON, in which he said that these differences are so wide 'that the cases which relate to the one subject are not controlling as to the other' (210 U. S., on p. 246). In the Bobbs-Merrill case the owner of a copyrighted book inserted below the copyright notice in each copy, the following statement: 'The price of this book at retail is $1.00 net. No dealer is licensed to sell it at less price and a sale at a less price will be treated as an infringement of the copyright.' The question presented for decision was whether the sole right to vend given to the owner of the copyright by the Federal Law was such as to 'secure to the owner of the copyright the right after a sale of the book to a purchaser to restrict the future sale of the book at retail to the right to sell it at a certain price per copy because of a notice in the book that a sale at a different price will be treated as an infringement, which notice has been brought home to the one undertaking to sell for less than the named sum?' The Court answered this question in the negative, holding in substance that while the copyright laws secure to the owner of a copyright the right of multiplication and the right to vend copies, he may not qualify the title of a future purchaser by means of such a notice as has been quoted. The fair import of the decision is that the owner of a copyright obtains nothing as such under the Federal law, but the exclusive right to publish and multiply copies of the protected work and vend the same. Where he sells copies, the contracts of sale are unaffected by the copyright statutes, but are subject to the same rules of law as those which apply to contracts for the sale of other personal property.

If I understand the decision in the Bobbs-Merrill case correctly, the fact that the agreements in question here related to copyrighted books could not operate to make those agreements valid if they were otherwise in violation of the statutes forbidding contracts in restraint of trade. In other words, a copyright does not carry to the owner thereof any more right to enter into a contract in restraint of trade in the copyrighted book than he has to enter into a contract which will restrain trade in a book which is not copyrighted."

In any event, the rule earnestly contended for by the plaintiffs since the commencement of this action that neither the patent nor the copyright law conferred any immunity from condemnation of agreements which go beyond the precise terms of the monopoly granted or what is necessarily implied, has been finally established in the Standard Sanitary case.

CONCLUSION.

For the foregoing reasons, it is respectfully submitted that the judgment of the State Court be reversed so far as appealed from and the case remanded.

Respectfully submitted,

BRIEF FOR THE DEFENDANTS-IN-ERROR.

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION, AMERICAN BOOKSELLERS ASSOCIATION, ET AL.

STATEMENT.

ON Monday, October 19th, 1911, the defendants in error moved to dismiss the writ of error or to affirm the judgment. The Court directed the motion to stand over until the argument on the writ of error.

Counsel for the defendants before making general argument of the case respectfully submit a point in reply to the plaintiff's "Points in opposition to motion to dismiss Writ of Error."

[Four such points are cited; the brief then proceeds to the]

STATEMENT OF ARGUMENT AND POINTS ON WRIT OF ERROR.

The five assignments allege in different language the same error, namely; that the court erred in sustaining as against the Federal anti-trust act, the right, privilege or immunity claimed by the defendants under the copyright act.

Manifestly such an error might have arisen either from an erroneous construction of the copyright law or from not giving due weight to a claim of right made by the plaintiffs under the Federal anti-trust act.

As has been pointed out in our brief on the motion to dismiss, the construction of the copyright act was from the beginning to the end of the litigation in the state courts the chief subject of controversy and, so far as the appeal from the judgments was concerned, the sole matter passed upon and decided. The decision as to the effect of the copyright law cannot be re-examined, because it was in favor of the right, privilege and immunity claimed by the defendants under the copyright law; our contention in this regard, made at page 14 of our former brief, is conceded by the plaintiffs in error to be "unquestionably correct as a statement of the general rule." (Brief of plaintiffs in error on motion to dismiss, p. 26.) And no question raised by the assignments of error is pointed out as an exception to the general rule.

The sole question in this Court, therefore, is whether the state court erred in deciding against a claim by the plaintiffs of a right, privilege or immunity under the Sherman Act. We have pointed out that the state appellate courts did not, in fact, consider such a claim, as appears from the opinions, and that the plaintiffs did not intend to present such a claim, as appears from their brief (supra, pp. 3-5). We have argued that no such claim was "specially" made in the trial court or, by adequate specification, presented to the appellate courts, (brief on motion, pp. 15-20) and that there is nothing in the case to excuse the lack of adequate specification (supra, pp. 6-9).

If, nevertheless, we assume that the plaintiffs in error made such a claim as is set up in the assignments of error, and further assume that the state courts decided against the claim, such a decision was not erroneous —first, because the state court was not bound to apply the Federal anti-trust statute in this case; second, because the plaintiffs have come into a court of equity with unclean hands and besides are seeking to maintain an action when it is manifest that they have suffered no actionable damage; third, because the Federal act to protect trade against unlawful monopolies clearly does not prohibit reasonable enjoyment of the copyright monopoly, and fourth, because the combination of the defendants was not unlawful under the Federal anti-trust act.

FIRST POINT.

The omission to apply the Federal Anti-Trust Act was not error.

(a) because the act is not applicable in such an action as this when brought in a state court;

(b) because the act is not applicable in an equity suit brought for an injunction unless the suit is brought by the Attorney-General;

(c) because the Federal and state anti-monopoly statutes cannot be applied to the same subject matter in the same action; and

(d) because the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action under the Federal anti-trust act or to show that the agreement or combination was in violation of that act.

SECOND POINT.

It was not error to dismiss the complaint as to copyrighted books because (a) The plaintiffs have not come into a court of equity with clean hands, and (b) It appears that the plaintiffs have suffered no actionable damage from the acts complained of.

A.

The plaintiff does not come into the court of equity with clean hands.

"A court of equity will leave to his remedy at law —will refuse to interfere to grant relief to—one who in the matter or transaction concerning which he seeks its aid, has been wanting in good faith, honesty or righteous dealing. While in a proper case it acts upon the conscience of a defendant to compel him to do that which is just and right, it repels from its precincts remediless the complainant who has been guilty of bad faith, fraud or any unconscionable act in the transaction which forms the basis of his suit."

Fetridge v. Wells, 4 Abb. Pr. 144.
Toledo Computing Scale Co. v. Computing Scale Co., C. C. A. 142 F. 919.

This suit arises from the defendants' refusal to supply their copyrighted books to Macy & Company. It is not pretended that any defendant as an individual was bound by contract or otherwise to sell to Macy & Company. Their alleged rights rest solely upon the combination of the defendants. That combination was formed and continued, so far as Macy & Company were concerned, solely by reason of their course of dealing with the defendants' copyrighted books within the first year after publication. But for that course of dealing, the combination would never have affected Macy & Company. If that course of dealing ended the combination ceased to affect them.

Record, Findings 43-47, 33, pp. 124, 122.

Macy's course of dealing with the publishers' copyrighted books was the origin and basis of the controversy. It follows that if that course of dealing—the use made by Macy & Company of the defendants' copyrighted books within the first year after publication—was wanting in good faith, honesty or righteous dealing, if it was unconscionable, the maxim applies and the plaintiffs cannot maintain this suit in equity. Without repeating what is said elsewhere, it may be here pointed out that the use made by Macy & Company of new copyrighted books was monopolistic, injurious to the publishers and the booksellers and fraudulent as regards the public.

(a) The practice of Macy & Company is monopolistic.

They claim to sell all articles "at a lower figure than the same article can be obtained anywhere else" and books in particular "at a cheaper price than at other retail book stores." (Record, pp. 15, 134.) As only one dealer can sell cheaper than all other dealers, this is equivalent to saying that they occupy the position sought by the monopolist of having overcome competition.

In effect it is asserted that Macy & Company have attempted to monopolize and have monopolized a part of trade or commerce.

To prove their assertion they sell current magazines and new copyrighted books cheaper than any other dealer and, if necessary to meet competition, at less than the wholesale price at which they purchase (p. 134). That is to say, they use their "power to crush existing and threatened competition by so slaughtering prices for a time as to ruin all who are not parties to the combination."

1 Eddy on Combinations, Sec. 329.

This shows

"an attempt and purpose to suppress a competitor by underselling him at a price so unprofitable as to drive him out of business."

which is a "badge of monopoly."

Message of the President to Congress, Dec. 5, 1911.

(b) Such dealings even by a producer selling goods of his own manufacture may be "a badge of monopoly," but Macy & Company dealt, not with books of their own manufacture, but with books manufactured by the defendants, and the result not only tended to monopoly, but was injurious both to the publishers and their customers, the booksellers.

This appears from the record, (Finding 92, p. 133) from the unanimous desire of publishers and dealers to establish a fixed price system and from the allegations of the complaint (Twelfth to Fourteenth, Sixteenth, Twenty-third, pp. 16, 17, 21), and it appears from all the facts found relating to the trade of Macy & Company. A bookseller cannot compete in the sale of magazines or new copyrighted books with a dealer who sells them at less than cost. The publisher loses by the narrowing of his market, by the difficulty of selling to the trade books which Macy & Company advertise at prices with which dealers cannot compete and by the injury to his own retail business.

As was said by Judge Edward T. Bartlett in this case:

"The result is a large number of the retail dealers in the various kinds of articles thus undersold are driven out of business, many of them at a time of life when they are unable to reinstate themselves in some other calling.

It also results in great damage to manufacturers, producers and wholesale dealers who have been driven into insolvency.

It is, of course, true that the proprietors of department stores have the legal right to offer to the public goods of any kind at prices below production, or indeed, may donate them to their customers.

It is, however, equally true that the manufacturers, producers and wholesale dealers may say to the men whose policy is thus carrying ruin and destruction to their business and that of their customers, that if you persist in this disastrous cutting of rates we will sever all business connections absolutely. These are mutual and inherent rights, in the nature of things, so long as self-defense and the privilege to exist survive among men."

Straus v. Am. Pub. Assn., 177 N. Y., 473.

This dissenting opinion was rendered upon demurrer to the complaint when the facts as to the plaintiffs' dealings had not yet been proved, and these dealings were not considered in the opinion of Parker, C. J. If the defendants had appealed from the final judgment as to uncopyrighted books they might well have succeeded on this ground, and they can now rely upon it for affirmance as to copyrighted books under the rule laid down in the opinion of the court in Park Sons Co. v. National Druggists' Assn.

"I am not here going to question the right of the big fish to eat up the little fish, the big storekeeper to undersell and drive out of business the little storekeeper, but I do believe that the little fellows have the right to protect their lives and their business, and if they can by force of argument and persuasion induce manufacturers to establish a uniform price for fixed quantities, so that they can purchase as cheaply as the great merchants, and thus compete with them in the retail trade, they have the right to do so, and that no court of equity ought to interfere and restrain them from the exercise of this privilege."

Park & Sons Co. v. Nat. Druggists' Assn., 175 N. Y., 1, 14.

This is the rule of law laid down by the

New York Court of Appeals and therefore controlling in this suit brought in a New York court.

(c) The dealings of Macy & Company with copyrighted books were also a fraud on the public.

All the copies of an edition of a newly published copyrighted book are equivalent, and so are all the copies of a current magazine.

A copy bought at Macy's is just as desirable and valuable as a copy bought elsewhere. Hence, if Macy & Company undersell all competitors in magazines of the current month, and new copyrighted books, they establish beyond cavil a standard of cheapness. To accomplish this they advertise and sell these articles at lower prices than others receive, and they make such sales even if the dealings are wholly unprofitable. These bargains are not of remnants or shop-worn or unseasonable articles or goods which for any reason have been marked down in price, but they are in new goods bought from month to month or day to day for the express purpose of being sold at less than cost. This practice, so foreign to ordinary commercial usage, continues because "Books are merely a peg on which to hang a general story"—the false story that other articles are sold more cheaply than books.

This false story is told in many forms. This is one of them:

"Read this Everybody.

"Competitors, when continually undersold, indulge in unfair and absurd claims. The readiest subterfuge is an attempt to disparage our qualities. When confronted with the fact that our prices are lower than theirs, they invariably try to explain the beat by attacking the character of our goods. How about books? We use them to illustrate because you know books. They silence criticism. Our rates range from 10 cents to $1.50 less than others ask for the same books. We save you much more on other lines."

Record, p. 135.

Before these facts came into the case Judge Edward I. Bartlett wrote:

"As an illustration, a dry goods establishment, engaged in selling a vast number of articles legitimately related to its business, concludes, in order to promote its principal trade, to offer for sale books, furniture, druggists' sundries and numerous other articles that need not be mentioned, at cut prices, representing only the cost of production and oftentimes far below it. The inevitable effect of this policy is to draw a large number of people to these establishments, and in the final result the dealer makes good his losses in the outside trade by the prices he obtains in his legitimate business.

It may be fairly assumed that the general business is conducted at a profit."

177 N. Y., 493.

The purpose of this action is to compel the publishers to allow their new copyrighted books to be sold by Macy & Company to the public at less than cost as a basis for advertising as follows:

"on other lines—the ones more difficult for inexperienced persons to judge of qualities—the price differences in our favor are much greater."

Record, p. 134.

In trade mark cases it is held that

"the plaintiff should not in his trade mark, or in his advertisements or business, be himself guilty of any false or misleading representation; that if the plaintiff makes any material false statement in connection with the property which he seeks to protect he loses the right to claim the assistance of a court of equity."

Worden v. California Fig Syrup Co., 187 U. S., 516, 528, 530.

"Those who come into a court of equity seeking equity must come with pure hands and a pure conscience. If they claim relief against the fraud of others, they must be free themselves from the imputation.

If the sales made by the plaintiff and his firm are effected, or sought to be, by misrepresentation and falsehood, they cannot be listened to when they complain that by the fraudulent rivalry of others their own fraudulent profits are diminished." (Duer, J.).

Fetridge v. Wells, 13 How. Pr., 388.

It is set up as a defense that the plaintiffs cannot maintain this action in equity (p. 36), but the defense is available even if not pleaded.

Uri v. Hirsch, 123 F., 568, 578.

B.

The plaintiffs were not damaged by the defendants' acts.

The damage is the cause of action and the combination mere matter of aggravation.

Verplanck v. Van Buren, 76 N. Y., 247, 259, 260.

"Only actual damages, established by proof of facts from which they may be rationally inferred with reasonable certainty, are recoverable."

Central Coal & Coke Co. v. Hartman, C. C. A., 111 F., 96.

There must be pecuniary loss.

The Conqueror, 166 U. S., 110.

"By consequences which the plaintiff, acting as prudent men generally do, can avoid, he is not legally damaged. Such consequences can hardly be the direct or natural consequence of the defendants' wrong, since it is at the plaintiff's option to suffer them."

Sedgwick on Damages, Sec. 202.

The controversy between Macy & Company and the publishers was whether the plaintiffs should make an ordinary profit or a profit smaller than is usual in the trade. The defendants wished the plaintiffs to make a profit by selling at the market price. The plaintiffs preferred to make a smaller profit, or a loss, by selling at a lower price than any other dealer.

Macy & Company could at all times have purchased the defendants' copyrighted books on the most favorable terms to sell at market prices. Finding 33, Record, p. 122, 45, 46, 47, p. 124.

By so doing they would have increased their profits. To obtain books from the defendants they were not obliged to make any unlawful agreement or to join any association; indeed, they were not eligible to membership in the American Publishers' Association. The only condition imposed was that in selling defendants' copyrighted books they should for one year after publication make a larger profit than they were accustomed to make, being the profit universally made by retail dealers. The acts of the defendants did not, therefore, cause pecuniary loss to the plaintiffs, and, if wrongful, at most constituted injuria sine damno.

Digitized by Google

If the plaintiffs sustained loss it was a consequence of their own wilful act. This more fully appears from the specific findings made by the Court to show the nature of plaintiffs' dealings in copyrighted books. The plaintiffs, for twenty-two years, sold the defendants' magazines so much below the market price that the actual loss, in addition to expenses of sale, was three cents on each copy. Record, p. 134.

Obviously the plaintiffs suffered no legal damages from the interruption of this business, but, on the contrary, received pecuniary advantage.

Authors & Newspaper Assn. v. O'Gorman Co., 147 F., 616, 621.

So the plaintiffs to meet competition sold new copyrighted books at retail at less than the wholesale price which they paid therefor. Record, p. 134. Obviously the plaintiffs were pecuniarily benefited by the prevention of such dealings.

The typical transactions and the one which caused the defendants to refuse to make further sales to the plaintiffs is shown in Findings 43-47, at page 124. The copyrighted book "Tarry Thou Till I Come" was published by the Funk & Wagnalls Company to be sold at retail at the net price of $1.40. The plaintiffs sold it at $1.24, and refused a request to sell at $1.40. It is not suggested that they would have met with any difficulty in selling at the net price. They preferred to sell at a price lower than the market price which they could obtain as all other dealers did. They refused to take the books unless they could sell at 16 cents per volume less than the market price. The purpose and the natural effect of the defendants' act was to increase the plaintiffs' profit. The plaintiffs could suffer loss only by wilful refusal to deal with the defendants on the terms offered by them. Even if the defendants' act was wrongful the plaintiffs thereby suffered no pecuniary damage.

There is no allegation or proof of special damage and by the general rules of law a refusal to sell goods except upon terms which increase the vendee's profit is not actionable. A plaintiff cannot recover for losses preyented or gains increased. Courts give no remedies for self-imposed injuries. The suitor to whom compensation is awarded for injury to business is the normal man, who trades to make profit and avoid loss; who sells for the best price obtainable; who conducts his business according to the rules which commonly prevail among prudent people. A man cannot recover in tort for injury resulting from "his abnormal and peculiar mode of doing his business."

1 Sedgwick on Damages, Sec. 143.

Even if the defendants had broken a contract to furnish the books, the plaintiffs could not recover damages caused by their refusal to accept the goods when offered on reasonable conditions—and conditions willingly observed by the whole trade are presumptively reasonable.

If, under Hadley v. Baxendale, a vendee's notice of the use which he intends for the goods binds the vendor, it must equally bind the vendee himself. If a bookseller asks for "Tarry Thou Till I Come," to be offered for sale by him at a certain profit, and the publisher tenders the book on the same terms on which it is offered to all other such dealers, which will give the bookseller a profit on each book greater by sixteen cents, the bookseller suffers no pecuniary injury. He must accept the offer or forego his action against the vendor for damages.

"Of course he was not obliged to buy that stock, but the opportunity to buy it served to fix and limit the damage he suffered by reason of defendant's refusal to deliver."

Joseph v. Sulzberger, 136 App. Div., 499, 508.

There is here no claim or suggestion of special damage.

"The law, in confining the compensation to the pecuniary loss, does not run along the lines of the imaginary and the possible, but rather along the lines of the actual and the probable, and therefore the reasonable expectation must be made to appear by the evidence. Conjecture, speculation and fancy cannot supply the absence of evidence or avoid the effect of evidence which is presented."

Swift & Co. v. Johnson, C. C. A., 138 F., 867, 873.

THIRD POINT.

Notwithstanding the Federal anti-trust act it is lawful for a publisher when selling, at wholesale, books copyrighted by him, to fix, by agreement with the purchasing bookseller, the retail price at which such copyrighted books shall be sold during a period of one year.

The rules of the American Publishers' Association here in question which were in force at the time of filing the answers were as follows:

"I.—That the members of the American Publishers' Association agree that all copyrighted books first issued by them after May 1, 1901, shall be published at net prices, which it is recommended shall be reduced from the prices at which similar books have been issued heretofore; provided, however, that there shall be exempt from this agreement all school books, books published by subscription and not through the trade, such other books as are not sold through the trade; also at the desire of the individual publisher, any new edition, any work of fiction or any juvenile.

"II.—It is recommended that the retail prices of a net book, marked NET, be printed on a paper wrapper covering the book.

"III.—That the members of the Association agree that copyrighted books shall be sold by them to those booksellers only who will maintain the retail price of such net copyrighted books for one year, and to those booksellers and jobbers only who will sell their copyrighted books, except at retail, to no one who cuts such net prices" (pp. 39, 40, 41, 66, 67, 119).

Rule IV. provided that works of fiction might be sold at retail for a discount not exceeding 28 per cent. from the fixed price. This is a mere modification of the net price rule and does not require separate discussion.

Without doubt a patentee may, when selling his patented article, impose by agreement with the vendee a restriction as to the price at which the article may be thereafter sold.

"Notwithstanding these exceptions, the general rule is absolute freedom in the use or sale of rights under the patent laws of the United States. The very object of these laws is monopoly, and the rule is, with few exceptions, that any conditions, which are not in their very nature illegal with regard to this kind of property, imposed by the patentee and agreed to by the licensee for the right to manufacture or use or sell the article, will be upheld by the courts. The fact that the conditions in the contracts keep up the monopoly or fix prices does not render them illegal. . . .

"But the statute [the Sherman Act] clearly does not refer to that kind of a restraint of interstate commerce which may arise from reasonable and legal conditions imposed upon the assignee or licensee of a patent by the owner thereof, restricting the terms upon which the article may be used and the price to be demanded therefor. . . .

"The owner of a patented article can, of course, charge such price as he may choose, and the owner of a patent may assign it or sell the right to manufacture and sell the article patented upon the condition that the asignee shall charge a certain amount for such article."

and cases cited at page 38, 224 United States Reports.

The rule applies also in copyrighted cases.

In the case at bar Chief Justice Parker, speaking for the New York Court of Appeals, quoted the sentence first above copied from Bement v. National Harrow Co., and continued:

"That reasoning is employed as to patent rights. It is equally applicable to copyrights, the protection of which was perhaps the leading object of the Association and agreement attached in this action" (Straus v. Am. Pub. Asso., 177 N. Y., 473, 477; opinion of Gray, J., 488, 489; opinion of Gray, J., speaking for the court on the second appeal; Record, p. 184).

Patents and copyrights exist under the constitutional provision which empowers Congress

"To promote the progress of science and the useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries."

Constitution, Art. 1, Sec. 8, Sub. 8.

Congress, by Title LX. of the Revised Statutes, (in force when the judgment herein was entered) protected these allied rights by similar statutes, which, in regard to the point now in question, employ almost the same words.

A patent gives the "exclusive right to make, use and vend the invention." (Section 4884.) A copyright gives the "sole liberty of printing . . . publishing . . . and vending" the copyrighted article. (Section 4952.)

The monopoly of making and vending the patented article and the monopoly of printing and vending the copyrighted article are given in equivalent language and by ordinary rules of interpretation are equivalent.

It is only in the "field of use" that the monopolies differ. The patentee has the exclusive right to . . . use . . . the invention.

The copyright owner has the "sole liberty of . . . publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing . . . the book, map, chart, etc., and in the case of a dramatic composition, of publicly performing it or causing it to be performed or represented by others; and authors or their assigns shall have exclusive right to dramatize and translate any of their books for which copyright shall have been obtained under the laws of the United States."

R. S., Sec. 4952.

"Each and all of these statutory rights should be given such protection as the act of Congress requires, in order to secure the rights conferred upon authors and others entitled to the benefit of the act."

Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S., 339, 348.

The patent law gives a complete monopoly and the copyright law a partial monopoly of the "field of use." A reason for this distinction is that copyright is given only on condition that there is publication of the copyrighted article. Publication gives to the public a right to make certain uses of the book and the monopoly in the "field of use" conferred by the copyright can, at most, extend to what is left after the rights of the public gained by publication are protected.

"Restrictions imposed upon the use prior to publication protect the copyright. Such restrictions imposed after publication cannot affect the public rights acquired by publication. . . . The same distinctions are observed and the same rules applied in the cases where statutory copyright has been obtained."

Werckmeister v. Am. Lith. Co., C. C. A., 134 F., 321.

Publication of a book implies the distribution of copies. The owner of a copy has the unrestricted right to read it, sell it, bind and rebind it (Kipling v. Putnam, 120 Fed. Rep., 634, C. C. A.) and also a right to make use of its contents for purposes of criticism, quotation and the preparation of other works; this latter right not being unlimited, but restricted and defined by the decisions of the courts concerning the "fair use" of copyrighted books.

"The sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing and vending," is, in short, the sole right to multiply and vend.

Henry v. Dick Co., 224 U. S., 1, 46.

The right to dramatize a work, or publicly to perform a play or musical composition is a right to use. The right to translate, to make extracts, to copy for purposes of criticism or in the preparation of another work is in a sense a right to multiply copies, but it may also be considered a right to use.

The word "use" is frequently employed in the act in force July 1, 1909, Copyright Law Secs. 1 (e), 2, 6, 7, 25 (e), 31 (proviso).

Most copyright litigation relates to the field of use.

The line between "fair" and "unfair" use—the use permitted by the act of publication, and the use reserved in spite of publication—has been drawn in many cases in connection with different subjects, such as Criticism, Quotation, History, Biography, Abridgments, Translation, Dramatization, Treatises, Directories, Dictionaries, Catalogues.

Drone on Copyright, 387-399, 433, 467.

The cases show that in the field of use, as in the broader field of use under the patent law, the owner of a copyright may farm out such part as he pleases and may retain the remainder, and contracts making such division are lawful.

"The same rule should be applied to a copyright as to a patent for a machine."
Story v. Holcombe, 4 McLean, 306;

The courts have followed the patent cases whenever applicable.

The differences between the copyright act and the patent law are, however, found solely in what in patent law is the field of use. In the field of making and the field of sale the statutory provisions are the same, and hence the right of vending is the same under both statutes.

The owner of the copyright may make a valid contract with his publishers as to the selling price of copies of the copyrighted article.

Murphy v. Christian Press Assn., 38 App. Div., 426, 430.

It was said by Judge Clifford in Parton v. Prang (3 Cliff., 537):

"Personal property is transferable by sale and delivery, and there is no distinction in that respect, independent of statute, between literary property and property of any other description. . . . Sales may be absolute or conditional, and they may be with or without qualifications, limitations and restrictions, and the rules of law applicable in such cases to other personal property must be applied in determining the real character of a sale of literary property."

Aronson v. Baker, 43 N. J. Eq., 365, 369;

This case, with Straus v. American Publishers' Association, 177 N. Y., 473, are discussed in John D. Park & Sons v. Hartman, 153 Fed., 24, 35, 36.

Judge (now Mr. Justice) Lurton, speaking for the Circuit Court of Appeals, said:

"There are such wide differences between the right of multiplying and vending copies of a production protected by the copyright statute, and the rights secured to an inventor under the patent statutes, that the cases which relate to the one statute are not altogether controlling as to the other" (see Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus (C. C. A.), 147 Fed., 15, 23).

"Nevertheless the statutory right to exclusively publish and vend copies of a copyrighted production would seem to take direct contracts betwen the publisher and his vendees in respect to the price at which subsequent sales shall be made outside of the rule as to restraints of trade which might otherwise apply." (Citing Murphy v. Christian Press Assn., supra.)

The headnote is in part as follows:

"The exemption from the common-law rule against monopoly and restraint of trade, and the provisions of the federal anti-trust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat., 209, c. 647), which has been extended to contracts affecting the sale and re-sale, the use or the price of articles made under a patent, or productions covered by a copyright, does not extend also to articles made under a secret process or medicine compounded under a private formula" (153 Fed., 24).

The words which we have italicized are exactly in point in the case at bar. If the law was so stated, notwithstanding the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the Bobbs-Merrill case, the statement more plainly is the law, in view of the decision of this Court in that case, holding that copyright is a sole right to vend, as well as a right to multiply copies.

That an owner of copyright is not, on the sale of a copyrighted article, necessarily divested of all his statutory rights in regard to it, but only of such rights as he conveys, appears from

Cooper v. Stephens (1895), 1 Ch., 567;
Marshall & Co., Ltd., v. Bull., Ltd., 85 Law Times Rep., 77, 82;
Patterson v. Ogilvie, 119 Fed., 453;
Stevens v. Gladding, 17 How., 447.

In the case at bar in the New York Court of Appeals on the second appeal Judge Willard Bartlett delivered a dissenting opinion, in which two judges concurred. They voted, on the authority of Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S., 339, to reverse the decision of the Court of Appeals theretofore made.

Judge Bartlett said:

"The fair import of the decision is that the owner of a copyright obtains nothing as such under the Federal law but the exclusive right to publish and multiply copies of the protected work and vend the same. When he sells copies, the contracts of sale are unaffected by the copyright statutes, but are subject to the same rules of law as those which apply to contracts for the sale of other personal property."
Record, p. 188.

We respectfully submit that the learned judge misapprehended the effect of the decision which he cited. In the Bobbs-Merrill case this Court carefully limited the decision to the facts, saying:

Digitized by Google

"In this case the stipulated facts show that the books sold by the appellant were sold at wholesale, and purchased by those who made no agreement as to the control of future sales of the book, and took upon themselves no obligation to enforce the notice in the book undertaking to restrict the retail sales to a price of one dollar a copy.

The precise question therefore in this case is, does the sole right to vend (named in §4952) secure to the owner of the copyright, the right after a sale of the book to a purchaser, to restrict future sales of the book at retail, to the right to sell it at a certain price per copy, because of a notice in the book that a sale at a different price will be treated as an infringement, which notice has been brought home to one undertaking to sell for less than the named sum. We do not think the statute can be given such a construction, and it is to be remembered that this is purely a question of statutory construction. There is no claim in this case of contract limitation, nor license agreement controlling the subsequent sale of the book" (p. 350).

The Court also said (at page 345):

"We may say in passing, disclaiming any intention to indicate our views as to what would be the rights of parties in circumstances similar to the present case under the patent laws, that there are differences between the patent and copyright statutes in the extent of the protection granted by them. . . .

The learned counsel for the appellant in this case in the argument at bar disclaims relief because of any contract, and relies solely upon the copyright statutes and rights therein conferred. The copyright statutes ought to be reasonably construed with a view to effecting the purpose intended by Congress. They ought not to be unduly extended by judicial construction to include privileges not intended to be conferred, nor to be narrowly construed as to deprive those entitled to the benefit of the rights Congress intended to grant." (Italics ours.)

It appears on the face of the opinion

1. That the question of the validity of a contract between the copyright owner and the vendee of the copyrighted article was not passed upon.

2. That the authority of patent decisions in copyright cases where the circumstances are similar and the applicable statutory provisions are equivalent was not questioned.

3. That the authority of Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S., 70, was not shaken. Of this case Mr. Justice Day, speaking for the Court, says:

"In Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S., 70, the suit was between the owners of the letters patent as licensor and licensees seeking to enforce a contract as to the price and terms on which the patented article might be dealt with by the licensee.

The case did not involve facts such as in the case now before us, and concerned a contract of license sued upon in the state court, and, of course, does not dispose of the question before us" (210 U. S., 345).

The case at bar is distinguishable from the Bobbs-Merrill Case on precisely the same grounds as the Bement Case, and the language of Mr. Justice Day, in regard to the distinction, may be paraphrased as follows:

In the case at bar the question is as to the validity of a contract between the owner of a copyright and his vendee or licensee as to the price and terms on which the copyrighted article might be dealt with by the vendee. The case does not involve facts such as in the Bobbs-Merrill Case and concerns a contract of sale or license brought in question in the state court, and, of course, is not disposed of by the decision in the Bobbs-Merrill Case.

Bement v. National Harrow Co. and Henry v. Dick Co. show that when a patentee sells subject to conditions a patented article, the contracts of sale are affected by the patent statutes and are not affected by anti-monopoly laws as are contracts for the sale of other personal property. Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus does not hold or imply that this rule does not extend to contracts of sale made by a copyright owner with his vendee.

These views are sustained by Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. Park Sons & Co., 220 U. S., 373, 405, and by the discussion of the Bobbs-Merrill Case in Henry v. Dick Co., 224 U. S., 1, 43-47.

That was a case relating to the use of a patented article. Mr. Justice Lurton pointed out the exact scope of the Bobbs-Merrill Case and the difference between the copyright and patent statutes in regard to the field of use, and said:

"There is no collision whatever between the decision in the Bobbs-Merrill Case and the present opinion. Each rests upon a construction of the applicable statute and the special facts of the cases" (p. 47).

There is resemblance between the "exclusive right to . . . vend" a patented article and the "sole liberty . . . of vending" a copyrighted article. No difference between a patented article and a copyrighted article is pointed out in the Bobbs-Merrill Case or has been suggested in this case which tends to prevent the principle of the Bement Case and the Dick Case from being applied to the case at bar.

Judge Willard Bartlett in his dissenting opinion (Record, pp. 187, 193 N. Y., 496, 499) says:

"On the other hand, Mr. Justice Day, writing for the Supreme Court of the United States in the Bobbs-Merrill case, expressly declares that there are differences between the patent and copyright statutes in the extent of the protection granted by them, and cities with approval an opinion by Circuit Court Judge Lurton, in which he said that these differences are so wide 'that the cases which relate to one are not controlling as to the other'" (210 U. S., on p. 246).

What Mr. Justice Day cited from the opinion of Circuit Judge Lurton was:

"that the cases which relate to the one subject are not altogether controlling as to the other."

The omission of the word "altogether" essentially changes the meaning of the passage. If decisions in patent cases are not controlling in copyright law it might well be argued that the Court of Appeals erred in following the Bement Case.

Judge Bartlett quotes from Murphy v. Christian Press Ass. Pub. Co., 38 App. Div., 430, as follows:

"We suppose that the author of a new geometry may fix the price at which he will sell his work at any time, or arrange with others for its publication and sale at the stipulated price. But if all the publishers of books on geometry were to combine and agree not to sell any publication on that subject, except for a stipulated price, the contract would be in restraint of trade, and void."

The members of the American Publishers' Association did not agree not to sell books on geometry or books on any subject except for a stipulated price. Neither the Association nor any member of it had anything to do with fixing the price of any book except that each member fixed the price of his own books. Competition between publishers was in no way affected by the existence of the Association. Each publisher agreed that he would fix a price upon his own book and arrange with others for its publication and sale at the stipulated price. That is, he agreed that he would make as to each of his books a lawful agreement.

FOURTH POINT.

The agreement of the American Publishers' Association was not in violation of the Sherman Act.

It has been argued that each publisher had a right to put a retail net price upon each copyrighted book published by him; that he had a right to mark this net price upon the paper wrapper; and that he had also a right to sell his copyrighted books to those booksellers only who would maintain the retail price of such book for one year and to those booksellers and jobbers only who would sell their copyrighted books except at retail to no one who cuts such net prices.

We shall now argue that each publisher could agree with other publishers that he would conduct his own business according to this method which as an individual he could lawfully pursue.

It is to be noted that the question has not heretofore been considered by any judge or argued by counsel in this case. The question comes before this Court in first instance as well as in last resort.

It may be admitted that all publishers could not lawfully agree to fix a price upon all their copyrighted books on geometry or on any other subject.

Murphy v. Christian Press Assn., 38 App. Div., 426.

It may also be admitted that the publishers could not enter into a combination for the purpose of restricting output and destroying competition, or refusing to sell their product to jobbers except at a price fixed not by trade and competitive conditions, but by the decision of a committee.

Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. U. S., 226 U. S. 20. C. C. A., 191 Fed., 172.

On the other hand, we claim that all or any of the publishers might make rules for regulating the conduct of their business among themselves and with the public, and providing for just and fair dealings among them, provided the regulations were made for the legitimate purpose of reasonably forwarding personal interest and developing trade, without intent to wrong the general public or limit the right of individuals, or restrain the free flow of commerce, or bring about the evils, such as enhancement of prices, which are considered to be against public policy.

Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S., 604.
Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S., 578.
Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S., 1, 58.
Straus v. American Publishers Association, 177 N. Y., 473, 477, 488, 489, 490, 491.
Park & Sons Co. v. Nat. Druggists Assn., 175 N. Y., 1.

That some regulation was necessary of the publishing trade as it existed before the formation of the American Publishers' Association appears from the complaint:

"Twelfth.—That throughout the said period the publishers, who also sold and still sell at retail, and retail dealers were accustomed to advertise and offer the sale of books at retail at certain prices called 'list prices' and to deceive the public or those who were not acquainted with the wiles and customs of the trade, to induce them to believe that said 'list prices' were the ordinary retail prices of such books, whereas, in fact, both the publishers and the dealers only obtained such 'list prices' at retail from the ignorant and unwary, but gave large and liberal discounts from said prices at retail to anyone who inquired, or was familiar with the customs of the trade.

"Thirteenth.—By reason of such deception and lack of uniformity in the price of the same book, the purchasing public lost confidence in the publishers who sold at retail, and in the dealers, and gave their custom to such dealers in books, amongst others, to these plaintiffs, as had established fixed prices, and where they were assured that the greed of the dealer would not attempt to secure an extortionate profit or charge different persons different prices for the same book.

"Fourteenth.—That by reason of the foregoing facts the publishers of books who sold their own and other publishers' books at retail, and a large number of dealers found their business and their profits decreasing."

Complaint, pp. 16, 17.

It thus appears by the plaintiffs' own statement that by reason of "lack of uniformity in the price of the same book" and the fact that dealers could "charge different persons different prices for the same book" the business of publishers and dealers was diminishing and the public was deceived and lost confidence in the trade. It is true that this condition of things gave an advantage to the owners of department stores who wished to sell books at less than a living profit, as an advertisement for their other goods, but this advantage was at the expense of the trade.

"Retail booksellers throughout the country were injuriously affected by the competition of department stores and mail order houses."

Finding 92, p. 133.

It was, therefore, apparent in the year 1900, that, in the interest of the public and of all publishers, and of dealers and booksellers who sold books for profit, it would be advantageous to adopt a trade rule prohibiting "lack of uniformity in the price of the same book" and providing that dealers should not "charge different persons different prices for the same book."

Each publisher of copyrighted books could, by agreement with the bookseller to whom he sold, lawfully fix the retail price at which that bookseller should dispose of such copyrighted books. If all publishers should do this the abuses set forth in the complaint would be prevented.

This was the origin of the American Publishers' Association. Its members, for the benefit of the public, and of all publishers and booksellers, and for their own benefit, agreed that under the powers given to them under the copyright law they would each fix a retail price upon their copyrighted books for a period of one year after publication. Regulating trade is not restraining trade.

U. S. v. Reardon, 191 F., 454, 458.
Fonotipia L't'd v. Bradley, 171 F., 951, 959.
Heim v. N. Y. Exchange, 64 Misc., 529, 531.
Am. Live Stock Com. Co. v. Chicago Live Stock Exchange, 143 Ill., 210.

The rule complained of was an admirable specimen of legitimate trade regulation. It was devised to prevent a recognized evil which affected the whole trade and was injurious to the public. The rule did not go beyond the evil which it was planned to redress. It called upon no member to do any act which he could not lawfully perform and it had none of those incidents which sometimes make action by a combination unlawful, even when every member of the combination might individually take it.

According to the complaint ninety-five per cent. of the publishers and ninety per cent. of the booksellers in the United States approved the rule (pp. 11, 13). No one except Macy & Company is alleged to have opposed it. It does not appear that the public has in any way been injured by the existence of the American Publishers Association. A trade rule approved by all engaged in a trade is presumptively fair and reasonable.

The rules and the agreement in no way restrained the competition which had existed between the publishers. There was no limitation of output or fixing of prices by any common action. Each publisher continued to carry on his business in unrestricted competition with all others. There was no restraint of competition between jobbers, there was no attempt to obtain for the members of the Association any monopoly. Every publisher could become a member of the Association. Members of the Association were left free to deal under the rules with any publisher and with any jobber or bookseller. The general flow of commerce was not interrupted.

The desire of a vendor to vend the articles in which he deals on equal terms to all purchasers is not immoral. The establishment of a fixed price—a price equal to all purchasers—is a forward step in the evolution of commerce and is imposed by legislation whenever possible.

Railroad companies are not allowed to fix their rates by agreement with each other, but they are by law compelled to charge the same rate for the same service without discount or rebate to anyone. The publishers voluntarily regulated the book trade to the same purpose (although to a far less extent) that the legislature has regulated the trade of common carriers. In each case the incidental restraint was to the advantage of the public.

The case at bar is distinguishable from Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. Park & Sons Co., 220 U. S. 373, because the commodity there in question, unlike a copyrighted book, was "not entitled to special privilege or immunity" (p. 480). It was said (p. 402):

[The complainants'] "case lies outside the policy of the patent law, and the extent of the right which that law secures is not here involved or determined."

But if we leave out of consideration the privilege and immunity given by the copyright law, there remain distinctions which would validate the agreement of the American Publishers' Association on the facts of this case, under the rules laid down in Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. Park & Sons Co. The Court, speaking by Mr. Justice Hughes, there said:

"'The true view at the present time,' said Lord Macnaghton in Nordenfelt v. Maxim-Nordenfelt &c. Co., 1904, A. C., p. 565, 'I think is this: The public have an interest in every person carrying on his trade freely; so has the individual. All interference with individual liberty of action in trading, and all restraints of trade of themselves, if there is nothing more, are contrary to public policy and therefore void. That is the general rule. But there are exceptions; restraints of trade and interference with individual liberty of action may be justified by the special circumstances of a particular case. It is a sufficient justification, and indeed it is the only justification, if the restriction is reasonable—reasonable that is, in reference to the interests of the parties concerned and reasonable in reference to the interests of the public, so framed and so guarded as to afford adequate protection to the party in whose favor it is imposed, while at the same time it is in no way injurious to the public.' . . .

"But agreements or combinations between dealers, having for their sole purpose the destruction of competition and the fixing of prices, are injurious to the public interest and void. They are not saved by the advantages which the participants expect to derive from the enhanced price to the consumer."

Dr. Miles Med. Co. v. Park & Sons, 220 U. S., 406, 407, 408.

The rule of the American Publishers Association was "reasonable in reference to the interests of the parties concerned," as is shown by the plaintiffs' allegation that ninety-five per cent. of all publishers, and ninety per cent. of all booksellers favor the rule. No publisher and no dealer except the plaintiff is shown to oppose it. The rule is "reasonable with reference to the interests of the public" because there is no proof of any increase of prices or other injury to the public, and on the contrary the complainant alleges that the absence of fixed prices was used to deceive the public, and that by reason "of such deception and lack of uniformity in the price of the same book, the purchasing public lost confidence and withdrew their patronage."

Record, pp. 16, 17.

The rule did not have for its "sole purpose the destruction of competition and the fixing of prices." The competition among publishers in output and price was wholly unrestrained. Each retail dealer would be restrained from competing as to the retail price of any particular copyrighted book, but he could sell any other copyrighted book at its price or any uncopyrighted book at any price. The rule was directed not at the competition of ordinary dealers, but at the illegitimate competition of Macy & Co. The rule was "so framed and so guarded" as to forbid the "lack of uniformity in the price of the same book" which both parties admit to be injurious to the trade and to the public, and which, therefore, for the purposes of this case, the Court must hold to be injurious.

We submit, therefore, that even under the general principles of law applicable where there is no special privilege or immunity the rule of the American Publishers' Association, so far as the facts of this case are concerned, was valid and that the court would not be justified in overturning a trade regulation satisfactory to the whole book trade and beneficial to the public, because it tended to prevent Macy & Co. from selling books at a loss to aid in selling clothing and furniture at a profit.

The American Publishers' Association was an organization formed

"to advance the interests of the book publishing business; to foster the trade and commerce of said business and the interests of those engaged therein and in its allied trades and professions; to reform abuses relative to said business; to secure freedom from unjust or unlawful exactions; to diffuse accurate and reliable information as to the standing of merchants and other matters; to procure uniformity and certainty in the custom and usages of the trade and commerce of book publishing; to settle differences between its members and between them and others carrying on business with its members, and to promote a more enlarged and friendly intercourse in the trade and between business men generally; to provide and establish rules and regulations tending to promote the best interests of its members." (Record, p. 116.)

Its purposes, on a large scale, resembled those with which the Traders' Live Stock Exchange organized the trade of the Kansas City stock yards and which were examined in Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S., 604.

We submit that that case controls the case at bar. From an opinion which is all applicable we quote as follows:

"It will be remembered that the Association does no business itself. Those who are members thereof compete among themselves, and with others who are not members, for the purchase of the cattle, while the Association itself has nothing whatever to do with transportation—nor with fixing the prices for which the cattle may be purchased or thereafter sold. Any yard trader may become a member of the Association upon complying with its conditions of membership, and may remain such as long as he comports himself in accordance with its laws. A lessening of the amount of trade is neither the necessary nor direct effect of its formation. . . . There is no feature of monopoly in the whole transaction. . . .

"In the view we take of this case we are not called upon to decide whether the defendants are or are not engaged in interstate commerce because, if it be conceded that they are so engaged, the agreement as evidenced by the by-laws is not one in restraint of that trade, nor is there any combination to monopolize or attempt to monopolize such trade within the meaning of the act.

"It has already been stated in the Hopkins Case, above mentioned, that in order to come within the provisions of the statute the direct effect of an agreement or combination must be in restraint of that trade or commerce which is among the several States or with foreign nations. Where the subject matter of the agreement does not directly relate to and act upon and embrace state commerce, and where the undisputed facts show that the purpose of the agreement was not to regulate, obstruct or restrain that commerce, but that it was entered into with the object of properly and fairly regulating the transaction of the business in which the parties to the agreement are engaged, such agreement is not within the statute, where it can be seen that the character and terms of the agreement are well calculated to attain the purpose for which it was formed and where the effect of its formation and enforcement upon interstate trade or commerce is in any event but indirect and accidental, and not its purpose or object. . . .

"The same is true as to certain kinds of agreements entered into between persons engaged in the same business for the direct and bona fide purpose of properly and reasonably regulating the conduct of their business among themselves and with the public. If an agreement of that nature, while apt and proper for the purpose thus intended, should possibly, though only indirectly and unintentionally, affect interstate trade or commerce, in that event we think the agreement would be good," pp. 614, 615, 616.

FIFTH POINT.

An answer to the brief for plaintiffs in error.

A.

The statement of the facts (pp. 11-23) is largely devoted to facts existing before April 1st, 1904. At that date the rules of the American Publishers' Association were changed in several respects to conform to the decision of the New York Court of Appeals on demurrer. The amended rules in no way affected dealings in uncopyrighted books and no subsequent acts of the defendants relating to uncopyrighted books appear in the record. The amended rules were set up in the answer. The trial court adjudged the agreement and acts prior to April, 1904, concerning uncopyrighted books unlawful and awarded an injunction and damages therefor. No appeal was taken from this part of the judgment (Record, pp. 174, 175, 5, 6). There was, therefore, in the Court of Appeals and there is now no question relating to uncopyrighted books. All allusions to uncopyrighted books are irrelevant except so far as they enable the Court to understand the history of the litigation.

C.

In Point II (pp. 37-41) the learned counsel base their argument upon the agreements and acts prior to April, 1904, relating to uncopyrighted books. As has been pointed out, the portion of the judgment not appealed from disposed of these matters and the argument is therefore irrelevant.

It is also inaccurate at page 41 in saying that in 1904 no other change took place in the rules except the amendment that they should apply to copyrighted books only, and in saying that after the amendment the defendants' "methods were continued in precisely the same way as theretofore."

In Montague & Company v. Lowry, 193 U. S., 38, the essential facts were wholly different. There has been no restriction of membership in either Publishers' or Booksellers' Association and no restriction of trade to members of either association. All publishers may deal freely with all dealers, each publisher imposing on each sale of copyrighted books, a condition which under the copyright law he may lawfully impose.

D.

that if the publishers had by common action fixed the price of books published under copyrights owned by different publishers they might have made an agreement analogous to that escrow agreement upon which this Court in the Bement Case declined to express an opinion. If the publishers had agreed not to sell their copyrighted books except at a price fixed not by trade and competitive conditions, but by the decision of a committee and had established zones of sales they might have brought themselves within the rule stated by Mr. Justice McKenna in the Standard Sanitary Case.

But the fixing of prices was left wholly to the individual publishers, each fixing the price of his own copyrighted books. The agreement that all should fix such prices was a lawful trade regulation. There was no limitation as to the persons to whom sales were to be made. The agreement that each member should refrain from selling at wholesale to persons who dealt in copyrighted books in violation of the lawful conditions on which they were sold by the members of the association was analogous to the rules of Exchanges, Boards of Trade, Labor Unions and other organizations of men engaged in the same occupation.

Arthur v. Oakes, 63 F. 310.

It is, we think, incorrect to say (p. 50) that the agreements controlled the supply, after 1894, of all copyrighted books whether published by the members of the Publishers' Association, or not. Rule III provided "that the members of the Association agree that copyrighted books shall be sold by them to those booksellers only," &c., &c. Plainly this refers to the copyrighted books which members of the Association are engaged in selling to booksellers. But each publisher sells to booksellers the books which he publishes. It does not appear that any publisher was also a jobber or ever sold to booksellers any book not published by himself. Furthermore it is plain that the supply to booksellers of the copyrighted books of publishers who did not belong to the Association would continue from them and through jobbers unrestrained and uncontrolled by the rules or the action of the Association.

SIXTH POINT.

If the writ or error be not dismissed the judgment should be affirmed.

All which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN G. MILBURN,
STEPHEN H. OLIN,

OLIN, CLARK & PHELPS,
Attorneys for the Defendants-in-Error.

"MACY CASE" ARGUED ORALLY BEFORE SUPREME COURT.

THE "Macy case" (Straus vs. American Publishers' Association et al.) came up for oral argument before the Supreme Court of the United States last week Friday.

According to the newspaper reports of the hearings, the necessity of combinations in "this era of moralized competition" was the burden of the argument made by John G. Milburn, of counsel for the publishers.

The only way "moralized competition" could be obtained, Mr. Milburn told the court, "was to allow the existence of trade combinations which could lay down rules to prevent the improper things which marked the days before the Standard Oil and Tobacco decisions." He contended this had been the purpose of the combination of the book publishers, magazine publishers and the wholesale and retail booksellers. He declared that department stores threatened to ruin the book and magazine business unless the trade organized to prevent it. These stores, he contended, had seized upon books and magazines for advertising purposes, reducing the price even below cost in order to impress the public with the idea that everything they sold was likewise reduced.

Wallace Macfarlane, representing Straus, contended that the object of the publishers was not to protect the trade, but to keep up the retail price to the public so that the publishers could reap more profit at wholesale.

Chief Justice White interrupted the remarks of Mr. Milburn to ask how he met the argument that when a publisher or manufacturer once sold an article at wholesale he had no property right in it which permitted him to say how the retailer should sell it. Mr. Milburn replied that in the present case the books were copyrighted, and the copyright laws gave the publisher the right to fix the conditions under which his goods could be sold.

H. W. WILSON COMPANY ANNOUNCES TWO NEW PERIODICAL INDEXES.

"The Readers' Guide Supplement" and "The Industrial Arts Index."

Since the discontinuance of the "Annual Library Index," "Poole's Index" and the five-yearly volumes of the "Engineering Index," the lack of a guide to the magazines formerly indexed in these volumes has been seriously felt, and there has been insistent demand that there be provided for these magazines a service similar to that now performed for the more popular magazines by the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature.

To satisfy this demand the H. W. Wilson Company announces that they will at once isssue the first number of the Industrial Arts Index, and in March the Readers' Guide Supplement.

The first serious problem was the selection of periodicals to be included. Obviously it was necessary to the success of the undertaking that those periodicals be selected which were now subscribed for by libraries or which would be subscribed for if their merits were known and contents indexed. It was their purpose to select their list with such care that it would be accepted by libraries generally as standard, with the result that the selection of periodicals would become standardized in libraries. When the selection of periodicals becomes uniform any work of indexing will be much simplified and will attain greater efficiency.

In choosing magazines to be indexed the following factors were considered, (1) Contents: ephemeral or of permanent reference value. (2) Articles: long and satisfying; or choppy, making indexing expensive and result disappointing to one looking up references. (3) Size: standard; or too large, making binding expensive and volumes clumsy to handle.

Tentative lists of periodicals selected and under consideration were sent to every library subscribing for indexes and an expression of opinion invited from all.

A subscription rate is being made based on the number of magazines subscribed for by the library which are on the list indexed. The proposed rate of twenty cents a year (weeklies 40 c.) is possible only if liberal support is received.

Indexes will on this basis cost about ten per cent. as much as the subscription to the periodicals themselves. Having bought the periodicals it is undoubtedly a good investment to pay ten per cent. more to make the original investment usable.

MINORITY REPORT OF PATENT COMMITTEE ATTACKS OLDFIELD BILL.

Department stores and large manufacturers would have a complete monopoly of the sale of patented articles if the Oldfield patent reform bill should become a law, according to the views of the minority of the House Committee on Patents, filed March 4.

The Oldfield bill is the measure which was drawn up by Democrats of the House to correct the alleged patent monopoly evils resulting from the Supreme Court's decision in the A. B. Dick mimeograph case, and of particular interest to the book trade because it endeavors to prohibit net price maintenance upon patented articles.

The minority report is signed by six members of the committee. It was not known that the committee was so hopelessly divided. Eight members signed the majority report.

The provision in the bill which holds that a breach of license restriction shall not be deemed an infringement is the section which the minority holds would permit the department stores to cut the prices of patented articles and so "freeze out" small dealers to the grave disadvantage of inventors, manufacturers and general public alike.

HERESY CHARGES AGAINST DR. MAINS.

THE second day's sessions of the seventy-seventh conference of the New Jersey Methodist Episcopal Church, at Atlantic City, was thrown into a turmoil on March 6 by the criticism of a book, "Traditional Faith and Modern Belief," written by the Rev. Dr. George P. Mains, head of the Methodist Book Concern. The cry of "heretic" and the words "traitor to our church" were used during the debate.

The discussion was started by the Rev. J. Morgan Read, former head of Pennington Seminary, who said the trend of thought in the book was toward Methodistic liberalism. Instantly a dozen clergymen were on their feet with points of order, but they were swept aside in the whirlwind of debate. When the author rose to reply he was attacked on every side, and Dr. George W. Ridout, of Trenton, offered a resolution demanding that such literature be barred from distribution among the Methodist Church and schools.

"Study the books of John Wesley," answered Dr. Mains. "I fear some of you brethren have never done that. You will see that my books have in no sense departed from the faith. I want to say that behind me in my answer is the approved university scholarship of the world."

Bishop Berry, who was presiding over the conference, next day appointed a committee to examine the books and other publications distributed by the Methodist Book Concern. Dr. Howard P. Sloan, of New Brunswick, a member of the committee, said it would take a year to make the investigation, as many books would have to be reviewed.

Dr. Mains in a long address at the conference last Monday defended himself from the charges of heresy. He reminded the ministers that when Luther attacked an infallible church, Protestantism reared in its place a "Paper Pope," with which higher criticism is now dealing.

$100,000 TO McCALL CO. EMPLOYEES.

A GIFT of $100,000 in cash was made last Saturday to the oldest employees of the McCall Company, publisher of McCall's Magazine, by James H. Ottley, the retiring president. The money was distributed to the workers who had been with the firm three years or more. There were 208 eligibles, so the average amount received by each was almost $500.

Two of the nine employees with whom he began the business in 1893 were among those who shared in the gift. None of the beneficiaries had any intimation of the gift until he received it in the form of a check through the mail, accompanied by a letter from the donor.

In his letter, Mr. Ottley explained that his general method of division and distribution was to make the "allotment in proportion to the respective gross amounts each has received from the McCall Company during his or her entire term of service."

The high-salaried members of the executive staff either received only a small percentage of the gift, or were excluded entirely from participation.

President Ottley autographed each of the letters to his old employees. He expressed his appreciation of the fidelity, thought and labor which they had contributed to building the business, and his desire to give some expression to this appreciation.

IVORY SOAP PEOPLE TEMPORARILY SUSPEND NET PRICE.

THE Proctor & Gamble Company, Cincinnati, sent the following notice to jobbers of Ivory soap on March 3:

"The right of a manufacturer to protect his brand by endeavoring to regulate the prices at which his product may be sold by jobbers is at present in doubt, and we hereby notify you that, pending the final decision of the question, the responsibility for the securing of reasonable profits to compensate you for the handling of our brands will rest with you.

"The last issues of our price list, now in your hands, are still in effect. They will be used as a basis for figuring the cost of our products to you, and these costs will be the same as heretofore until you are notified to the contrary."

PRINTERS WANT BOOK TARIFF MAINTAINED.

THERE was a mass meeting of printers and bookbinders, Thursday night, at Cooper Union Hall, New York City, to protest against any reduction in the tariff on articles produced by them.

All the speakers joined in saying that their wages would be cut if foreign printed matter was let in free. One publisher wrote a letter declaring that if the tariff is lowered many printing houses will have to close.

On the speaker's list were Congressmen Chandler and Maher, ex-Congressman Bennet, Judge Snitkin and a dozen officials of printing unions.

NEW AMENDMENT TO COPYRIGHT LAW.

PROVIDES FOR REGISTRATION OF RESIDENCE OF FOREIGN AUTHORS.

NOTE.—The new matter in this amendatory act is printed in italics.

AN act to amend section fifty-five of "An act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright," approved March fourth, nineteen hundred and nine.

Digitized by Google

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that section fifty-five of the act entitled "An act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright," approved March fourth, nineteen hundred and nine, be amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 55. That in the case of each entry the person recorded as the claimant of the copyright shall be entitled to a certificate of registration under seal of the copyright office, to contain the name and address of said claimant, the name of the country of which the author of the work is a citizen or subject, and when an alien author domiciled in the United States at the time of said registration, then a statement of that fact, including his place of domicile, the name of the author (when the records of the copyright office shall show the same), the title of the work which is registered for which copyright is claimed, the date of the deposit of the copies of such work, the date of publication if the work has been reproduced in copies for sale, or publicly distributed, and such marks as to class designation and entry number as shall fully identify the entry. In the case of a book, the certificate shall also state the receipt of the affidavit, as provided by section sixteen of this act, and the date of the completion of the printing, or the date of the publication of the book, as stated in the said affidavit. The register of copyrights shall prepare a printed form for the said certificate, to be filled out in each case as above provided for in the case of all registrations made after this act goes into effect, and in the case of all previous registrations so far as the copyright office record books shall show such facts, which certificate, sealed with the seal of the copyright office, shall, upon payment of the prescribed fee, be given to any person making application for the same. Said certificate shall be admitted in any court as prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein. In addition to such certificate the register of copyrights shall furnish, upon request, without additional fee, a receipt for the copies of the work deposited to complete the registration."

Approved, March 2, 1913.

AUSTRALIAN NOTES.

AUSTRALIAN booksellers seem in a fairly cheerful frame of mind, judging by reports of the Christmas trade printed in a just-received issue of the Australian Bookfellow. Except for an occasional growl against some big store cutting into the line of "annuals," the trade members speak optimistically of "good trade," and even of "the best yet experienced."

American books, according to a Sydney bookseller, are better turned out than the English—they look better value for money, and sometimes they are. All the Stratton-Porter books are popular in Australia, as well as Harold Bell Wright's novels. The public, it seems, has a fancy for novels of sentiment—suitable gift books. "The Upas Tree" and other Barclay novels are extremely popular. In contrast to this taste for peaceable literature, there is a strong demand for novels of adventure; and here, again, America comes to the front. Rex Beach is always popular, though "The Net" has not met with quite the success of some of his earlier books.

Besides "pretty" stories, the people of Australia have a fancy for poetry and gift booklets—the latter class of good sellers being noted by a number of booksellers. Well-known poets in dainty bindings, recognized popular authors in fancy bindings, and Stevenson in the pocket edition are well received. This gratifying tendency is noted by a Sydney bookseller, who remarks that "buyers think it shows taste on their part to give a Stevenson."

L. M. Hutchinson, of Melbourne, voices a complaint against the way publishers nowadays are bulking their fiction books. "What with big margins, wide-spaced lines, big type, and pulpy paper," he says, "a book is put on the market at 3s. 6d. which takes about an hour to read; and what is more, it is detrimental to the local trade, for though profit margins per volume are greater, the increase freight eats it up." He also makes a plea for more good, wholesome stories for girls.

The following American and English books seem most in demand, exclusive of those previously mentioned: "The Lost World," "The Way of an Eagle," "The Street Called Straight," "The Sign at Six," "A Romance of Billy-Goat Hill," "The Rhodesian," "The Heather Moon," "Money Moon," Vachell's books, Jacobs' books, Sewell Ford's books, "Riders of the Purple Sage," "Queed," "The Trail of the Axe," "Down Our Way," "Glory of the Conquered" (rivalling the Barclay books in popularity in Sydney), "The Streets of Ascalon," and "Aristide Pujol."

Among general literature, it is interesting to note that the Rationalist Press publishers say that Cole, of Melbourne, sells more of their publications than any other bookseller in the world.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

BOSTON BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Boston Booksellers' League was held March 12, at luncheon in the Boston City Club. Many matters of interest to the thirteen members present, representing that number of houses, were discussed. C. E. Lauriat, Jr., was elected president to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Melcher, who recently removed to Indianapolis.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE eighteenth annual meeting of the Booksellers' League will be held, as usual, at the Hotel Brevoort, Fifth Avenue and Eighth Street, Wednesday evening, March 19, at 6.30 o'clock. The speakers of the evening will be Frederick K. Mathiews, "The bookseller's responsibility with children," and Fremont Rider, of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, "If I were going into the retail book business."

Digitized by Google

The annual election of officers will also be held.

Unless members notify Charles A. Burkhardt, 31 West 23d Street, before March 17, no provision will be made for them at the table.

STATIONERS' BOARD OF TRADE.

At the last meeting of the board of trustees of the Stationers' Board of Trade, it was unanimously voted to petition the Supreme Court to permit the changing of the name of the organization to that of the Stationers' and Publishers' Board of Trade. This was only done after the endorsement of a very large majority of the members. The trustees are of the opinion that incorporating the word publishers in the name is a deserved recognition of a trade which composes a large part of the membership. Fuller details of the annual dinner of the Board are now available. A band of negro singers, dancers and instrumentalists will amuse and aid digestion. After feasting and music there will be some able and interesting speakers: Dr. McGinnes, president of the Catholic Truth Society; Edmund D. Fisher, Deputy Comptroller of New York, who will give us some information about the city finances which will be instructive and well worth listening to; and Joseph French Johnson, Dean of New York University. The dinner will be held in the main banquet hall in the Plaza Hotel, and tickets are ready.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE DANGER IN TOO GREAT DISCOUNTS.

Adrian, Mich.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

Dear Sir: I have read your "The Danger in Too Great Discounts," in the issue of March 1, and wish to compliment you on the same, and trust it may be extensively read.

My experience of thirty years in the book business has brought the identical instances and experiences: seeing the discounts creep up in the 80's to 40 per cent., 40 and 5 per cent., 40 and 10 per cent., and even 50 per cent., and the dealer compelled to sell at a discount varying from 10 per cent. to 25 per cent., and thus at a loss constantly.

During the 90's and 00's, scarcely keeping soul and body together from the profits of his business, and now the reestablishment of "net" system, which yields a fair profit, I have watched closely the various changes.

When you increase the discount above the 30 per cent. or the ⅓ as the limit, the large dealer, both retail and wholesale, sees an opportunity to make a cut, using it for an "ad," and crowding out the small dealer, though just as legitimate a bookseller, but because of circumstances has committed the crime of being a "small" one, and doing business in a "small" place.

If the publisher and author are both making profits so great that they are both ashamed of them, then lower the price of the book—make the $1.50 book list $1.20, the $1.25 book $1, but keep the discount and the net price.

Again expressing my appreciation of your good words in the article above mentioned, I am,

Very truly,
G. Roscoe Swift.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

NEW BRITISH LAW PROCLAIMED IN INDIA.

A late despatch states that the new British copyright law was promulgated in India on October 13, last, the edict, dated from Simla, stating that it applied "from the day of promulgation." It appears to have been also promulgated in Ceylon.

POSTAL MATTERS.

ORDERS PUBLICITY LAW OBEYED.

Postmaster-General Burleson decided on March 8 that it is incumbent on him to enforce the newspaper publicity law suspended by Postmaster-General Hitchcock pending a judicial test of the act, and has directed all postmasters to notify publishers that unless they have complied with the law within ten days publications affected will be barred from the mails. Following this announcement, the attorney for the Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin applied for an injunction against Burleson and Attorney-General McReynolds. The court reserved decision in the matter.

C. O. D. PARCEL POST NEXT.

On July 1, next, the collect-on-delivery feature will be added to the Parcel Post Department of the Postal Service of the country. An order putting this into effect was signed, February 27, by Postmaster-General Hitchcock. The regulations provide that the parcel must bear the amount due from the addressee, and the collection will be made if the amount is not in excess of $100. The fee will be 10 cents, to be affixed by the sender, in parcel post stamps. This also will insure the parcel to an amount not to exceed $50.

ONE CENT LETTER POSTAGE.

A resolution was adopted with some dissent last week by the New York Chamber of Commerce favoring the passage of a bill making the rate on first class mail one cent per ounce or fraction thereof, similar to the bill introduced in the last Congress by Senator Burton and Congressman John W. Weeks. The surplus of 1911, and the fact that the deficit of 1912 was due to exceptionally large mailings of franked matter in the political campaign and therefore only temporary, justify the proposed reduction, say the committee.

CHANGE IN PARCEL POST RULES.

Postmaster Edward Morgan, of New York City, last Saturday, announced a change in parcel post regulations affecting packages for domestic destination weighing four ounces or less. If these packages bear the distinctive parcel post stamps they may hereafter be deposited in street package boxes and at all numbered stations. Parcels weighing more than this must be mailed at the General Post Office or a lettered or locally named station or branch post office; or such numbered stations as have been designated to receive parcel post matter. All packages must bear the name and address of the sender.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JAMES A. ROBINSON, treasurer of the Burrows Brothers Co., of Cleveland, O., died on March 7.

THE body of Edward W. Smith, a map-maker and book dealer in Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., who disappeared more than a month ago, was found floating in the Schuylkill River on Sunday morning. It is believed that he met with foul play while walking across the Walnut Street Bridge.

GEORGE PERKINPINE, who was the senior member of the firm of Perkinpine & Higgins, of Philadelphia, from 1852 to 1909, died at his home March 6. He had been in feeble health for some years, and retired from the firm in 1909, since which time Charles W. Higgins has continued the business under the old trade name.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

THE Editor is now published semi-monthly.

"THE DAFFODIL FIELDS," another long narrative poem by John Masefield, is the principal feature of The English Review for February.

THE publishers of Modern Priscilla have purchased the Home Needlework Magazine of the Florence Pub. Company, Florence, Mass. Home Needlework will be continued as an individual publication.

ANOTHER long-established magazine is to move its publication offices to New York. The National Food Magazine, of Chicago, a periodical of recognized influence in national and State politics, will soon make its headquarters at 45 West 34th Street.

THE Börsenblatt für den Deutschen Buchhandel is entering the eightieth year of its publication. Advertisements will henceforth be published in four columns instead of three. An illustrated supplement on art paper for advertisements has also been added.

ACCORDING to an advertised statement in Printers' Ink, G. Henry Stetson, formerly a stockholder of the House Beautiful, Inc., has disposed of his entire stock interest therein, and F. Leighton Kramer, vice-president of the Ridge Avenue Bank of Philadelphia, and his associates have secured the controlling interest in the magazine.

THE principal stockholders of the Sunny South Publishing Company, it is reported, have decided to allow a receivership and to suspend the publication of Uncle Remus' Magazine. With the exception of the president, F. Fayram, those interested financially in the magazine were bankers, and they did not care to spend more money in its development. It is stated that the loss for the first year, 1907 and 1908, was $47,000. The financial showing for the succeeding years has not been indicated.

REPRESENTATIVES of William R. Hearst have recently been privately soliciting subscriptions to the bonds of the International Magazine Company in the financial district, according to a Wall Street news agency. One banker is said to have taken $25,000 of them, and it is reported that George J. Gould has become the possessor of a block of $200,000. The company controls the Cosmopolitan, Motor Boating and Motor magazines. The issue is $1,000,000. The bonds were advertised for public subscription in the Hearst periodicals last July.

THE Beeman Company, publisher of Vanity Fair, 1328 Broadway, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $9796 and assets of unknown value, consisting of office furniture, books, copies of Vanity Fair and the title of that publication. The company owes $3423 for salaries to seven employees, of which $2318 is to Philip Mindel, editor and president of the company. Among the creditors are the Technical Press, $3500; and the American Press Association, $1186. The company was incorporated on June 24, 1912, with capital stock of $40,000, and bought the publication, it was said, for $3500.

THE Every Where Publishing Company, publishers of Every Where, a monthly founded by Will M. Carleton, the poet, in 1894, with offices at 150 Nassau Street, this city, and 444 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, and with a printing plant at 15 Vandewater Street, made an assignment a week ago to George W. Phillips. The company was incorporated on January 5, 1905, with a capital stock of $300,000, which was increased to $400,000 in February, 1910. The concern was not rated in Bradstreet's. Carleton was president of the company, and was editor of the monthly until his death, in December last. Then James S. Arthur became president and Herman H. Dierksen secretary. The assignment, which was due to Mr. Carleton's death, was decided upon at a meeting of the directors, held on the fifth. The liabilities will not exceed $3000, and the nominal assets are about the same, mostly in copyrights. Aron & Vandeveer, of 50 Pine Street, are the attorneys for the assignee.

PERSONAL NOTES.

FLORENCE SCOVEL SHINN, the well-known illustrator, obtained a decree of divorce last Monday from her husband, Everett Shinn, a prominent artist.

ELEANOR GATES, author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl," has confirmed the report that she will seek a divorce from her husband, Richard Watson Tully, the novelist and playwright, one of whose latest works is the book of "The Bird of Paradise."

A CABLE despatch from Acra, Gold Coast Colony, dated March 13, states that Lady Clifford, wife of the Governor, better known as Mrs. Henry de la Pasture, the novelist and dramatist, is ill of yellow fever.

GAYLE BURLINGAME, buyer for the Penn Traffic Co., Johnstown, Pa., has resigned his position, to go with the Rand, McNally Co. Mr. Burlingame will cover the Central West territory for Rand, McNally as far East as Pittsburgh.

On May 1, George S. Emory will retire as vice-president and general manager of D. Appleton & Company, to devote his entire time to the Nassau County Trust Company, Mineola, N. Y., of which he has been president for several years. Mr. Emory will continue his connection with D. Appleton & Company as a member of the board of directors.

Reilly & Britton Co.'s Southern representative is R. P. Lapham, son of E. H. Lapham, of A. C. McClurg & Co. This is Mr. Lapham's first venture in the book business, but he has had a great deal of experience as a traveling salesman. S. D. Siler, whose name was given among this firm's travelers in the Travelers' Number, ended his connection with the house December 31.

Henry Frowde, the publisher to the University of Oxford, is, at his own wish, retiring on March 31, after thirty-nine years' active work as manager of the London business of the Oxford University Press. Humphrey Milford, who has for some years been associated with Mr. Frowde, has been appointed as his successor. Though Mr. Frowde is retiring from the active supervision of business at Amen Corner, he will, it is understood, be available for consultation, so that his knowledge and experience will not be lost to the Press.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

Alfred Noyes's poetical "Tales of the Mermaid Tavern" will be published in April by Stokes.

Frank Koester's "The Price of Inefficiency," an analysis and criticism of our national conditions, is on the Sturgis & Walton Co. spring list.

In "Mark Twain and the Happy Island," announced by A. C. McClurg & Co., Elizabeth Wallace gives an account of Mark Twain's life in Bermuda.

"Candies and Bonbons, and How to Make Them," by Manin Harris Neil, Best Receipt Editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, is a new McKay book.

John Muir's "Story of My Boyhood and Youth," which has been running in the Atlantic, will be published in book form this month by Houghton Mifflin Co.

Harper & Brothers have just published "Tackling Matrimony," by George Lee Burton; "Harper's Household Handbook"; and "Car Troubles," by Harold W. Slauson.

Henry Holt & Co. announce a special advertising campaign to push Julie M. Lippmann's "Martha-by-the-Day." Weekly advertising for three months is the program.

"Oxford Book of American Verse," planned as a companion volume to Quiller-Couch's well-known anthology of English poetry, is being prepared under the editorship of Bliss Carman.

The bill recommended by Governor Sulzer, of New York State, providing for free text books and school supplies throughout the State, was introduced in the Assembly March 11 by Assemblyman McKee.

"Die Technik im 20 Jahrhundert," a richly illustrated technical encyclopædia, edited by Dr. A. Miethe, of Berlin, is just published in four volumes (15 marks each) by George Westermann, of Brunswick.

"My Russian Year," by Rothay Reynolds, uniform with "My Italian Year" and other volumes, a readable account written by the special correspondent of the London Standard, is just published by James Pott & Co.

The J. B. Lippincott Company, finding that it was impossible to have sufficient stock ready of "The Road of Living Men," by Will Levington Comfort, to publish on March 14, have delayed publication until the 20th.

J. Lefort's "L'Assurance contre le Chômage en France et à l'étranger," an important study dealing with this ever-present question of unemployment, is published by Fontemoing et Cie., of Paris, in two volumes at 12 francs.

T. Everett Harré, the young author of "The Eternal Maiden," which will be published by Mitchell Kennerley next week, has spent the past month in Paris, where he has been attending to the French translation of the story.

Spring publications of the Griffith & Rowland Press include "The Bible Message for Modern Manhood," by Craig S. Thoms; "Freedom and Authority in Religion," by E. Y. Mullins; "Elements of Spirituality," by G. H. Ferris; and "True Wealth," by J. Sherman Wallace.

Forthcoming from F. G. Browne & Co., of Chicago are: "Bugles of Gettysburg," by Mrs. George Pickett; "East and West," by Mrs. Conger; "Our Neighbors—the Japanese," by Joseph King Goodrich, and a reissue of Francis Fisher Browne's "Everyday Life of Abraham Lincoln."

Henry James' new book, "A Small Boy, and Others" (Scribners), has just appeared. It is an autobiographical account of his own childhood, largely in New York, and originated in Mr. James' intention to bring together some particulars of the early life of his brother, William James.

"The King's Blue Riband," by Beth Ellis, in which Anthony Claverton undertakes, on a desperate wager, to steal the "Cordon Bleu" from the person of Louis XIV. of France; and "A Makeshift Marriage," another of Mrs. Baillie-Reynold's novels of real life, will be published March 15 by George H. Doran Co.

We have heard much of efficiency in the factory, the office and the shipping yard, and now comes Mrs. Christine Frederick, who, by painstaking experiment and lucid explanation, shows how the principles of scientific management may be applied in the home. "The New Housekeeping" will be published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

THE increasing work of the English Society of Authors—which body now includes composers and dramatists, as well as the writers of books—has necessitated a removal into larger offices. On and after March 1 the Society and its recently established Collection Bureau will occupy rooms at No. 1 Central Buildings, Tothill Street, Westminster, S.W.

A DISPATCH from Rome states that the Pope has consented to make accessible for purposes of historical research the secret archives of the Congregation of the Inquisition. Heretofore these archives have been absolutely invisible, and permission to examine them was refused a short time ago even to Abbot Gasquet, Mgr. Duchesne and other prominent ecclesiastical historians.

JOHN WILEY & SONS will soon publish "The Textile Fibres," by J. Merritt Matthews, a third edition; "Logging," by Prof. R. C. Bryant, of Yale University; "Text-book on Highway Engineering," by Prof. Arthur H. Blanchard and Henry B. Browne, of Columbia University; and "The Improvement of Rivers," a second edition, by B. F. Thomas and D. A. Watt.

WITH the publication, this week, of James Lane Allen's "The Reign of Law," Richard Washburn Child's "Jim Hands," William Stearns Davis' "A Friend of Cæsar," and Jack London's "Burning Daylight" in a fifty-cent edition, Macmillan's Modern Fiction Library is inaugurated. The purpose of the series is parallel to that of the Standard Library: it proposes to do for fiction what that series has so successfully done for general literature.

ACCORDING to newspaper report the Treasury Department last Wednesday barred from entry to the United States "piratical copies" of copyrighted motion pictures, but declined to bar films claimed to be simply infringements of copyrighted books and the like. The report states that "copyright proprietors of books made a strenuous effort to have the department exclude films based on their works, but it was held that such cases must be disposed of by the courts."

WE understand that the whole number of the Bombay edition of Rudyard Kipling's works, recently announced in England by Macmillan & Co., has already been taken up. When it is remembered that the edition consists of 1000 copies, published at 23 guineas net, and, further, that the first two volumes will not be ready for another two months, this constitutes a very remarkable incident in the annals of modern publishing, and is a remarkable evidence of Mr. Kipling's widespread popularity.

PUBLICATIONS from Houghton Mifflin Co. for March 29 will include three historical works: "The Fall of the Dutch Republic," by Henrik Willem van Loon; "Guerilla Leaders of the World," by Percy Cross Standing; and "England in 1815," by Joseph Ballard. There will also be published on this day the latest contribution to the series edited by William Allan Neilson, under the general title of "Types of English Literature." The new volume in the series is "The English Lyric," by Professor Felix E. Schelling, of the University of Pennsylvania.

THE following volumes are announced for early publication by the Association Press: "The City Church and Its Social Mission," by A. W. Trawick; "The Bible and the Spade," by Edgar J. Banks; "History of the North American Young Men's Christian Association," by Richard C. Morse; "Boy's Services," by H. W. Gibson; "Country Church and Community Co-operation," addresses delivered at Country Life Conference; "Sunday School and the teens" (report of Commission on Adolescence); edited by John L. Alexander, International Sunday School Secondary Division Superintendent.

"A MIDSUMMER WOOING," Mary E. Stone Bassett's story of a romance in a garden, is promised for April 1 by Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. On the same date they publish "The Family," by Charles Franklin Thwing, in a revised and enlarged edition; "A Story Garden," by Maud Lindsay; "Prue's Jolly Winter," by Amy Brooks; "When I Was a Boy in Greece," by George Demetrios, fourth title in Children of Other Lands Series; "Dave Porter and the Runaways," by Edward Stratemeyer; "The Silver Island of the Chippewa," by D. Lange; "St. Dunstan Boy Scouts," by Warren L. Eldred; and "The Red House Children at Grafton," by Amanda M. Douglas.

OF the five volumes of fiction included in the latest addition to Everyman's Library (Dutton) four are by Russian authors—Tolstoy with "Anna Karenina," in two volumes, and Dostoievsky with "Crime and Punishment" and "The House of the Dead." "Don Quixote" appears in Motteux's version. Other volumes are Eugene Mason's translations from the "Lays of Marie de France," three comedies from the Norwegian of Björnstjerne Björnson, the Anglo-Saxon "Chronicle" translated by J. Ingram, and Irving's "Sketch Book." Of travel and history there are Edward William Lane's "Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians," and George Dennis's "Cities and Cemeteries of Etruria," in two volumes. The "Politics of Aristotle" has been translated by William Ellis.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the first authorative book showing the relation of Socialism to the new industrial agitation which springs from the Syndicalist philosophy. John Spargo, well known as a sober thinker and convincing advocate, writes a book entitled "Syndicalism, Industrial Unionism and Socialism" which B. W. Huebsch will publish at once. The activities of the I. W. W. are said to be making serious inroads into the Socialist Party. Thus it is of interest to have an executive member of the Socialist Party make clear the relations between Industrial Unionism which stands for direct action, and straight Socialism which believes in parliamentary action. This informative book will fill a want which becomes greater with every upheaval in the industrial world.

MRS. ISABELLA OAKES SHAW, who for some years has been the literary editor for Grosset & Dunlap, contributing the "Book Chat," "About Authors," and general book reviews for the house organ, Business Promoter, is now in charge of the editorial and advertising work for Cupples & Leon Company. This firm has in mind some clever and far-reaching plans for the sale of their lively juvenile series. Their Motor Boys Series has the distinction of leading all other juveniles as the best-selling series of 1912. Their line of "Rag Books," published by Dean's Rag Book Company, London, is unrivalled in the field of books for the little ones, because parents know that the colors are absolutely fast, and that there is absolutely no danger from color poison in letting the little ones play with them.

HURST & Co. promise a number of additions to their copyrighted boys and girls books. "Frank Armstrong, Captain of the Nine," fifth volume in Matthew M. Colton's Frank Armstrong Series; Morgan Scott's "The New Boys at Oakdale," in the Oakdale Academy Series; and "Molly Brown's Senior Days," fourth volume of her story, by Nell Speed, will be ready April 1. Additions will also be made to The Boy Mentors' Series, The Motor-Cycle Series, The Dreadnought Boys Series, The Bungalow Boys Series, and The Motor Rangers Series. Since half the boys of the country are interested in the Boy Scout movement, and another half takes a lively interest in the Panama Canal, "The Boy Scouts at the Panama Canal" should find its way into many hands. "The Border Boys in the Canadian Rockies, "The Boy Aviators' Flight for a Fortune," and "The Motor Maids in Fair Japan," are other juveniles of the season. The "Popular Copyright Fiction" line has been strengthened by many well-known titles.

THE dictionaries of the Laird & Lee line range in price from $5 to 28 cents. The list includes the "Encyclopedic Library Edition," 1430 pages, 2000 text engravings, 25 plates and 10 supplemental dictionaries; "Encyclopedic School Edition," equally comprehensive, except for 2 plates and the supplemental dictionaries; "High School and Collegiate Edition"; "Students' Common School Edition" (thoroughly revised and enlarged), with special dictionaries of music, biography, etc.; "Intermediate School Edition," of 460 pages, containing, among other features, the flags of nations in color; and the "Elementary School Edition," 4¼ by 5¾ inches in size, containing 450 illustrations, plates, United States Presidents, mathematical planes, angles and bodies. The 1913 announcements of this house include "The Little Fiddler of the Ozarks," by X. D. Ellison; "Morgan's Youngest Rifleman," an adventure book for boys, by F. H. Costello; and four volumes in the Historic Americans Series—Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and McKinley.

BOHN'S libraries, famous for over sixty years, are to be issued in England in admirable little pocket volumes, cloth bound, at 1s. net. H. G. Bohn, who first made accessible to the general public in convenient form and at a popular price translations and reprints of the great masterpieces of the world's literature, was one of the most notable publishers of the Victorian era. So successful was the venture that in 1864, when the libraries were sold, they were purchased by Bell, of London—then Bell & Daldy—for the large sum of £35,000. Since that date the new proprietors of the libraries have consistently extended and improved them. The first twenty volumes, which will be ready on March 31, include: Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," Motley's "Rise of the Dutch Republic," three volumes; Emerson's "Works," two volumes; Sir Richard Burton's "Pilgrimage to Al-Madinah and Meccah," two volumes; Lamb's "Essays," Hooper's "Waterloo," Fielding's "Joseph Andrews," "Don Quixote," two volumes; Calverley's translation of the "Idylls of Theocritus" and the "Eclogues of Vergil"; Miss Burney's "Evelina," Coleridge's "Aids to Reflection," Goethe's "Poetry and Truth from My Own Life," two volumes; Ebers' "Egyptian Princess," Arthur Young's "Travels in France." The Macmillan Co. are the American publishers.

PICK-UPS.

THE NEEDFUL.

RICHARD BUTLER GLAENZER, the New York essayist and critic, said at the Players' Club:

"Poetry is delightful. But poets are so very poorly paid. I know a millionaire who has a beautiful, golden-haired stenographer. The girl said to her employer the other day:

"'I am going to get married, sir. And I am going to marry a poet.'

"'Dear me!' said the millionaire. 'Then you will have to leave me, eh?'

"'No, sir,' she replied, 'I shall not leave you. But I shall need more pay.'"

A NEW REJECTION SLIP.

DONALD A. KAHN, of that home state of authors, Indiana, is sending out with his mss. the following burlesque of a magazine "rejection slip"—a little stunt clever enough to gain a smile from the most jaded periodical "reader," and, incidentally, to get initial attention.

D. A. K.

In submitting the accompanying Ms. to your magazine the author does not reflect upon the merit of the one or the standard of the other.

Many considerations besides the worth of a story and the station of a periodical enter in when a writer routes his work. For instance, this manuscript may be sent to you because it has been found not available by every other editor in America.

Owing to the large number of periodicals published each month the author is obliged to beg to be excused from criticism of your magazine.

—DONALD A. KAHN.

SUGGESTION IN RETAIL SELLING.

DID you ever notice in a store, after making a purchase, that the clerk usually says:

"Is there something else I can show you?"

This is against every principle of good salesmanship.

What the clerk should do is to suggest something and make the suggestion form a desire to see the article.

A salesman should always appeal to the buyer, and merely asking a patron if there is something else is asking the customer to do what is the natural duty of the salesman.

A retail salesman, or any salesman for that matter, should remember that on the average people are too lazy or haven't the time to think; the salesman must think for them in the way of suggestion and until the suggestion appeals to their selfishness, and then the patron will do his own thinking.

If a clerk has sold one thing to a customer and desires to sell him something else, he must develop the ability to match up that individual with some other item in stock, something that will be suited to him.

This faculty almost amounts to picturing him in the possession of that article.

The development of this faculty of matching up individuals with goods comes first with a detailed knowledge of the stock in a store or a department, which should include a knowledge of the purpose of each item, how it is made—its selling reasons, in other words, and to gain this naturally will require study; for if a young man, say, enters the profession of medicine or of law, he would have to do a lot of study by reading.

Digitized by Google

Now, selling is a profession, just as useful, respectable and important as the law or medicine, and a young man entering the profession of selling must expect to do some studying,—not out of books, perhaps, but by observation and inquiry.

It doesn't require much time or effort in gaining a selling knowledge of an article; for a clerk soon learns with the experience of study to grasp the pertinent points and separate them from the impertinent.

Take a high class retail book salesman, for instance. He knows what is in every book in stock, particularly the new books, yet he reads very little. He gets enough out of each book to sell it by reading the preface, the chapter headings and a paragraph here and there.

Next in the faculty of matching up individuals with goods, after a knowledge of the goods, comes the knowledge of individuals.

This is only gained by a contact with individuals,—experience, in other words.

A salesman gains this unconsciously, a good deal like a good writing and speaking knowledge of English is unconsciouly gained by reading the best English books; or like the unconscious knowledge of a foreign language gained by the association with people who speak it.

When a customer has made one purchase it is easy to judge him for a suggestion to another by his first inquiry and selection.

All people express their nature, character and trend of thought in what they buy just as in where they live and what they wear, and after one sale it requires but little experience to judge them for another.

However, it is never well to go so far with suggestions as to become offensive; for we all know the barber who, after we have had a hair-cut, shampoo, and shave, insists on running up the check by suggesting a hair tonic that looks like red lemonade and smells like horse medicine.

While a customer who has bought one thing may not buy another thing at the same time, yet his coming in a store should be taken as an opportunity to give a knowledge of something he might buy in the future; for on the average no selling effort is ever lost.—Cottrell's Magazine.

Believing himself penniless owing to a provision in his uncle's will, Paul Cazalet, through a woman's intervention, allows himself to be persuaded to take an important mission to Belgrade just at the time when all Servia is in a state of turmoil—before the murder of Alexander and Draga. Exciting events, beginning with the murder of an important officer just off the coast of England, follow thick and fast. Cazalet, his friend Fenning, and Jean Lorimer, the woman in the case, play important parts in the events which lead to the murder of Servia's king and queen.

Fox, J:, jr. The heart of the hills; il. by F. C. Yohn. N. Y., Scribner. c. '12-'13. 396 p. D. $1.35 n.

Setting of the story is the mountains and the Blue Grass region. Jason and Mavis Hawn, mountaineer children, together with Marjorie and Gray Pendleton, southern aristocrats, play the important roles in the tale, whose background is a feud between the Hawns and the Honeycutts, Jason's ancestors, and the desire of the people of the Blue Grass for the rich coal beds in the mountains. The interweaving of these elements and the criss-cross love affairs of the contending forces make the story.

Harrison, E. J. The fighting spirit of Japan and other studies; with 35 illustrations. N. Y., Scribner. 351 p. D. $3.50 n.

Author is a journalist who worked for an Anglo-Japanese newspaper for some years and saw a good deal of Japanese life. His interest in this volume is chiefly in athletics and more than half his book is devoted to explaining jiu-jitsu. As he takes up the psychological side of the art also, he is led to describe forms of occultism, religious belief and superstitions. He tells also of other forms of amusement, fencing and the theater, and he winds up with an article on the woman question.

Hose, C:, and McDougall, W: The pagan tribes of Borneo. In 2 v. N. Y., Macmillan. 15+283; 10+374 p. col. il. 8°, $14 n.

How to play baseball; by the greatest baseball players. N. Y., Crowell. c. '12-'13. 7+192 p. pls. D. $1 n.

Oscar Stanage tells how to become a skilled catcher, Jack Coombs unfolds the art of successful pitching, the famous Chance describes the requisites of a good first baseman, and "Ty" Cobb shows how to run bases in most approved fashion. Other big-league stars who have contributed chapters are Ed Collins, Harry Lord, Owen Bush, Tris Speaker, Frank Schulte, and Umpire "Billy" Evans. Perhaps the greatest lesson in book is that the three prime essentials for becoming a player of the first class are practice, persistency, and pluck.

Hutchinson, Edith Stotesbury. A pair of little patent leather boots; with 63 illustrations. Phil., Lippincott. c. 260 p. D. $1.50 n.

Letters written from Bob to Jack tell how the charm of a pair of little patent leather boots enticed a man half way across the continent of Europe. The incidents of the road, the varied types of people described, the illusive heroine, the "other man" and the final destiny of the little patent leather boots make an interesting story.

James, Herman Gerlach. Principles of Prussian administration. N. Y., Macmillan. c. 14+309 p. D. $1.50 n.

Beginning with an historical survey of Prussia from the earliest feudal state to the latest reforms of recent date, author passes to a consideration of the relation between state and nation, the organization of the government from the points of view of state administration, of local self administration, a discussion of the various ways in which the administration may act and the principles governing this activity. Following this, book takes up certain specific fields of administrative activity and considers the detailed regulations governing the acts of the administration in those directions. Index.

Kimball, Kate F. An English cathedral journey; il. with photographs. N. Y., Crowell. c. 13+304 p. D. $1.50 n.; limp leath., $2 n.

While there are thirty-seven bishoprics in England, each with its cathedral, and reference is here made in a general way to all of them, the eight largest or most noted have been picked out for special discussion. List of those fully described comprises Canterbury, Rochester, Lincoln, Durham, Ely, Salisbury, Lichfield and York. To Westminster Abbey, though strictly merely "the Collegiate Church of St. Peter," a chapter is devoted as being probably the best-known of all the religious edifices of England.

Knibbs, Harry Herb. Stephen March's way; il. by H. Weston Taylor. Bost., Houghton Mifflin. c. 277 p. D. $1.25 n.

Story of the northwest woods. Stephen Marsh's adventures on the way to the all but inaccessible region of Whisper Lake in the attempt to arrest a supposed murderer, and his love for the fugitive's daughter, provide the incidents for this tale of the forests.

McCann, Alfr. W. Starving America. N. Y., Doran. c. 270 p. il. por. D. $1.50 n.

Contains appalling revelations as to the state of food-products and food-supplies generally in United States. Author proves that many prevalent diseases are due to improper nutrition and that the history of life on the earth is practically the history of foods. Purpose of the book is two-fold—to expose abuses which are sapping the strength of the race, and to point out their remedies. Various legislatures of the United States are already preparing to give some of his suggestions the authority of law.

Martindale, Rev. Cyril C: In God's nursery. N. Y., Longmans. 7+233 p. D. $1.25 n.

Stories by a Jesuit priest. Contents: Yonder; Guardian angels; Red magic; Mors immortalis; The net; Roma felix; The twenty-firster; God's orphan.

More, Paul Elmer. The drift of romanticism; Shelburne essays, eighth series. Bost., Houghton Mifflin. c. 14+302 p. D. $1.25 n.

A slight departure from the former scheme marks this latest volume in the series. Instead of a collection of more or less independent essays, author has brought together a group of papers critical not only of the half dozen writers about whom they treat, but also pointing out significantly the expressions in literature of the romantic drift, the restless, seeking spirit, that is one of the most characteristic phenomena of the nineteenth century. Writers considered are William Beckford, Cardinal Newman, Walter Pater, Fiona Macleod, Nietzsche and Huxley.

Oppenheim, E: Phillips. The mischief-maker. Bost., Little, Brown. c. '12. 6+372 p. D. $1.25 n.

Tale of love and diplomatic intrigue by author of "The lighted way," etc. The publication of an indiscreet letter writen by Sir Julien Portel, a bachelor member of the British cabinet, to the wife of an ambitious M.P., results in Sir Julien's resignation and exile in France, where he is thrown in with the shrewd and resourceful arbiter of German politics, Prince von Falkenberg. The latter is striving to break down the entente cordiale existing between France and England. From this situation arise plots and intrigues which only the end of the story satisfactorily untangles.

Patterson, C: Brodie. What is New Thought?; the living way. N. Y., Crowell. c. 13+235 p. D. $1 n.

The most recent advances in the cult of New Thought are here set down, and the great lesson is repeated, that man is equipped spiritually, mentally, and physically to work out all his problems, to free himself from all kinds of bondage, whether of physical pain or disease, or of a mind possessed by bad thoughts and habits.

Raine, W: MacLeod. Crooked trails and straight; il. by D. C. Hutchinson. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham. c. 339 p. D. $1.25 n.

Luck Cullison, of the Circle C. ranch, is a cattleman. His daughter, Kate, is the pride of the countryside. Curly Flandrau is attracted by her from the first, though he met her under unfortunate circumstances. In defending himself from the consequences of a wild escapade, he shot and wounded her father. The cowboys of the Circle C. were just about to hang him when Kate intefered. In gratitude Curly attempted to aid in the reclamation of her brother, who was caught in the toils of "Soapy Stone's Outfit," a gang of desperadoes. A $20,000 robbery of the S. & W. Express; the kidnapping of Luck Cullison; the capture of the girl, who was forced to aid in the escape of one of the criminals, complete the plot.

Wilson, Woodrow, i.e., T: Woodrow. The free life. N. Y., Crowell. c. '08. 27 p. nar. D. bds., 50 c. n.; leath., $1 n.

Based upon a baccalaureate address delivered by President Wilson at Princeton University. The main theme is: "All individual human life is a struggle, when rightly understood and conducted, against yielding in weak accommodation to the changeful, temporary, ephemeral things about us.'

Woods, Litchfield. A superman in being. N. Y., Crowell. 328 p. D. $1.35 n.

The superman in this case is a distinguished English historian who has lost his sight. The relations existing between himself and his girl secretary, his "Eyes," as he calls her, make the story's complications. Plot concerns the superman's masterful solution of complications rising from the girl's falling in love with a young man of her own age and tastes, and his method of paving the way for the marriage of the two young people, which comes off in the last chapter.

Index to Spring Announcements.

In this department the announcement of books to be published during the Spring season are indexed under author and title, with as much information as publishers were ready to give in advance of publication. Books appearing before February 1 in our "Weekly Record of New Publications" are not included. The omission of titles of prominent publishers is only due to the fact that such publishers failed to respond to request for information.

Where binding is not stated the books are generally understood to be in cloth binding; "bds.," particularly in the department of Juvenile fiction, generally means illuminated or fancy board covers.

Spring Announcement OF Funk & Wagnalls Company

The Walled City:
A Story of the Criminal Insane.

By EDWARD HUNTINGTON WILLIAMS, M. D. Few persons, aside from those directly concerned with the care of the Insane, have more than the vaguest conception of what these unfortunates are like, or how they are cared for. This book will be a revelation to most intelligent readers. 12mo, Cloth. 250 pages, 8 full-page illustrations. $1.00, net.

The First Signs of Insanity:
A Timely Work on a Most Important Subject.

By BERNARD HOLLANDER, M. D., M. R. C. S. This is perhaps the best work ever written on the subject, especially so in its exposition of the prevention of mental deficiency and the treatment of acute or chronic stages of the disease. Cloth, 347 pages and index. $3.25, net.

The Heart:
Its Care and Cure, and the General Management of the Body.

By I. H. HIRSCHFELD, M. D. While he deals largely with the heart and circulatory system, Dr. Hirschfeld gives much attention to the general care of the body, with a view to avoiding not only disease, but weakness and premature decline. 12mo, Cloth. $1.25, net.

The Psychological Origin of Mental Disorders.

By PAUL DUBOIS, M. D., Professor of Neuropathology in the University of Berne, Switzerland. He deals with the causes of mental disorders with the same careful and discriminating intelligence that has been notable in his earlier volumes. It is the result of wide experience with disordered minds. 12mo, Cloth. 50 cents, net.

The Vital and Victorious Faith of Christ.

By GEORGE S. PAYSON, D. D. His thinking is independent and virile. 12mo, Cloth. $1.00, net.

The Apostles' Creed and the New Testament.

By JOHANNES KUNZE. One of his conclusions is that the Creed, instead of being derived from the New Testament, is, in essence, and partly in form, earlier than any piece of writing in the New Testament. 12mo, Cloth. 75 cents, net.

A Hundred Years of Missions.

By REVEREND D. L. LEONARD, D. D. Third edition. A revised edition was published several years ago, but so rapidly has new material accumulated that a still further revision has now been called for. With the additions Dr. Leonard has made, the work remains adequate and complete. 12mo, Cloth. $1.20, net.

The Mysteries of Life Series.

By ISABELLE THOMPSON SMART, M. D. Four volumes, "What a Mother Should Tell Her Little Girl"—"What a Mother Should Tell Her Daughter"—"What a Father Should Tell His Little Boy"—"What a Father Should Tell His Son." 16mo, 4 volumes, Cloth 75 cents Each; the Set, in a Box, $2.50.

The Preparation of Manuscripts for the Printer:
Fifth Revised Edition.

By FRANK H. VIZETELLY, Litt. D., LL. D. This somewhat enlarged edition contains a synopsis of the new Copyright Law of the United States, and an abstract of the Copyright Act of Great Britain that became effective July 1st, 1912. 12mo, Cloth. 75 cents, net.

Conversation:
What to Say and How to Say It.

By MARY GREER CONKLIN. It should find its way into many wisely ambitious circles. The author has for some time been engaged in uplifting work, in which polite conversation has had a leading share. 12mo, Cloth. 75 cents, net.

"Here is the Answer" in

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

The Merriam Webster

Even as you read "The Publishers' Weekly" you likely question the meaning of some new word. A friend asks: "What is white coal?" You seek the location of the Levant or the pronunciation of jujutsu. Who was Becky Sharp? Is Hongkong a city or an island? etc.

YOU often long for a quick, up-to-date, accurate answer. This NEW CREATION is an encyclopedia, equivalent in type matter to a 15-volume set. It answers all kinds of questions with final authority.

India Paper Edition: Printed on thin, opaque, strong, expensive India Paper imported for this edition. Has an excellent printing surface resulting in remarkably clear impressions of type and illustrations. What a satisfaction to own the new Merriam Webster in a form so light and so convenient to use! One Half the thickness and weight of the Regular Edition. Weight only 7 lbs. Size 12⅜ in. x 9¼ in. x 2½ in.

Regular Edition: Printed on strong book paper of the highest quality. Weight 14¼ lbs. Size 12⅜ x 9¼ in. x 5 in. Both Editions are printed from the same plates and indexed.

400,000 Words. 6000 Illustrations. 2700 Pages. The only dictionary with the new divided page,—characterized as "A Stroke of Genius."

NEW BOOKS

MY LIFE.

By AUGUST BEBEL. (With a Portrait.) An Autobiography of the Famous Leader of the Social Democratic Party in Germany.

This autobiography contains the story, from the inside, of the rise of the German trades-unions. Bebel gives a vivid description of the poverty of his early life and of his wanderings as a craftsman in search of work all through Germany—the Germany before the wars of 1864, 1866, and 1870-71, and before the Unification. Soon after his election to the Reichstag he was convicted of high treason for his attitude toward the Franco-German War and had to spend some years in prison. The international reputation of the author, the extreme frankness with which he writes, and the striking success of the movement with which he is identified make this a human document of remarkable interest and significance. 344 pages, 8vo, cloth; postpaid $2.14.

Francesco Petrarca and the Revolution of Cola di Rienzo.

A Study in the History of Rome during the Middle Ages. By MARIO EMILIO COSENZA, Instructor in Latin in the College of the City of New York.

In these pages the author draws a picture of Petrarch as a statesman. He has chosen for special treatment Petrarch's relations with Cola di Rienzo, because they constitute a story that is virtually a chapter in the history of Rome during the Middle Ages. The material of the present volume is drawn chiefly from Petrarch's letters, from the extremely important correspondence of Cola di Rienzo, and from the equally important archives of the Roman church. Nearly all of this material is new to the English language. The notes have been made detailed enough to make clear Petrarch's allusions. 335 pages, 12mo, cloth; postpaid $1.60.

THE WALTHAM WATCH CASE DECISION.

WE print elsewhere the largest portion of the decision of Justice Ray in the United States District Court in the case of the Waltham Watch Company v. Keene, which has not been reported in the legal periodicals, not because we believe that it will be sustained in the appeal which is to be taken, but because it cuts so wide a swathe in the current discussion of price maintenance. The very discursiveness of the opinion gives it wide range and involves obiter dicta and assumptions which are peculiarly interesting.

What is chiefly notable in the decision is the tendency to bow to public opinion and follow the supposed trend of the popular judgment in respect to combination and competition. This results in the general assumption that the equities are all with the price-cutters; that price-cutting is to be regarded as an admirable and wholesome course, in line with sound public policy and the general interest; and the further assumption that neither patents nor copyrights may be held by the courts legally to limit the operations of the underseller.

The court holds that patents and copyrights are in most respects on all fours as regards the nature of the monopoly which they create—a position which for the most part is not largely questioned. But the decision assumes, it seems to us mistakenly, that the higher courts have laid down the doctrine that patents and copyrights give their owners no monopoly control different from that which the courts have generally condemned in the trust cases. Judge Ray says: "The Supreme Court . . . has declared . . . that 'the sole liberty to vend,' given by the statute quoted to the author of a copyrighted book, confers no right to fix prices on resales." It would seem, however, as if this statement were too sweeping to be accurate, for what the Bobbs-Merrill case actually decided was that a contract of price limitation could not be implied through a notice dependent on the copyright notice, and the larger question is the one now pending before the Supreme Court. That there may be other grounds based upon patent and copyright monopoly on which prices can be legally maintained, has not, we think, been denied in the higher courts, even in the cases cited in Judge Ray's decision.

It has hitherto been generally understood that a combination of a nature offensive to the anti-trust law is that between parties who are business rivals, as between manufacturer and manufacturer or dealer and dealer. Judge Ray goes much farther than this in indicating in his opinion that an agreement between a single manufacturer and a single dealer may form a technical "combination in restraint of trade," and, when the agreement is one to provide a stated price on a patented article, is amenable to the law. This definition of "combination" seems to go beyond any previous judicial decision, and, indeed, goes further than did even the framers of the patent bill under discussion in the last Congress. Carried to its final analysis, Justice Ray's decision would seem to limit any kind or degree of arrangement between any two persons in connection with the sale either of a patented article or a copyrighted book.

In short, it is evident that, with every desire to follow closely judicial precedent, Justice Ray is imbued with the idea that price-cutting is inherently a just and legitimate action under all circumstances, and that net prices are equally, under all circumstances, inherently unjust and contrary to public policy. Of course, we of the book trade know that thousands of upright, public-spirited men of wide vision and the soundest integrity do not for an instant admit the truth of this assumption. The close division of the Committee on Patents, in its report upon the Oldfield bill, and the constantly growing tide of public and trade sentiment in favor of maintained prices, show how unwarranted such an assumption is. But, granting this first assumption, it is logical to make another: that the manufacturer or retailer who seeks the protection of the patent or copyright monopoly to give legal ground for price maintenance, is really seeking legal protection for an illegal act—a protection which, of course, any court is justified in promptly denying. The second assumption is, of course, as unwarranted as the first, but when assumed, it is not difficult to find, as Justice Ray has done, in an already considerable and occasionally seemingly conflicting body of decisions, ground for giving the assumption the force of law.

In view of the importance of the question at issue and the numerous contributions which are being made to it in cases pending, it would be well that those concerned do not take this decision too much to heart or lay too much emphasis upon it until it has passed the test of appeal.

A MOST interesting and rather novel feature of the argument for the American Publishers' Association in the United States Supreme Court in the "Macy" case, now awaiting decision, was the point made by Colonel Olin that the underselling by the Macy house was an unfair competition which sought to create a monopoly by ruining the sales of other dealers and concentrating sales in the hands of the underseller. This argument has a very large scope and importance, and it is interesting to note that in the valuable series of legal articles by Elton J. Buckley, which is being syndicated in several trade journals, that practical and suggestive authority on business law raises the question whether an injunction could not be obtained in a Court of Equity by a manufacturer against a dealer who is under-cutting prices, on the ground that this constitutes a wrong against the manufacturer and tends to reduce the value of his product and interfere with his business. The point made by Colonel Olin and the remedy suggested by Mr. Buckley should certainly have consideration, as there may open here a method of business protection quite outside of statute law pro and con and based solidly on the principles of equity and fair dealing.

WALTHAM WATCH COMPANY VS. CHARLES A. KEENE.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

SUIT in equity to restrain alleged infringement of certain letters patent; the alleged infringement consisting of the violation of a certain so-called license agreement or restriction as to the resale of watch movements and which fixes the price at which such movements shall be sold by dealers.

CRAWFORD, HARRIS & GOODWIN, of New York City, with MATTHEWS, THOMPSON & SPRING, of Boston, Massachusetts, of counsel, for complainant.

ADOLPH HIRSCH ROSENFELD, of New York City, for defendant.

RAY, District Judge.

After setting forth in condensed form the facts which the parties have, by stipulation, agreed upon, the opinion of the Court is as follows:

It is noticed that the watch movement as a whole, is not patented. The patents cover the frame, the spring barrel and dial holder, but, as stated, these are material and substantial features of the movement.

There is no allegation or stipulation that the defendant has purchased any of these movements from the complainant or that complainant has sold him any; the fair inference is that the complainant sold the movements to jobbers and that the defendant has purchased of such jobbers in the open market, but with knowledge of the "Waltham Contract Notice" and "Conditions of Sale, Bill to Retailers." The defendant has violated the provisions or terms of said "Conditions of Sale, Bill to Retailers," by selling at a lower price than that fixed thereby. The question is has he infringed the patents or violated a valid contract binding on him, in so doing? It is evident from the facts stipulated that the complainant was and is engaged in interstate commerce in making and selling these watch movements, and that its dealings with defendant, if any, were interstate commerce. It is also evident that every dealer who comes into the agreement or under the contract, that is, who purchases these movements of complaintant with knowledge of the conditions and assents thereto, becomes a party to an agreement and combination to keep up and control prices to users and thereby restrain trade and destroy competition. If the so-called contracts are lived up to, competition between dealers is absolutely eliminated. Under the terms of this printed slip placed in a box with each movement sold, if the purchaser pays $25.00 only for one of these 16 size Riverside movements, the Waltham Watch Company may take it from him on repayment of the price paid.

In Henry v. Dick Co., 224 U. S., 1, it seems plain from the statement of facts in the case and in the opinions that the patentee sold the articles covered by the patent for less than cost and did not reap his reward for his invention, that is, his royalty or consideration for the use of his patented invention or article by way of price charged, but by way of the limitation on the use of same, that is, the provisions that the supplies used with and on the machine should be purchased of the patentee and of his manufacture and at his price. It was in this way that the patentee protected himself or secured his reward for the use of his invention.

In the case before the court we have no such facts. It appears that the patentee has received and does receive his royalty or consideration for the use of the patented article —watch movement—when he sells the movement. In no event does he receive any added or further compensation or consideration for the movement. In no way is he concerned with the sales made thereafter by dealers or with the prices they charge or receive for the movements unless it be that he is interested to have the price of the movement maintained on the theory it would injure the standing of the movements as an article of commerce to have them sold for a lesser price than that fixed by the manufacturer.

It is plain that the Dick case is not within or covered by this language for the reason stated. The case at bar is within this holding for the reason the patentee or his assignee has sold and parted with the movements on receipt of his full price or consideration. He is to reap no further profit from the transaction. Having fixed and received his consideration, including royalty, he goes further and attempts to fix and control the price at which others shall sell—part with their interest in the watch movements. He is attempting to control the price of these movements in the open market after parting with title and possession and after having, as to the particular articles, exercised fully the right or monopoly the patent law gives him, viz.: the sole and exclusive right to vend the article.

And the Henry v. Dick Company case is not at war or inconsistent with the holding in the Folding Bed Company case, 157 U. S., 659, 666. The court said: "Upon the doctrine of these cases we think it follows that one who buys patented articles of manufacture from one authorized to sell them becomes possessed of an absolute property in such articles, unrestricted in time or place. Whether a patentee may protect himself and his assignees by special contracts brought home to the purchasers is not a question before us, and upon which we express no opinion. It is, however, obvious that such a question would arise as a question of contract and not as one under the inherent meaning and effect of the patent laws."

It will be noticed that the Supreme Court was here dealing with sales of patented articles (not licenses to use) for a price and expressly declares that "no article can be unfettered from the claim of his (the patentee's) monopoly without paying its tribute." Is not this saying that when the "tribute" is fully paid the article is freed from the monopoly of the patent? As declared in Adams v. Burke, and reiterated in this Folding Bed case, once "the tribute" is paid by a purchaser the articles passes clear and unfettered of the monopoly to the purchaser. This was the sum and substance of the holding of the Supreme Court in Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S., 339, a case arising under the copyright statute. (R. S., sec. 4952.) There the book was sold by the owner of the copyright at the price fixed by the owner of the copyright and a limitation, by way of license restriction on the price at which it should be sold by the purchaser who had fully paid the "tribute," was held not binding.

In the opinion in Henry v. Dick Co., supra, at page 47, it is said: "There is no collision whatever between the decision in the Bobbs-Merrill case and the present opinion. Each rests upon a construction of the applicable statute, and the special facts of the cases."

On the preceding page (46) the learned judge had pointed out the difference in the wording of the two statutes. It is pointed out that "To secure to the author an exclusive right to his writings, Congress provided that he should have 'the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing and vending the same.' Revised Statutes, sec. 4952. This is, in short, the sole right to multiply and vend copies of his production." The court then proceeds to say: "To the inventor, by sec. 4884, Revised Statutes, there is granted the exclusive right to make, use ('use' italicized) and vend the invention or discovery. This grant as defined in Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14 How., 539, 549, consists altogether in the right to exclude everyone from making, using ('using' italicized) or vending the thing patented. Thus there are several substantive rights, and each is the subject of subdivision so that one person may be permitted to make, but neither to sell nor use the patented thing. To another may be conveyed the right to sell, but within a limited area, or for a particular use, while to another the patentee may grant only the right to make and use, or to use only for specific purposes." It is noted that the court has specifically refrained from saying, when detailing the substantive rights of a patentee, that he has the right to sell and attach a binding condition for resale at a specific price fixed by him only or that such a condition by way of contract binds the purchaser so as to make a violation thereof an infringement.

The Bobbs-Merrill case, supra, dealt with resales at a specific price fixed by the owner of the copyright, and it is inconceivable that the learned judge, in giving the opinion in the Henry v. Dick Co. case, would have refrained from stating that among the substantive rights of the patentee is that of selling for resale at a specific price fixed by him, only, if it was intended to hold or intimate any such doctrine. That a patentee may create selling agencies and control the price goes without saying, but once sold and the royalty received by the patentee, the patented thing, so far as price is concerned, should be free of the monopoly.

a patentee or his assignee may sell a patented article subject to a condition that it shall not be sold by the purchaser at less than a prescribed minimum price. The court refused to even consider the question and said: "If we were to follow the course taken in the argument and discuss the right of a patentee, under letters patent, and then, by analogy, apply the conclusion to copyrights, we might greatly embarrass the consideration of a case under letters patent when one of that character shall be presented to this court." See what was said on this subject in Henry v. Dick Co., 224 U. S., page 43, 44.

I am unable to draw any distinction between the extent of the rights which the copyright law gives to the owner of a copyright and the extent of the rights which the patent law gives to the owner of a patent so far as sales are concerned. Each is given the sole and exclusive right to vend. Concede that the patentee has the statutory right to protect himself by contract in the lawful enjoyment of every right which his patent confers, the exclusive right to use and the exclusive right to vend, which includes the right to confer on another the right to use as that other sees fit or in the manner prescribed in the license granted by the owner, or to vend to another absolutely, that is, give complete title, or give to that other an interest in the thing vended only so that there is a joint ownership or tenancy in common, it goes beyond all reason, I think, to hold that, when the patentee has manufactured the patented article and fixed the value thereof, including his full royalty, or consideration, a compensation for the right to use and sell the article, he may put the article on the market for sale by selling to jobbers and dealers who purchase for such purpose and pay the full price fixed, and still limit and restrict them in the price they shall charge and receive for their own property. It is an attempt to monopolize and control prices and destroy competition and when a jobber or dealer takes a number of such articles for sale to others under such a restriction as to sales made by himself there is at once a combination to fix prices and restrain trade in contravention of a sound public policy. In Dr. Miles Med. Co. v. Park & Sons Co., supra, the court said: "Nor can the manufacturer by rule and notice, in the absence of contract or statutory right, even though the restriction be known to purchasers, fix prices for future sales." In the Bobbs-Merrill case, the court said: "To add to the right of exclusive sale the authority to control all future retail sales by notice that such sales must be made at a fixed sum would give a right not included in the terms of the statute, and, in our view, extend its operation, by construction, beyond its meaning when interpreted with a view to ascertaining the legislative intent in its enactment." I do not think the patent statute can be so unreasonably extended by construction, and clearly such a broad and sweeping construction is unnecessary to give the patentee full protection in the enjoyment of his exclusive right to vend. Having once vended the article and received his price and tribute his exclusive right to vend is exhausted and the article is freed from the monopoly. As to the exclusive right to vend the language of the patent statute is no broader or more comprehensive than the copyright statute. And I cannot see that the alleged right under the contract to retake the watch movement on paying to the purchaser the price paid by him in case it is less than that fixed by the patentee or his assignee operates to make the sale in the first instance a conditional one which the law will recognize. If a wise and sound public policy forbids the affixing of a condition to the sale of an article, not patented, as it does (Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. Park & Sons Co., supra.), whereby the purchaser and dealer must sell at a price fixed by the manufacturer, and if the affixing such a condition to a sale is not a statutory right conferred on the patentee by the patent law, then this condition to which I have referred is not one protected by the patent law and is a mere matter of contract, even if valid under the general law of contracts which the Federal Courts should not enforce by injunction, and which, if invalid, will not be enforced at all.

If the right to fix prices for future sales of articles like a watch movement, not itself patented or covered by a patent, but which embodies in its construction two or three subordinate but essential parts which are covered by patents, and which articles have been sold by the patentee or his assignee for the full price he is to receive, is granted by the patent statute, we do not find it conferred in express terms but by implication only, that is, we imply from the "sole right to vend" the right to fix prices for all future sales of the articles, the patentee having exercised his right to vend them and received his tribute. If the statute is so broadly construed we impute to Congress by a statute not clear or plain and by words not ordinarily open to such construction the purpose to confer on the patentee a right in contravention and violation of a sound public policy and one not reasonably necessary to protect the patentee and which is inimical to dealers and users, that is, the general public. That the sole purpose of the owner of these patents covering certain of the parts of these watch movements (not the movement as a whole) is to destroy competition and fix retail prices cannot be questioned. The legislative grant of the right to do an act, and doing of which, in the absence of the statute, violates public policy, should be plain and unambiguous, and couched in terms which are reasonably certain. If a statute can have no other purpose, then the language will be construed in the light of reason to make effectual such legislative intent; but when, as here, the patent statute was plainly intended to confer on the patentee the sole right to make, use and vend his patented machine, or process, and is silent as to fixing prices for future sales by dealers, the article having been sold and put on the market by the patentee as an article of commerce for sale and common use, I think it goes beyond reason to say that the sole right to vend carries with it the right to fix and control prices for future sales by dealers, the patentee having exercised his right to vend and received his full consideration, or tribute, for the grant to others of the right to vend and use.

There is no rule of public policy, so far as I am aware, which forbids a restriction on the use to which a patented article shall be put, or the mode and manner of using it, while public policy does forbid the fixing of prices for future sales unless the right to do so be granted by legislative enactment. I am opposed to monopoly in prices and think the rule in opposition thereto declared by the Supreme Court should be enforced. Agreements, however designed and under whatever pretense made, having in view and for their object the monopoly or control of prices to the user and consumer and the destruction of competition are void. But of course the Congress of the United States can authorize a monopoly as it has done in the case of articles covered by a patent, but that monopoly has its limits and a broad construction in contravention of public policy should be justified by the language of the patent statutes and not given when unnecessary to protect the legitimate rights of the patentee and make effectual the purpose of Congress in its enactment. If the Congress of the United States desires to authorize patentees to control and monopolize the retail prices of articles covered in part or in whole by a patent, after same have been once sold by the patentee or his assignee and placed on the market and after he has actually pocketed his full reward or tribute for the use of the monopoly by the public (as to the articles so sold) let it so say in plain terms. In view of Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, Henry v. Dick Co., Dr. Miles Med. Co. v. Park & Sons Co., and Standard Mfg. Co. v. U. S., decided Nov. 18, 1912, all recent declarations of the Supreme Court of the United States, I do not think the patent statute can be given the construction contended for, one which authorizes the patentee or his assignee to fix and control prices on resale after he has once sold, received his full consideration or tribute for the use of the patented article—in other words, after he has exhausted his sole and exclusive right to vend as then the article is freed from the monopoly.

Now in substance and effect so far as the general public and its interests are concerned, where is the substantial difference between that combination [the "Bath-tub trust"] and the one in the case at bar? If several owners of patents or licensees under patents, capable of conjoint use, and having the right to manufacture and sell or not to manufacture and sell at all, as they please, agree that they will not manufacture and sell they have but agreed to not do that which they have a right not to do. But, when agreeing to both manufacture and sell, they go beyond and not only fix the sale price at which they will sell, thus doing away with competition between themselves, but fix the price at which all future sales must be made by jobbers and dealers generally, thus doing away with all competition between jobbers and retail dealers as to articles which they have put on the market, they have clearly agreed and combined to restrain trade, and every jobber and dealer who comes in and assents becomes a party to such illegal combination which is illegal principally because it has for its purpose the fixing of prices for sales to the general public, the consumers and the destruction of competition which, if existing, would inure to the benefit of such consumers. Can it be that a patentee himself manufacturing under his patent and the sole manufacturer and thus controlling the entire output of the article, can bring into combination with himself all jobbers and dealers, or all jobbers and dealers in that article, and by agreement fix not only the price, including royalty, at which the patentee sells, but the prices on resale to consumers and thus do away with all competition and deprive the public of the benefits of competition? If the one transaction or combination transcends what is "necessary to protect the use of the patent or the monopoly which the law conferred upon it," it seems to me clear that the other does. The effect on the public is precisely the same in both cases. If two patentees, or licensees of a patentee, cannot combine with each other and jobbers to control prices on the sales of articles made by such patentees or licensees, how is it that one patentee or licensee who manufactures under his patent can so combine? There is a combination in both cases and, so far as the public is concerned, the one is as detrimental to the public interests as the other.

Is there any difference between the "exclusive right to vend" applied to an article made under a patent and once sold and put on the market and "the sole liberty of vending" as applied to a copyrighted book once sold and put on the market? So far as vending is concerned may the owner of the one right impose a condition fixing prices on resales that the other may not? Has Congress made any distinction between the "sole liberty" of the author or proprietor of the book "to vend" and the "exclusive right" of the inventor "to vend"? "For the purpose of determining the meaning, although not the validity of a statute recourse may be had to consideration of public policy." 36 Cyc 1111; Opinion of Justices, 7 Mass. (7 Tyng) 523; Jersey City Gas Light Co. v. Consumers Gas Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 427, 2 Atl. 922; Baxter v. Tripp, 12 R. I. 310.

In Mass., supra 524, the learned judges said: "Two of these maxims we will mention—That the natural import of the words of any legislative act, according to the common use of them when applied to the subject matter of the act, is to be considered as expressing the intention of the legislature; unless the intention, so resulting from the ordinary import of the words, be repugnant to sound, acknowledged principles of national policy. And if that intention be repugnant to such principles of national policy, then the import of the words ought to be enlarged or restrained, so that it may comport with those principles; unless the intention of the legislature be clearly and manifestly repugnant to them. For, although it is not to be presumed that a legislature will violate principles of public policy, yet an intention of the legislature repugnant to those principles, clearly, manifestly, and constitutionally expressed, must have the force of law."

In Jersey City &c. v. The Consumers &c., supra, the court held, "In construing a statute a purpose to disregard sound public policy must not be attributed to the law making power, except upon the most cogent evidence." In the opinion the court said, "Such a purpose is so manifestly opposed to sound public policy, so contrary to the spirit of our laws, and so clearly in conflict with popular judgment, that it should not be attributed to the legislature, except upon the most cogent evidence."

In Bird v. U. S., 187 U. S., 118, 23 Sup. Ct., 42, the court held, "The courts should avoid a construction which would render a statute ineffective or inefficient, or which would cause a grave public injury or even inconvenience, if another and more reasonable interpretation is present in the statute." If public policy forbids such agreements as to resales—fixing prices—shall we read into the patent statute by construction words which violate that public policy? Will not that work a public injury? That which public policy demands is for the public good. That which public policy forbids, works, if done, a public injury. So a statute should never be construed to violate the law of nations. The Betsey, 2 Cranch 64.

On this subject of fixing prices for resales by dealers to consumers the Supreme Court of the United States has declared that such limitations are opposed to a sound public policy and void; Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. Park & Sons Co., supra; and that a combination having that for its object is illegal; Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. U. S., supra; and that "the sole liberty to vend" given by the statute quoted to the author of a copyrighted book confers no right to fix prices on resales; Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, supra. What, in the light of these cases and others cited, is the reasonable and inevitable conclusion in arriving at the true interpretation and meaning of the patent statute quoted? The purpose of the one statute is to protect the author in the enjoyment of his "sole liberty" meaning right, to multiply and vend, while the purpose of the other is to protect the inventor in the enjoyment of his sole or exclusive right or liberty to vend. That "the sole liberty . . . of vending the same" as applied to a copyrighted book is the same as the "exclusive right to vend" a patented article is plainly stated in Bobbs-Merrill v. Straus (210 U. S., page 350-351), where it is said, "True the statute also secures to make this right of multiplication effectual, the sole right to vend copies of the book, the production of the author's thought and conception." To repeat, if the statute has given to the owner of the copyright "the sole right to vend" the book, the product of his thought and conception, and he may not and cannot when he sells such book, impose conditions fixing the price that must be charged on a resale, by what process of reasoning do we arrive at the conclusion that the owner of the patent, to whom is given by statute the "sole right to vend" the machine, the product of his thought and conception, may and can impose conditions when he sells such machine fixing the price that must be charged on a resale? Is the same right given in the same legal language by statute to the inventor any more sacred than that given the author, or to be broadened in the one case and narrowed in the other? Does "the sole right to vend" in the case of a patented article confer the right to fix prices on resale by the patentee's vendees, when "the sole right to vend" in the case of a copyrighted book does not confer such right on the owner of the copyright? If so why? True a book is not a machine, but it is an article of commerce when once sold for resale the same as a machine, and in both cases, in the absence of a statute, such a restriction on resale is void as opposed to public policy. The sole right to vend is given in both cases as a reward and protection for a mental conception. The purpose and policy of the statute is the same in one case as in the other, and I fail to discover any reason for giving a construction to the one statute different from that given the other so far as fixing prices on resales is concerned.

The principles enunciated by the Supreme Court of the United States are controlling, and there will be a decree dismissing the bill with costs.

PRICE LAW LIBRARY SOLD

For the first time in either a public or private sale, a collection of books, containing the early laws of Massachusetts, dating from 1672 to 1685; Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey and California, were sold at auction last Saturday at the rooms of Samuel T. Freeman & Co., Fifteenth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia. The books were a portion of the law library of the late William S. Price, a former prominent lawyer of Philadelphia. "The General Laws and Liberties of the Massachusetts Colony, Revised and Reprinted by Order of the General Court Holden at Boston, May 15, 1672. Edward Rawson, Secr.—Cambridge, Printed by Samuel Green, for John Usher, of Boston, 1672," was sold to the New York State Library for $625.

The New York State Library and the Massachusetts State Library were the largest buyers. The books not purchased by them were sold to dealers. The total of the sale amounted to about $1200.

THE INTERNATIONAL PUBLISHERS' CONGRESS.

THIS year's biennial session (the eighth) of the International Publishers' Congress will be held at Budapest, not in May, as previously announced, but June 1 to 5, inclusive. The programme, as tentatively adopted, is as follows:

PROGRAMME.

Sunday, June 1.

Afternoon.—Inspection of the city.
8 p.m.—Reception of members and their ladies by the Organizing Committee in the grand hall of the Vigadó (Redoute).

Monday, June 2.

9.30 a.m.—Session of the Executive Committee and the International Commission.
11 a.m.—Inaugural session. Nomination of vice-presidents and secretaries for the three sections. Official report on the completed works of the Permanent Bureau at Berne since the seventh congress.
3.30 p.m.—Sessions of sections.
5 p.m.—Visits to the principal publishing houses.
8 p.m.—Concert.

Tuesday, June 3.

10.30 a.m.—Sessions of sections.
3.30 p.m.—Sessions of sections.
7.30 p.m.—Official dinner, offered by the publishers of Hungary.

Wednesday, June 4.

Excursion to the neighboring mountains, or to Visegrád (by boat on the Danube).

Thursday, June 5.

10 a.m.—Sessions of sections.
3 p.m.—Ceremonial closing session. Fixing of date and place of the ninth congress.
7 p.m.—Private invitations.

RULES.

The rules governing the sessions of the congress are:

1. Only publishers of books, music, works on art, reviews and other periodical publications can take part in the congress.

Every member is expected to contribute 25 crowns towards the expenses of the congress.

2. The discussions will take place in the English, French, German and Hungarian languages. Interpreters for these different languages will attend every meeting.

5. The congress will be divided into three sections:

Section A will treat of the copyrights of authors and of matters connected with the publication of literary works.
Section B will deal with the sale of books.
Section C will discuss matters bearing upon musical publications and works on art.

6. The reports submitted to the congress will be published in the French language; the conclusions arrived at in those reports will be printed and distributed in English, French, German and Hungarian.

The list of papers for the congress is still incomplete. The papers which have already been promised, however, are as follows:

1. "Legal measures for the suppression of immoral literature."

Reporter—Mr. J. Wiesner, Budapest. Co-reporters—Mr. George Kreyenberg, Berlin; Mr. Stockmans, Brussels; Mr. Pompeo Vallardi, Milan.

2. "Foundation of an International Publishers' Museum."

Reporter—Dr. L. Volkmann, Leipzig.

3. "The rightful interests of publishers in the matter of cinematograph theatres and phonographs."

Reporter—Mr. Ferruccio Foà, Milan.

4. "The right of reproduction in photographic works."

Reporter—Mr. Arthur Seemann, Leipzig. Co-reporters—Mr. Longuet, Paris; Mr. Otto Eysler, Berlin.

5. "The maintenance of net prices in the sale of music by international agreements."

Reporter—Mr. E. Jespersen, Copenhagen. Co-reporter—Mr. R. E. Ceschina, Milan.

6. "Reduction of the recommendation duty on printed matter."

Reporter—Mr. Carl Junker, Vienna.

7. "Esperanto and the interests of publishers."

Reporter—Alexander Giesswein, D.D., Budapest.

8. "The interest of publishers in the establishment of complete national libraries."

Reporter—Mr. Carl Siegismund, Berlin.

9. "Foundation of a central bureau for the international realization of translation rights."

Reporter—Mr. Felix Heinemann, Berlin. Co-reporter—Mr. Carl Junker, Vienna.

The preparatory committee will do all in its power to render as pleasant as possible the stay in Budapest of all who take part in the congress, as well as to insure the success of the congress.

It is hoped that attendants will be accompanied by members of their families.

Information regarding traveling and hotel accommodation will be given on request.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

THE ninth annual entertainment and reception of the Mutual Benefit Association of the employees of the American News Company and its branches is to be held on Saturday evening, April 5, at Prospect Hall, Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn. The entertainment will be a vaudeville, under the direction of D. H. Keith; music by Charles Van Baar orchestra.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE annual meeting of the Booksellers' League, for the election of officers, was held at the Hotel Brevoort, Fifth Avenue and Ninth Street, last Wednesday evening. The attendance was large, so large, in fact (as it has been at all the meetings this year), that it has proved financially necessary to omit the April dinner of the League this year. The May dinner will be held, as usual, in conjunction with the American Booksellers' Association.

After the usual excellent "eats," the president called on the reports of the officers for the past year. In the absence of the secretary, Mr. Seiler, on account of illness, they were read by E. Byrne Hackett.

ANNUAL REPORT.

To the Members of the Booksellers' League.

IN presenting our eighteenth Annual Report your Board of Managers take special pride in announcing that the year just ended has been the most progressive year in the history of the League. When C. C. Shoemaker entered upon his duty as presiding officer a year ago he announced his determination to consummate certain plans to promote the interests and widen the usefulness of the League. We might mention first his campaign for a substantial increase in our roll of membership. That he succeeded in this, perhaps even beyond his own expectation, is a cold fact. At each meeting of your board from ten to twenty new members were presented for election to the total of 91 since last March. We believe this campaign should be continued during the coming year, since there are still a few desirable men in the trade in New York who are not yet members of the League. We hope that at each meeting of the new board the record for new names will be maintained even though the reading of these applications by Mr. Burkhardt has given him a financial chill. The second object Mr. Shoemaker wished to see fulfilled during his term was the plan to promote the efficiency of the League as an instructive institution as well as a social organization. Our constitution states, "The objects of the League are the cultivation of fraternal relations between its members and the furthering of the interests of their respective callings," but there has always been a tendency to neglect this provision of the constitution. At a dinner in March, 1903, a resolution was read and adopted, reminding us of this neglect and urging that at each meeting of the League some subject of interest in connection with the book trade be discussed, but this plan has been carried out only spasmodically. Many of the members may recall the dinner of October 14, 1903, which was devoted solely to a debate on the question, "Would a School for Booksellers be Desirable or Practicable?" The members present at that meeting were almost unanimous in declaring that such a school was both desirable and practical. The thoughts expressed by this discussion has remained instilled in the memory of our members, some of whom are now members of the Board of Managers, and has at last borne fruit, for to-day there really exists a School for Booksellers.

The Board regards as the greatest piece of constructive work done during the present year the practical beginning of an enterprise more closely related to the future of the book trade than any of which we know. For want of a better name we called this the Booksellers' School.

Realizing the need of some substitute for the apprenticeship and technical education which booksellers received in continental countries, a committee consisting of Messrs. Huebsch, Eisele and Schulte was appointed to take steps to increase the efficiency of booksellers' assistants. This committee after several sessions drafted a simple but comprehensive plan for a course of study, which includes all the essentials necessary to the conduct of a good bookstore. The plan includes everything from the seemingly petty details, such as mere cleanliness and order, wrapping packages, writing tags and labels, to the higher salesmanship, arrangement of stock, window display, proper use of the catalogues and trade aids, and the broad education that is necessary in order to make the bookstore not only a profitable commercial enterprise, but a dignified institution closely allied to the cultural.

The committee had no quixotic notion about being able to put the plan into effect immediately, but it is filled with faith and enthusiasm and recognizes that sooner or later the book trade must fall in line and bow to education if it is to take its place in the business world. In order to pave the way for the school which must ultimately be founded, the committee began a course of lectures, each delivered by some expert in the subject which he chose for his theme. The following persons, to whom we make grateful acknowledgment for their assistance, addressed the school. The date and subjects are also given:

April 30, 1912, Simon Brentano, "Conduct of Retail Bookstore from the Practical Viewpoint."

May 25, 1912, Miss Mary W. Plummer, "Some Features of a Bookseller's Equipment."

June 25, 1912, F. L. Reid, "Suggestive Salesmanship."

October 29, 1912, Miss I. C. Mudge, "How to Find Books."

November 26, 1912, Clive Mecklem, "How to Prepare for Holiday Business."

January 28, 1913, Daniel Nye, "The Bookseller's Vocation from the Point of View of Publishers' Representative."

February 20, 1913, Ernest Eisele, "Some Methods of Selling in Foreign Bookstores."

Satisfactory arrangements were made with the Liberal Club so that we have the use of an excellent and quiet room for these gatherings. The addresses were delivered at one o'clock. Each was followed by a general discussion in which the attending members took part, and by two o'clock everyone was ready to return to his work. It seems wisest to meet during the early afternoon hour instead of attempting to have the sessions at night.

Those who may have been skeptical about the desirability of the enterprise were converted by the enthusiasm of those who attended. It is deplorable, however, that the attendance has been limited to only a fraction of the trade. We solicit the earnest effort of every bookseller to increase the effectiveness of this agency for promoting the best interest of our calling.

DINNERS.

We have assembled at seven monthly dinners during the year. The date and speaker are given in chronological order:

March 20, 1912, Annual Meeting, Mr. Nijhoff, of The Hague; E. Eisele; F. Stechert and Karl Blacht, of G. P. Putnam's Sons.

April 17, 1912, E. T. Tomlinson, on "Children's Books"; Algot Lange, on "In the Amazon Jungle."

May 16, 1912, American Booksellers' Association, Edward Howard Griggs, W. Morgan Shuster, Meredith Nicholson, and Samuel Merwin, who read Owen Johnson's paper on "Criticism."

October 16, 1912, Trade Night, Frank L. Reed, of Grosset & Dunlap, David Gibson; and paper prepared by J. I. Murray of W. R. Jenkins Co., read by Mr. Harcourt.

November 20, 1912, Army and Navy Night, Commander Edward L. Beach, Lieut-Com. Yates Sterling, Jr.; Capt. Paul B. Malone, Capt. C. E. Kilbourne.

January 15, 1913, Philadelphia Night, John Bach McMaster; Dr. E. P. Oberholtzer; and Thomas A. Daly.

February 21, 1913, Ladies' Night, Ida Tarbell, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Ida V. Simonton.

The average attendance at these dinners has been the largest in the history of the League, and is regarded as a compliment to those who had to do with the preparation of our social functions.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

The Employment Bureau, which, through the courtesy of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, is being constantly brought to the attention of the trade, has received 41 applications for positions and 37 calls for men and boys to fill positions vacant in the trade. Fees amounting to $3.45 were paid to C. E. Bonnell, manager. This amount would indicate that only a small number obtained positions through the Employment Bureau, but we are of the opinion that many candidates obtained positions but forgot to report the fact to the manager. No advance payment is demanded, and no "follow-up" system has been required of the manager.

18TH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE TREASURER, FEB. 1, 1913.

Receipts.

Cash on hand Feb. 1, 1912.....	$379.39
Received for dues.....	1,235.20
Received for tickets.....	208.00
Received from Employment Bureau.....	4.75
		$1,827.34

Disbursements.

Printing, stationery, school and miscellaneous.....	236.36
Six monthly dinners.....	$1,234.95
Cash on hand.....	356.03
		$1,827.34

Our disbursements exceeded the income by $23.36.

The report of February 1, 1912, showed a membership of 238, as against 288 for the current year; this, with applications not yet acted upon, will bring our membership above the 300 mark. This most satisfactory increase is due to the efficient and painstaking efforts of our worthy president, C. C. Shoemaker, who has spared neither time nor personal expense in furthering the interests of the League; all honor for this marked progress and the interesting meetings is due him.

The attendance at each of the six dinners has passed the hundred mark, with a banner meeting in January of 154 causing the treasurer many sleepless nights and much worry to find ways and means to provide the funds for the increased attendance from the small dues of $5 per annum, but the end of the year finds us still solvent, with a fair balance. This is a most satisfactory showing, as, in addition to the increased expenditures for entertainment, the School for Booksellers, inaugurated the past year, has added considerable to our expense account. This important and praiseworthy undertaking, intended to benefit the whole bookselling fraternity, whether members or not, is deserving the support of all who have the interests of our beloved calling at heart. Our membership consists of the most progressive booksellers and publishers in New York and many other cities, every house of any importance being represented by one or more members. Death has deprived us of one member the past year, that of Harry Peyton Steger, of Doubleday, Page & Co.

Respectfully submitted,
A. G. SEILER, Secretary.

The election of officers resulted in the breaking of a hitherto unbroken League precedent — the splendid service of President Shoemaker during the past year being rewarded by a re-election. The following were elected members of the Governing Board of the League for the three-year term:

A. G. Seiler, William J. Macmillan, F. D. Lacy, C. E. Butler, W. T. Haskell, George W. Whitworth.

Following the business session, Fremont Rider, of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, under the caption, "What I would do if I were going into the retail book business," outlined suggestively the opportunities for "book-trade independence" lying before the trained bookstore clerk to-day. He pointed out the necessity for systematizing the pursuit of book orders, and the practical value of thorough knowledge of the possible bookbuyers, as well as the present bookbuyers within the bookstore's selling radius.

The other speaker of the evening, Frank K. Mathiews, who is connected officially with the Boy Scout movement, spoke upon the choice of books for Boy Scout readers. He described the way in which the Boy Scout organization was preparing to endorse worthwhile boys' books, but denied that any juveniles had, as yet, received that official endorsement.* He spoke of the proposed reprint

* While it is true that no books have as yet received the official endorsement of the Boy Scout organization we are informed that unofficially several titles have received commendation to the extent that the Boy Scout organization is furthering their distribution.—ED. P. W.

series, Every Boy's Library, to be selected under Boy Scout auspices, and outlined the qualities that a good boy's book should have.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE POSSIBILITY OF PROFIT.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Very nearly two years since, there was in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY a communication signed Modern Bookseller, showing that if all the books purchased by the writer in the month of June of that year had been sold at full retail price, whether regular or net, a gross profit of .286 would have been realized. If the regular books had been sold at retail at the average reduction on such books, the gross profit would have been 25 per cent. This possibility was still further diminished by additional discounts upon net and regular books both if sold to libraries. To this add loss on books which proved unsalable.

Last summer a representative of a leading publishing house insisted that conditions had so changed that the bookseller could then make a profit on his gross sales. As the month of October would be perhaps most favorable to this contention, from the standpoint of the publishers, because of a special discount allowance for quantity purchases, not possible at other seasons, I made a careful record of all net books bought at varying discounts up to and including 30% in one class and all regular books bought at 40% discount in another. The result was that .344% of my total purchases were for net books, and .057% for regular books at 40% discount. The average reduction on net books being 27% against a 28% expense. The regular books at 40% if sold at 25% discount would have left a gross margin of 18% against a 28% expense. If sold at a discount of 33⅓% to libraries, a gross profit of .09% against a 28% expense. If these sales of regular books were equally divided, one-half at ¼ and one-half at ⅓, there would have been a gross profit of 14% against an expense of 28%.

The additional loss, consequent upon a discount to libraries upon net books and upon unsold copies of books to be sold later at a loss is not a hopeful subject for contemplation. Neither is it possible to imagine a profit upon the remaining 60% of purchases with the present handicap of the older copyrighted books, retailed at "any old price," with the able assistance of "rebinds" to increase the margin of loss to dealers. However, developments of the last few weeks are such as to make the dealer take courage.

W. B. CLARKE.

OBITUARY NOTES.

THOMAS PETER KRAG, the Norwegian novelist, died, March 14, at Christiania. He was born at Kragero, Norway, in 1868. He enjoyed a considerable reputation in his native land because of his descriptions of the wild scenery along the Norwegian coast. His best-known works were "Ada Wilde," 1896; "Ulf Ran," 1897; "Gunvor Kjeld," 1904; and the drama, "Kong Aagon," 1894.

DR. JOHN SHAW BILLINGS, director of the New York Public Library, ex-deputy surgeon-general in the U. S. A., and an author of international reputation, died March 11 at the New York Hospital. He was a many-sided man of affairs. He had served in the Civil War, in which he had been brevetted for distinguished services, and was an authority on hygiene and on details of hospital work, as well as an expert librarian. He was born in 1838 in Switzerland County, Indiana, and was graduated in the arts at Miami University in 1857. In 1860 he completed the course at the Medical College of Ohio, at Cincinnati, and in the same year won his master's degree at Miami. Later he was honored with degrees by half a dozen famous institutions of learning in this country and Europe. During the years between 1891 and 1896 Dr. Billings was professor of hygiene in the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, and a frequent lecturer at Yale, Harvard, Columbia and Johns Hopkins. Among his published works were "Principles of Ventilation and Heating," 1886; "Index Catalogue of the Library of the Surgeon-General's Office, U. S. A." (16 vols.), 1880-1894, and "National Medical Dictionary" (2 vols.), 1889. Five children survive Dr. Billings.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

REV. HARRY H. BEATTYS, brother of Frank D. Beattys, the publisher, writes in "Smith and the Church" a reply to Meredith Nicholson's much discussed Atlantic Monthly article, "Should Smith Go to Church?"

As announced in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of February 1, the initial number of the Constructive Quarterly, published by George H. Doran Co., appeared the first of March. The plan is to bring together members of all Communions who will write constructively of the Christianity they profess and practice. Not neutral territory, but mutual understanding is sought. "Religion and Labor," "The Russian Church," "Reforms of Pius X." are a few of the articles—all by well-known writers—in the current number.

THE South American, a new semi-monthly magazine of sixteen pages, made its first appearance on the 15th. Wing B. Allen, editor and manager, is also president of the South American Publishing Company, which publishes the magazine at 1133 Broadway, New York. L. A. Allen is secretary and treasurer, and P. O. Hagen the advertising manager. The number contains articles booming Latin America as a field for American capital and enterprise, a talk on the opportunities offered by Brazil, and other articles on South American affairs.

PERSONAL NOTES.

S. F. McLEAN, formerly of New York, and at one time secretary of the Booksellers' League, has given up his connection with the Jones Book Store, Los Angeles, and purchased a farm near Mesa, Ariz.

HAROLD PAGET sailed last week, by the Baltic, to be in England until early in May, partly on business, partly on pleasure bent. During his absence, Miss C. Paget takes charge of the Paget literary agency, as usual.

H. R. TABER, for the last ten years manager in the book department of the Harvard Co-operative Society, in Cambridge, has left the employ of the society, to assume a similar position with Wolcott's Book Store, in Syracuse, N. Y.

OWING to ill health F. H. Nourse has resigned the position as manager of the Emporium Book Department, San Francisco. Miss Millicent Jacobs, his assistant, has assumed the duties as manager. Her friends among the bookmen will be greatly pleased to learn of her deserved promotion and will wish her every success.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, son of the novelist, and himself a writer of prominence; Dr. William J. Morton, son of the discoverer of ether, and a nerve specialist; and Albert Freeman, a promoter, were found guilty, on the 14th, of having used the mails to defraud in connection with mines in Canada. Judge Mayer sentenced Hawthorne and Morton to imprisonment in the Atlanta Penitentiary for a year and a day, their terms to date from November 25, the day the trial began, and Freeman to five years and three days' imprisonment, his term to begin January 1.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE Putnams announce that they have in train for publication an English translation of "The Bondwoman's Son," by August Strindberg.

DESMOND FITZGERALD has ready two new novels, "Hearts of Grace," by Philip Verrill Mighels, and "Heart of My Heart; Mother and Child," by Ellis Meredith.

A NOTED specialist, winning prestige unfairly, plays an important part in "The Career of Doctor Weaver," by Mrs. Henry Backus, just published by L. C. Page & Co.

A KINDLY tribute to the urban cat has been prepared by Gelett Burgess and Burges Johnson, and published as "The Cat's Elegy," in novelty booklet form by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"A CATECHISM OF LIFE," by Alice M. Buckton, full of suggestion for those who wish to give children wise instruction in hygiene of the body, is just published by E. P. Dutton & Co.

WHITAKER & RAY-WIGGIN Co. announce as ready a very limited memorial de luxe edition of Joaquin Miller's poems. The set is complete in six volumes, each volume autographed.

E. J. CLODE's latest publication is a sea story, "The Girl of the Golden Gate," by William Brown Meloney. On their spring list is Pierre Le Clercq's "The Enchanting Mysteries of Kathleen Carter."

SAMUEL A. WHITE, author of "The Wildcatters," "The Stampeders," etc., has written another tale of adventure, "Empery: a Story of Love and Battle in Rupert's Land," published by the Outing Publishing Co.

ON the Lippincott spring list is "My Senior Year," a book for permanent record of college happenings. Each page is decorated, and each section has full color decorations. A number of styles, varying in price, are offered.

THE Century Co. has in press a new tale of adventure and romance by Bertha Runkle, author of "The Helmet of Navarre," to be called "The Scarlet Rider." "The Woman in Black," by E. C. Bentley, is published to-day.

F. G. BROWNE & Co. have imported an edition of "Italians of To-day," by Richard Bagot, an authority on Italy, whose well-known books—"The Casting of Nets" and "A Roman Mystery"—are, respectively, in a thirteenth and eighth edition.

THE immense popularity of "Within the Law," now playing in New York, insures a welcome for the novelization of the play, by Marvin Dana and Bayard Veiller, published last Saturday by the H. K. Fly Co. The novel is illustrated in color.

NATHAN HASKELL DOLE, the well-known Boston author, is engaged in writing a book on Switzerland, which will be added during the year to L. C. Page's popular Spell Series, which already includes volumes on France, Italy, England and Holland.

"BARBARA GWYNNE" ("Life" in the English edition), by W. B. Trites, comes to us with an unusual record — 50,000 copies of this American book by an American writer on an American subject have already been sold in England. It is now published here by Duffield & Co.

THE YALE UNIVERSITY PRESS has purchased the building of the Hopkins Grammar School, situated in an open block near the Yale campus. The Hopkins Grammar School has possession until February, 1914, so that the Press will continue in its present quarters for at least a year.

BOTH English and French text are given in an edition of Julien Offray de la Mettrie's "Man a Machine," just published by the Open Court Publishing Co. Frederick the Great's "Eulogy" on La Mettrie and extracts from La Mettrie's "The Natural History of the Soul" are included.

AUGUSTA HUIELL SEAMAN offers this spring a new story, historical, as usual, and this time concerned with one of the daring episodes of early American history—LaSalle's attempt to found a colony at the mouth of the Mississippi. "Little Mamselle of the Wilderness" will be published by Sturgis & Walton Co.

The Motor Boys Series has safely reached and passed its thirteenth volume, and will soon be increased by a fourteenth. "The Motor Boys on the Border; or, Sixty Nuggets of Gold," is promised by Cupples & Leon Co. for April 1. New volumes in the Racer Boys Series and Baseball Joe Series will also appear before long.

THE just-published Kauffman book, "Running Sands," has for its theme the problems brought about by the marriage of a girl of twenty-five to a man of fifty. Among other Dodd, Mead publications of the week are "The Gloved Hand," a detective novel, by Burton E. Stevenson, and "Bringing Up the Boy," by Carl Werner.

SIR GILBERT PARKER'S "The Judgment House," the story of a strong man and a capricious woman, and how their lives affected others, is just published in book form by the Harpers, after a successful serial run. Louise Kennedy Mabie's "The Wings of Pride"—social life in New York—is another recent publication.

THE American rights for the translation of Julien Benda's "L'Ordination," called "the novel of the winter in Paris," a story of the eternal rivalry of masculine and feminine heart, have been secured by Henry Holt & Company. The translation is in the hands of Gilbert Cannan, who translated "Jean Christophe," and will probably be ready in May.

THE Association Press has just published "Engagement and Marriage," by Orrin G. Cocks, a practical consideration of marriage as definitely related to social and economic conditions, and a straightforward discussion of all that it involves; and "David Livingstone," by Silvester Horne, of especial interest in this centennial year of Livingstone's birth.

THE Educational Dramatic League announces that a committee is being formed to read all plays submitted by members of the league clubs, and to give advice to the writers. Prizes will be offered, and the best plays will be produced by league companies. Among those on the play-reading committee are Percy Mackaye, Mrs. Charles Caffin, Mrs. Francis McNeil Bacon, Jr., and Mrs. Hubert Osborne.

Two novels, widely differing in theme, have just been published by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.: "The Impossible Boy," a tale of bizarre adventure, by Nina Wilcox Putnam, an author of but twenty-five years, whose stories and poems have frequently appeared in the magazines; and "A Step on the Stair," Octave Thanet's psychic tale of a man permitted to take one step on the stair of the great unknown.

NEVER have Arsène Lupin's powers been so taxed as they are in Leblanc's new mystery tale, "The Crystal Stopper," just published by Doubleday, Page & Co. The apparently worthless little bit of glass, won and lost a dozen times, bring him into a contest which at times is a struggle for his very life. Lupin's old-time enemies are not forgotten, and a host of new ones appear as the story progresses.

A NEW book by Prof. George Santayana, "Winds of Doctrine," is about to be published by the Scribners. Its sub-title is "Studies in Contemporary Opinion." All of its essays are extremely timely, especially the one called "The Philosophy of M. Bergson." Among others are "The Philosophy of M. Bertrand Russell," "The Intellectual Temper of the Age," and "The Genteel Tradition in American Philosophy."

JOHN GRAHAM BROOKS, whose "The Social Unrest" was in a way a pioneer volume, has ready a new work, "American Syndicalism," an attempt to get down to the real meaning of the syndicalist movement, which may accurately be described as a world movement. This, and Edwin R. A. Seligman's "Essays in Taxation," nominally a revised edition, in effect a new work, are valuable Macmillan publications of the week.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY announce the following books to be published April 12: "Gettysburg," by Elsie Singmaster; "Justice and the Modern Law," by Everett V. Abbott; "The Value of Organized Speculation," by Harrison H. Brace; "Strange Stories from the Lodge of Leisures," translated from the Chinese by George Soulié; "Stowe Notes," by Edwin Martin Taber; and "A History of Lexington, Massachusetts," by Charles Hudson.

CLEVELAND MOFFETT and Oliver Herford have collaborated in a new detective story, "The Bishop's Purse," full of lively complications. Two more Appleton novels which promise mystery lovers a good time are "The Amiable Crimes of Dirk Memling," the story of a temperamental thief, no less than a genius in his chosen calling; and "The Mind-Reader," by Max Rittenberg, the adventures of a mental healer and hypnotist, with a clientele ranging from peasants to kings.

THE recent loss of Thrace to the Turks was practically the loss of the whole war. Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett was the only correspondent to arrive in time to follow the swift series of catastrophes that made this short campaign. In his book, "With the Turks in Thrace," just published by Doran, he describes the whole campaign and its enormous importance. Mikkelsen's "Lost in the Arctic," the story of the Alabama expedition, 1909-1912, is another important work from the same publisher.

JACOB DEUTSCHBERGER, a bookdealer, of 105 Fourth Avenue, New York City, was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court, before Magistrate Freschi, Wednesday afternoon, charged with selling obscene books, and was held in $500 bail for trial. Deutschberger was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Anthony Comstock, of the Society for the Suppression of Vice. According to the affidavit of Mr. Comstock, the bookdealer sold books that were unprintable. They were written out in longhand, and sold at prices ranging from $5 to $50.

On April 5, a "modest Dartmoor comedy," by Eden Phillpotts, "Widecombe Fair," planned some twenty years ago, will be published by Little, Brown & Co., together with "The Uphill Climb," a virile Western story, by B. M. Bower, author of "Lonesome Land"; and "The Quarry," by John A. Moroso, a realistic story of an innocent young man sent to Sing Sing. For May, Mary Imlay Taylor has written "The Long Way," and Kate Jordan has woven a romance of Greenwich Village, New York City, in her novel, "The Creeping Tides."

We note in a contemporary a complaint so obviously legitimate that we are surprised the practice complained of continues. The writer says: "I have repeatedly noticed that some publishers issue their new publications in picture wrappers, generally very attractive, but place the title at the bottom of the wrapper. As a window dresser, liking to show the side of books when they catch the eye, I find this very awkward, because it is not always possible to show the full side of a book, but when building up three-quarter or half-side can be easily shown, and if title and author's name are along the top of wrapper it must be of benefit both to the publisher and bookseller."

BUSINESS NOTES.

New Britain, Conn.—J. L. Hamlin & Co., booksellers and stationers, have sold out to the Dickinson Drug Co.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—E. W. Clarke is adding a book department to his postcard and novelty store, and will be glad to receive catalogues, announcements and visits from salesmen.

Weekly Record of New Publications

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent by publisher for record. Books received, unless of minor importance, are given descriptive annotation. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow. For books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, etc.

Allen, Ja. Lane. The reign of law; a tale of the Kentucky hemp fields. N. Y., Macmillan. c. '00-'13. 385 p. D (Modern lib. of fiction.) 50 c. n.

Andrews, Mrs. Rebecca Graham Ayars. Benjamin A. Ayars, his ancestry and descendants. Vineland, N. J., [The author.] 17 p. por. 8°, pap., 50 c.

Ashmead-Bartlett, Ellis, and Ashmead-Bartlett, Seabury. With the Turks in Thrace. N. Y., Doran. 10+335 p. pls. fold. map, O. $3 n.

Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett was one of the few correspondents in time to join the Turkish army in Thrace before it was scattered. He was present all through the disastrous campaign here described. "The Turks," he says, "embarked on a vast game of make-believe in order to throw dust in the eyes of Europe." Then follows the tragic account of the series of false steps which produced a downfall only equalled in modern times by Napoleon's in Russia—the hurried and inefficient mobilization of the Turkish forces, the heroic efforts to rally the broken army and the relentless advance of the Bulgarians on Constantinople.

Atherton, Mrs. Mary Alderson Chandler. The Chandler practical shorthand, for schools, colleges and self-instruction. Ed. of 1912 (8th ed.). Bost., Chandler Shorthand Pub. c. '12. 17+313 p. 12°, $2.

Austin, Mrs. Mary Hunter. The green bough; a tale of the resurrection; decorations by Fk. Bittner. Garden City, N. Y., Doubleday, Page. c. no paging, front. S. bds., 50 c. n.

Author of "A woman of genius," etc., has studied the Bible closely for years, and here gives her account of the "Resurrection." Book is got up as an Easter gift.

Backus, Mrs. H: The career of Dr. Weaver; il. by W: Van Dresser. Bost., L. C. Page. c. 8+379 p. D. $1.25 n.

Story woven about the responsibilities and problems in the medical profession of the present day. Dr. Weaver, a noted specialist, and head of a private hospital, had allowed himself to drift away from the standards of his youth in his desire for wealth and social and scientific prestige. When an exposé of the methods employed by him in furthering his schemes for the glorifying of the name of "Weaver" in the medical world is threatened, it is frustrated through the efforts of the famous doctor's younger brother, Dr. Jim. There is a girl who plays an important part in the lives of both men.

Beach, Belle. Riding and driving for women. N. Y., Scribner. c. 14+295 p. il. 8°, $4 n.

Beach, Mary E. The descendants of Thomas Beach, of Milford, Connecticut. Hartford, Ct., Case, Lockwood & Brainard Co. 51 p. 8°. (Priv. pr.)

Beattys, Harry H., D.D. Smith and the church; with an introd. by Meredith Nicholson. N. Y., Stokes. c. 16+118 p. D. 60 c. n.

Some months ago Meredith Nicholson published in the Atlantic Monthly an article entitled "Should Smith go to church?" It stated the question of church-going from the point of view of the average business man, and put several searching questions. Mr. Beattys has taken these for his text, and here publishes a common-sense reply from the minister's standpoint. Among the chapter headings are: Who is Smith?; Why Smith does not go to church; Why shouldn't Smith play golf instead of going to church?: Is Smith wrong, or the church?; What shall the church do about Smith?

Beecher, Eunice. The law of a household. Bost., Small, Maynard. plans, tabs., 8°, $2 n.

Benedict, W: H. The first settlers of New Brunswick; read before the New Brunswick Historical Club, Thursday, March 21, 1912. New Brunswick, N. J., [The author.] 18 p. fold. map, 8°, pap. (Priv. pr.)

Contents: To the disinherited; What socialism is and why it is; The virtuous grafters and their grave objections to socialism; Why socialists preach discontent; How the people may acquire the trusts; The "private property" bogeyman; Socialism the lone foe of war; Why socialists oppose "radical politicians"; The truth about the coal question; Deathbeds and dividends; If not socialism—what?

Bentley, Edm. Clerihew. The woman in black. N. Y., Century Co. c. 300 p. D. $1.25 n.

Sigsbee Manderson, of sensational fortune and career, dies suddenly at his English country home, startling the financial world into a panic. Then comes the report that he has been murdered, and robbery is not the motive. Why murdered then? London detectives have never been called into a more baffling mystery. At every turn every theory is blocked by proof that the trail is wrong, yet every trail leads into some curious tangle, which only deepens the mystery of Manderson's lonely life—lonely in spite of a young and beautiful wife—and strange death.

Bowen, Rob. Adger. Uncharted seas; with a front. by C: M. Relyea. Bost., Small, Maynard. c. 401 p. D. $1.35 n.

Author's first novel. Scene is a small southern town full of narrow-mindedness and ill-nature. To this town comes a famous opera singer, whom the natives consider very wicked. Theodosia Berrisford, living with her blind mother utterly cut off from companionship, makes a friend of the singer. Her mother learns of it, bitterly opposes and resents it, finally revealing to the girl their true relationship, the singer's identity and her own implacable hatred. What this mystery is and its effect on the various characters make the story.

Custer, Milo. The Custer families. Bloomington, Ill., [The author.] 2+3-22 p. pls. pors. facsim., 8°, pap., $1.50.

Dark, Sidney. The man who would not be king; being the adventures of one Fenimore Slavington, who was neither born great, nor achieved greatness, but had greatness thrust upon him, much to his own discomfort and the discomfort of many others. N. Y., J: Lane. 29+298 p. D. $1.25 n.

Scene is Slavingtonville, a place that recalls to mind the Spotless Town of Sapolio fame. The king thereof is a man named Slavington, and his castle a factory for the manufacture of peptonized soups. Upon the death of this man, his nephew is persuaded, sorely against his will, to mount the throne. Having a passion for books and none whatsoever for the manufacture of soup, his reign is a period of such turbulence as never before was known in Slavington. He finally abdicates in favor of his next of kin, leaving Slavington shaken as by an earthquake.

Davis, C: Gerard. Motor boating for boys. N. Y., Harper. c. 85 p. il. figs. D. 50 c. n.

Ellis, Eliz., ["Beth Ellis," pseud.] The king's blue riband. N. Y., Doran. c. '12. 5+304 p. D. $1.25 n.

England in Jacobite days is the scene. Sir Anthony Claverton, ruined, seeks an heiress in marriage and also to save her from a villain. He falls in love with Sylvia as soon as he sees her, but she rejects him as a fortune hunter and declares she will marry the other man. Anthony goes to France to get, for a wager, the Cordon-bleu order always worn by King Louis. Excitement and adventures follow thick and fast, involving Jacobites, Sylvia, Anthony and many others, but in the end love triumphs and all is well.

Farnam, H: Walcott. The economic utilization of history and other economic studies. New Haven, Ct., Yale Univ. c. 8+220 p. D. $1.25 n.

Contents: Economic utilization of history; Some questions of methodology; Economic experimentation in the United States; Pathology of progress; Economic progress and labor legislation; Fundamental distinctions in labor legislation; Purposes of labor legislation; Practical methods in labor legislation; Acatallactic factors in distribution; Socialized business enterprise; Social myopia; Signs of a better social vision.

Farnol, Jeffery. The amateur gentleman; with il. by Herman Pfeifer. Bost., Little, Brown. c. '12-'13. 11+625 p. D. $1.40 n.

Period is the early nineteenth century, the scene England. There are country things and people, gentlemen of fashion and fine ladies, romantic adventure, and hand-to-hand encounters, and most of all true love. Barnabas Barty, a country-bred youth, son of the retired champion pugilist of England, is left a fortune; he sets forth for London to "become a gentleman," has many adventures, meets people of widely different types, and falls in love with a fascinating heroine. By author of "The broad highway."

Fox, Fk. Problems of the Pacific. Bost., Small, Maynard. 294 p. O. $2 n.

The Pacific is the ocean of the future. There will be decided, in peace or in war, the next great struggle of civilization which will give as its prize the supremacy of the world. Shall it go to the white race or the yellow race? If to the white race, will it be under the British flag or the flag of the United States, or of some other nation? This is the problem discussed. Index.

Harré, T. Everett. The eternal maiden; a novel. N. Y., Kennerley. c. 279 p. D. $1.20 n.

Story of the frozen north and the Eskimos. Annadoah is the loveliest of the maidens and Ootah loves her very greatly. He goes walrus hunting with the other men, his prowess and skill giving him a most successful catch. He returns exulting in his wealth, thinking to win Annadoah, but finds her with Olaf, a white trader. Later Olaf deserts her, then her child is born blind and the natives decide to kill it. She runs away, is pursued, caught and the baby thrown over a cliff into the sea. Ootah dives to its rescue, but both are lost, and, too late, Annadoah realizes that Ootah is the man she loves.

Kauffman, Reginald Wright. Running sands. N. Y., Dodd, Mead. c. 353 p. D. $1.35 n.

A man who has spent thirty years in making his fortune in western mining, and makes it, comes to New York at fifty, as strong, vigorous and young, to all appearances, as if he were twenty-five. He is twenty-five, he tells himself, and sees nothing out of the way in falling madly in love with a beautiful girl of eighteen. She thinks she loves him; is willing to love him; wants to love him; but at eighteen how can she tell? And so they marry. Then the girl finds that youth calls to youth, and falls in love with a young Austrian. Her husband decides to kill himself to leave her free to marry the man whose religion forbids divorce, but his courage fails and he goes back to her.

A crystal stopper, won and lost a dozen times, plays an important part.

Mabie, Louise Kennedy. The wings of pride. N. Y., Harper. c. 323 p. front. D. $1.30 n.

Scene opens in New York, where Olive Muir, beautiful, arrogant and spoiled, lives with her mother with every luxury surrounding her. Mrs. Muir asks Alice Prentice, a girl from Ohio, to visit them against Olive's wishes, and she makes Alice miserable. Then just as she repents of her hardness she learns that Alice is her sister, Mrs. Muir only her adopted mother and disreputable Mr. Prentice is her father. What she then does, how she goes to her own mother, and the part a fine young lawyer and some grafters play in her life make the rest of the story.

McCracken, Eliz. The American child; with il. from photographs by Alice Austin. Bost., Houghton Mifflin. c. '12-'13. 13+190 p. D. $1.25 n.

Instructive book saying a good word for the much criticised American child. Author considers the various phases of child life as they are seen at home, at play—among actual children—in the schoolroom, the library and the church. Book is composed, not of general statements about collective children, but of the narrative of actual observations of real, human, individual children. Chapters appeared in the Outlook.

Things begin with the brilliant composer, Calvert Lanier, and his floating studio, who obtrudes himself upon the most exclusive summer colony on the Atlantic Coast, and in one morning succeeds, by and with the consent of each, in kissing the three most exclusive and fairest members of the colony, and later, gets all at sea, in more senses than one, with two of them. There are plenty of complications in the plot of this amusing tale.

Savage, C. Maclean. The turn of the sword; with front. in colors and decorations by the Kinneys. Chic., F. G. Browne & Co. c. 8+378 p. D. $1.25 n.

Tale of old Japan opens with a gathering of feudal lords and ladies, before whom the young son of a reigning prince tries his skill in swordsmanship with the son of a nobleman. By an unfair blow the prince is overthrown and apparently slain. A faithful serving man spirits him away, and leaves him with a poor peasant who does not know his identity. The boy's memory has been destroyed by the blow, and he grows up in the peasant's household. Father of his opponent seizes the government. His rule drives the peasantry to an uprising and the real prince becomes the leader of the revolt, and engaging in mortal combat with his old adversary is again struck down with a sword blow. With this second stroke his lost memory returns and he discovers his identity.

Warne, Julian Fk. The immigrant invasion. N. Y., Dodd, Mead. c. 336 p. il. diagrs., maps, charts, O. $2.50 n.

Book tells where our great foreign population of more than 13,000,000 came from, the conditions under which it has moved to the United States, its racial composition, and how it has distributed itself in this country. It points out some of the innumerable national problems which its presence here has given rise to. Immigration of the present, which continues to make large additions to our foreign-born population, is contrasted with that of the past, and the differences in economic conditions pointed out. The newer immigration and its characteristics are also distinguished as to races from the older immigration. Conclusions of the author have been reached after fourteen years of study and investigation and are supported by an array of convincing facts. Index.

Weaver, E: E. Mind and health; with an examination of some systems of divine healing; with an introd. by G. Stanley Hall. N. Y., Macmillan. c. 15+500 p. (14 p. bibl.) D. $2 n.

Study of the influence of mental states upon health has now entered upon the stage of exact investigation by both psychology and medicine. Book embodies some of the latest results of the psychological principles, as the author sees them, which govern health and promote healing. After a discussion of the influence of mind upon health, religious ground is entered upon and an examination of the various systems of healing of a religious character from the standpoint of present day scientific mental healing is made. Both the strong points and the weaknesses of these are pointed out. Index of subjects. Index of names.

Wells, Carolyn. The Maxwell mystery; with a front. in color by Gayle Hoskins. Phil., Lippincott. c. 302 p. D. $1.25 n.

First scene is a gay house party at a country place in New Jersey. On the second night, the dance which is in progress is startlingly interrupted by the announcement of what looks like a double murder, committed in the library. It proves, however, that only the man has been killed, the girl being merely wounded and found unconscious with a revolver in her hand. Many of the guests are suspected at different times, but it is only when Fleming Stone, the detective of "A chain of evidence," is called in that the mystery is solved.

Wells, H: G: The discovery of the future. N. Y., Huebsch. c. 61 p. D. 60 c. n.

Author shows that by utilizing the intellectual forces which have enabled us to write the history of the past, we may with reasonable certainty forecast the future.

Westrup, W: The debt. N. Y., Crowell. 8+359 p. D. $1.35 n.

Plot deals primarily with the experiences of a young countryman from the "veld," who determines to try his luck in Johannesburg. He seeks out a worldly wise city man, whose life he has shortly before this time had the good fortune to save, and unintentionally he gives the latter ample opportunity to repay the debt with compound interest. The whirl of the big city, with its gay life, its pretty girls, its villains, and its plots and intrigues, proves almost too much for the open-minded, open-hearted hero. With his friend's powerful help, however, he escapes, somewhat narrowly, from various difficult positions, and in the last chapter events occur to take him back to his life in the open country.

White, S: A. Empery; a story of love and battle in Rupert's Land; front. in colors by Thornton D. Skidmore. N. Y., Outing Pub. c. 332 p. D. $1.25 n.

Story of the Hudson Bay Company at Oxford House post and their sworn enemies and rivals, the Nor'westers. The Factor's daughter has run away with Black Ferguson, a Nor'wester, who deserts her when he sees Desirée Lazard. Bruce Dunvegan loves Desirée and tries to shield her from Ferguson, but she is made captive, the manner of her rescue being most dramatic. There are plenty of adventures and descriptions of life among the fur traders.

"The Night-Riders is making Ridgwell Cullum famous"

Since date of publication

The Night-Riders

has been right close to the top in the lists of best sellers in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, and other cities. And deservedly so. People everywhere are reading it with enthusiasm, and talking about and the tremendous character he has created in the person of the blind but powerful ranch owner.

The NIGHT-RIDERS

will make you a Night Reader

"The author writes with a style so fresh and virile, and dovetails his episodes so effectively that it is almost impossible to lay the book aside before completion."—Philadelphia Press.

"The plot is ingenious and contains some real surprises at the end. The best character in the novel is the blind ranch owner, who in cruelty and savage temper equals Robert Louis Stevenson's blind man in the opening chapters of 'Treasure Island.'"—San Francisco Chronicle.

"Mr. Cullum has caught very truly the whimsical attitude he (the cowboy) likes to assume when it pleases him and his facetious style of expressing himself. It is an exciting tale, full of incident, with a touch of mystery."—New York Times.

"There is no break or digression in the story, which grips the reader from the outset and holds the attention as powerfully as a magnet does chips of steel until the last page has been reluctantly turned."—Boston Globe.

A Splendid Romance of Love and Adventure

The Road of Living Men

By WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT
Author of "Routledge Rides Alone."

Frontispiece in color. $1.25 net. Postpaid $1.37

Every lover of good fiction looks for the books which come all too seldom, the books in which there is the spirit of youth, of romance, of adventure and the warmth and color of real life. To all such readers we recommend this new novel. From the first scenes in China during the Boxer Rebellion until the end there follow swiftly scene after scene of splendid conception, told with a swing and go and a growing intensity of emotion that sweeps one along until the fine poetic climax. It will be pronounced one of the year's greatest romances.

An Absorbing and Baffling Mystery

The Maxwell Mystery

By CAROLYN WELLS
Author of "A Chain of Evidence," etc.
Illustrated in color by Gayle Hoskins.
$1.25 net. Postpaid $1.37

An elusive mystery and a delightful love story in which Fleming Stone, the great American detective, again figures. Well planned crimes are often those which are easily ferreted out, but in this case the solution of the mystery on account of its very symplicity eludes all investigation, and the climax is a complete surprise.

The Books Being Talked About

While this monthly selected list cannot by any means include all the most worth while current publications, the converse is true—that all books listed in it are, for one reason or another, significant. Not only private buyers, but neighborhood libraries and reading clubs—which must often buy carefully—will find it of value in making selections for purchase.

Fiction

THE HAPPY WARRIOR. By A. S. M. Hutchinson. 447p.front.12mo. Little, B. $1.35n.

Unusually appealing life from babyhood of the "Happy Warrior," kept out of estate and titles by chance, but rising by sheer manhood above all adversity.

Book Chat of the Month

Henri Bergson, the eminent French philosopher, whose "Creative Evolution" has been a non-fiction best-seller for two years past, paid us a visit last month which brought him into no little public prominence. He came to deliver a series of lectures at Columbia University. Professor Bergson's works have been translated into many languages, and his influence is making itself felt in many lands in philosophy, in literature and in art. Unlike most philosophers that preceded him, he is a prophet honored in his own land. Dr. Slosson of the Independent, in his excellent essay on Bergson, describes Bergson's popularity as a lecturer as follows:

> His lecture room is the largest in the College de France, but it is too small to accommodate the crowd which would hear him. A cosmopolitan crowd it is that on Wednesdays awaits the lecturer. French, Italian, English, American, German, Yiddish and Russian are to be distinguished among them; perhaps the last predominates among the foreign tongues, for young people of both sexes come from Russia in swarms to put themselves under his instruction. The polyglot audience is silent as M. Bergson ascends the rostrum and begins to talk, in slow, smooth, clear tones, accented by nervous gestures of his slender hands. His figure is slight and his face thin and pointed, almost ecclesiastical in appearance. His quick turns of thought break through the conventional forms of logic and find expression in striking and original similes drawn from his wide range of reading. Bergson's students call him "The Lark," because the higher he flies the sweeter he sings.

An acute thinker, Professor Bergson possesses a masterly, clear and direct style, presenting his views on most difficult themes with fascinating clearness.

Once more we have an author-President—indeed the name of Woodrow Wilson appears four times among the publishers' spring announcements. Of present-day interest is his "The New Freedom," published by Doubleday, Page & Co.—"an attempt to express the new spirit of our politics." Harper is bringing out a new edition of his "George Washington," Houghton Mifflin publishes three essays by the President in "Mere Literature," a limited Riverside Press edition, and T. Y. Crowell has ready in new and attractive form his forceful address, "The Free Life."

卐

A. S. M. Hutchinson, the young English author, whose second novel, "The Happy Warrior," has placed him at once among the writers who count, would have entered the army but for defective eyesight. After studying medicine for a while he took the plunge into journalism. Four years ago his first novel, "Once Aboard the Lugger," appeared, and gave the author an immediate standing with lovers of good literature. Mr. Hutchinson did actually begin writing his second novel in 1909, and two years later he thought he had finished it. But when "The Happy Warrior" was read over for a final revision it did not please its author, and he decided that it must be rewritten. Thus it was not finally completed until last September. It certainly Another important prize novel contest, most ingeniously contrived, has just been announced by the English publishing house of Hodder & Stoughton, of whom George H. Doran Company are the American agents. It is open only to residents of the British Colonies, for the best novel, the scene of which is laid in their colony or dependency. The novel may picture the present-day conditions or past history of the country. They will divide the sum of £1,000 as follows: Class 1—Prize of £250 for the best novel submitted from a native or resident of the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland; Class 2—Prize of £250 for the best novel submitted from a native or resident of the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand; Class 3—Prize of £250 for the best novel submitted from a native or resident of the Empire of India; Class 4—Prize of £250 for the best novel submitted from a native or resident of British Africa and any other colony or dependency not included in Classes 1, 2, 3. The adjudicators are: For Canada, Sir Gilbert Parker; Australasia, Charles Garvice, Esq.; India, A. E. W. Mason, Esq.; Africa &c., Sir H. Rider Haggard. Full particulars as to conditions, etc., can be obtained on application.

This is the first time that a translation of the Jewish Bible, or what Christians call the Old Testament, ever has been made by a group of Jewish scholars representing all shades of Judaism, from the most orthodox to the most reformed. Heretofore, individuals have made translations of the Bible in whole or in part. We point with pride to our special edition this weak containing a writeup of the city of Plunkville illustrated without regard to cost.
We have printed a mammoth edition of 840 copies for distribution over the States & territories. It is a rather sad commentary on the enterprise of our citizens that we state that the combined assistance that we have recieved in our effort to Boom this town amounted to $3.84-100. Two dollars of this amount was contributed by our Mayor on our agreeing not to print the portrait of him we had made by our special artist. The balance is the result of two weeks hardcanvasing for ads, and the price of our support for of the late populist Candidate for congress.

When in 1857 Silas Q Plunk laid out the then little town of Plunkville little did he think it would be the city it is today. If he had he would have kicked himself down avenue C, torn up his plans and saved trouble. General Plunk came to Texas in 1427 about one mile in advance of the sheriff of Sangaree Co. Ohio. He and the sheriff made friends and laid our the town of Plunkville. Some difficulty arising about corner lots, the sheriff laid out Colonel Plunk

This bank was established by Mose Mordecai in 1880. Col. Mordecai, now the president of the bank, whose portrait we present in this issue, is one of our sterling citizens. He is conscientious to a degree in his management of the bank. We left the door of his private office open one day last winter and allowed a draft to enter. With care, as he would say himself—and Mr. Lauder remains a careful man, although he makes a princely salary—he may perhaps have this amount to his credit in two or three years. He has sent his son, John Lauder, to Cambridge, and he will be able to help him with the book when the time comes for it.

This story is a romance of Russian low life, and is to be published during the present year.

THE COMBINED MAZE.*

It was a meeting "for men only" that turned the normal drama of John Randall Fulleymore Ransome's life into gray, uninteresting tragedy. Up to that June night when he was inveigled into that ill-advised congregation he had borne his torch nobly in Section 1 of the London Polytechnic Gymnasium along the path of cleanness, of health, and the splendor of physical perfection. His adolescence was one long struggle and battle against flabbiness and weediness, for he lived by day in a mahogany pen, where with a dozen others he made invoices of chairs and tables and all sorts of furniture. But he was an "indomitable and impassioned worshipper of the body and the earth," and as clean in mind and body as life itself.

Ranny knew Wynny Dymond and liked her tremendously. If Violet had not reached out her ruthless hand—perhaps after all that meeting for men only merely precipitated what Violet in hot resolve had vowed should be, for Violet too was like life in her relentlessness! But the preacher looked at Ranny that night—Ranny, who was to meet Violet after the meeting to which he had accommodatingly gone with a young man pledged to "bring a friend"—as he said that the bodies of men are the temples of holiness, and besought Ranny to remember the sin that he had never committed, to remember the shame he had never felt, to cast into outer darkness the sensual thoughts he had never had, and to dismiss the abominable intentions he had never known.

And the magic worked profoundly, as all the secret, mysterious obscurities of Ranny's soul seemed illumined for him by that provocative address. Hours later Violet said to him simply, "It had got to be." A few weeks later, because of Ranny's simple code, their marriage "had got to be." A few years later Violet elopes with Ranny's pet detestation in the way of man, the embodiment of flabbiness, and Ranny is left to fall passionately and tenderly in love with Wynny.

The rest is indictment of the English divorce law, hideous enough it would seem to make decent-minded Englishmen rise up tomorrow to change the code that cares for the rich and leaves the poor to drag their chains through life. For four or five years Ranny saves up his twenty pounds needful. But the money goes once for his father's funeral, and when he has got it saved again Violet comes back. Violet should have been dealt with more harshly than she is. If Miss Sinclair had let Ranny alone, he might not have crumpled into such spineless submission. However, duty is still the word of command to most of the world.

has the essential qualifications—an exciting and sustained plot, a picturesque setting, diversified and well drawn characters, both thrilling and absurd situations, bright and natural conversation and lots of it, action on every page, and a love story turning out happily at the end. Not to mention one of the most alluring "jackets" of recent seasons.

In the dead of winter, the deserted summer hotel midway up Baldpate Mountain suddenly begins to attract self-invited visitors who variously explain their appearance to the others. Amongst them are a spectacled, elderly professor, a young and beautiful lady reporter—though no one suspects her vocation until the end—a handsome and prosperous young novelist, a disreputable political boss and his yellow-faced heeler, the misogynist hermit who has a wife in Brooklyn, and several other characters who do strange and unexpected things. There is a mysterious package of money—only $200,000 in bills—which everybody is trying to lay hands on, and which, of course, comes into possession of the only one in ignorance of what is really going on—the handsome and prosperous young novelist. Things happen, and then more things happen, and then more things, and so on with a rush until the last pages, where the clouds are cleared away, where poetic justice is duly rendered, and where the handsome hero takes the golden-haired heroine in his arms.

The author has written an unusually good book of its kind. Though the whole thing is told in a tone of burlesque, the characters are well drawn and consistent. And the author manages to incorporate a good deal of comment, serious and flippant, into the pages without detracting from the interest or hindering the forward rush of action.

JOYFUL HEATHERBY.*

"Joyful Heatherby," the new novel by Payne Erskine, author of "The Mountain Girl," is, as was its very successful predecessor, a delightful love story with a delightful sylvan setting. To be sure there are latter parts where city life, and a particularly sordid feature of it at that, is made the scene of action; but the dominant impression left after reading the book is one of woods and streams and quiet and peace such as Mark Thorn found in Woodbury Center.

Woodbury Center was a small New England coast town, and there Mark, an artist, betook himself in solitude to fight away the "monsters" of false ideals in art. He meets many quaint and interesting characters, amongst them a high-bred old Quaker lady and her beautiful, charming daughter, Elizabeth; the brothers Nathaniel and Jack, one of whom was Joyful's lover; Grandfather and Grandmother Heatherby, who now are entirely wrapped up in their young granddaughter—all that the sea has left to them, and Joyful herself, a beautiful, charming young creature who dresses the unknown world up in garments borrowed from her beloved "Faerie Queene" and other teachings of her French mother.

Mark half falls in love with quaint and lovely Joyful, and tries to run away in time—to return to handsome, worldly Louise Parsons, his fiancée. Then disaster falls upon little Joyful, and events pile themselves one upon another. There is a scene in a Boston gilded house of evil, scenes in Newport amongst the supposed social elite, scenes in New York and in California, all before the clouds are cleared away and the lovers find each other again, in the idyllic spot where the action started off. The love interest is maintained throughout, always pervaded by an atmosphere of idealism, and it is safe to prophesy that the book will gain as great a popularity as did "The Mountain Girl."

THE LEE SHORE.*

"The Lee Shore," by Rose Macaulay, won the first prize in a $5000-novel competition offered by Hodder & Stoughton. Peter Margerison is the hero—if the name of hero may be given to one who climbs not up the social ladder, but down, starting with the English nobility and ending with a baby, a mongrel dog and a donkey on an Italian shore, happier in poverty than in wealth. The story opens when little boy Peter, in the first week of his first term at school, discovers Urquhart, "Urquhart, of the sixth, captain of the fifteen," who is the son of Peter's mother's first husband. The great Urquhart recognizes this somewhat unusual step-relationship the day that Peter falls upon his shoulder and puts it "out," by taking charge of matters and putting the shoulder "in" again with kindly but painful zeal. From this delicate attention dates Peter's lifelong devotion to Denis Urquhart.

Peter is an orphan, and half-way through Cambridge his uncle's death obliges him to set to work. No profession is especially adapted to a frail, unlucky young man who can't play football or ride a motorcycle, and wasn't particularly good at books. Peter's only assets are a passion for beautiful objects, a fancy for embroidering, and wonderful ability in winning friends. It is extremely difficult for Peter to be unhappy. Almost as difficult as to be angry. His bread-winning begins by his acting as purchasing connoisseur for a wealthy collector, who does not know what he wants to collect. This amiable occupation might have continued indefinitely had not Peter and his patron not gone to Italy for well heads and garden furniture. Here Peter finds his half-brother Hilary (related to him on the other side of the house from the Urquhart step connection), seriously engaged in plucking a half-blind old nobleman (also a step connection). Peter, in his efforts to extricate Hilary, involves himself in the scandal and alienates Urquhart (blood related to half-blind old nobleman). These relationships are really quite simple when one has read the first chapter. Peter, having, along with his other disabilities, a wholehearted loyalty to anyone in trouble, sticks to Hilary and his out-at-the-elbows family, gets a casual job in London, gets a casual wife and a baby; loses the job, loses the wife, and for a time it seems as if he would lose the baby, too. When everything is gone except the baby—named Thomas—Peter and Thomas go to Italy to "the merry, shifting life of the roads, the passing friendships—the olive hills—the sweetness of starry flowers—the sudden blue bays—the cities, like many colored nosegays." They live by Peter's embroidery. And this is the "Lee Shore," where Peter finds happiness and peace.

THE CROCK OF GOLD.*

This is a Very Exceptional Book for Very Exceptional People. If you're quite, quite sure you're a very exceptional person, read it—if you're not quite sure, read it and find out.

It's like nothing that's ever been written before, as far as I know. If you took a bit of Edward Lear, and a scrap of Lewis Carroll, mixed in some Don Quixote, some Yeats, some Gregory—even some Synge, a handful of Greek mythology, a goodly portion of Irish folk-lore, and plenty of delightful philosophizings, the result would be—well, probably not in the least like "The Crock of Gold." No, the recipe cannot be starred as one "tried by myself and found to be certainly safe and for the most part simple." It would be as difficult to produce a "Crock of Gold" as to concoct that historic mixture that had a flavor of "cherry-tart, custard, pineapple, roast turkey, toffee and hot buttered toast."

Perhaps, Very Exceptional Person, you will understand "The Crock of Gold" when you've read it. I haven't found any one yet who does, but that's because they're so interested in what is coming next that they can't take time to stop and work out the puzzling parts. Incidentally, if anyone is able to predict what is coming next you may be perfectly sure he's been looking ahead.

It may be all an allegory—that last sentence about freeing the philosopher from prison rather suggests that he is the Intellect of Man. However, in any case, his adventures are absorbing. He lived in Ireland, in the depths of a deep wood, with his wife, the Thin Woman of Inis Magrath, and two children, Brigid Beg and Seumas Beg, one their own, the other the child of the other Philosopher and the Grey Woman of Dun Gortin. Which was which they had forgotten.

The Philosopher gave wise counsel to all who came for it—his wife cooked his stirabout and kept up a perpetual quarrel. She was wrong, mostly, but after all it would be annoying to have a husband like the Philosopher. He could philosophize for hours at a time—nothing disturbed him. "I hope there's lumps in it!" screamed the Thin Woman once in a fit of fury (she referred to the stirabout). The reply of her husband, who had been obstinately sustaining a philosophic monologue, indicates his usual level placidity. "'Finality is death. Perfection is finality. There are lumps in it,' said the Philosopher."

It's no use. I tried to write an outline of the plot and crossed it all out. There are Leprecauns in it—Irish fairy folk, you know (I don't think we have any over here), and some perfectly delightful policemen (I don't think we have any of them, either), and two gods, Angus Og and Pan. If you don't like the part where Angus Og pleads for the love of Caitilin you're not the Exceptional Person I took you for. It may be that that exquisite song is the key to this whole strange book.

And still the wonder grows that one small book can compass pure humor, riotous nonsense, wit, philosophy, pathos (undiluted), and beauty of the breathless kind.

THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE.*

In this rushing generation, it seems to have become already the fashion to sneer at our erstwhile inimitable Sherlock Holmes, as, after all, rather amateurish; therefore the present writer probably risks his reviewing reputation (sic) in confessing a sustained and enthusiastic enjoyment of the latter's exploits. He knows then of no higher praise to give "Jennie Brice" than to say that it comes nearer than any American detective story he remembers to have read to fitness to enter the Sherlock Holmes class. It isn't a slavish imitation of the Sherlockian deductive method; it is distinctly American and distinctively Rinehartian! If you prefer the exotic flavor of baronial and cosmopolitan England to the humble atmosphere of a fourth rate Pittsburg boarding-house "Jennie Brice" will there fall short. (But Mrs. Rinehart—give her credit for that—possesses also the rare gift of humor.)

Seldom is the balance of mystery throughout a swiftly unwoven tale so carefully kept. Alternately up and down before our mental vision hover the scales of judgment. Here, just before the final denouement, stand the most essential facts: Jennie Brice, a third rate actress, disappears during a Pittsburg flood time from her boarding house. Her husband, who has quarreled with her repeatedly and whom she feared is suspected of the crime. On the night of her disappearance he is known to have cut loose the boat of the house—and with bloody hands, as shown by the rope. His wife's fur coat and shoe turn up in the flood; a broken knife blade is found in their rooms, a bloody towel, and—strange point—a slip of torn paper on which is written rope, knife, shoe, towel and Horn— A prized onyx clock is missing. Later a headless corpse, which might have been Jennie's, is fished out of the Ohio bearing a very peculiar scar. It is testified, however, by a young newspaper reporter of apparently unquestionable veracity that Jennie Brice was in his company the morning after the alleged murder; and a naive country girl from Horner, Pa., testifies that Jennie boarded with them some days afterward—and after the discovery of the body. During all this time her husband had the best of alibis: he was in jail. Incidentally—further mystery—the impecunious husband is suddenly flush with money.

Needless to say the whole tragedy, for there was a tragedy, and a most unsuspected one, is solved and that most ingeniously. The book will give two hours of as breathless reading as Mrs. Rinehart has as yet given us.

THE HARBOR MASTER.*

A little forgotten hamlet on the most dangerous part of the dangerous coast of Newfoundland is the scene of this romance. Frowning cliffs, sterile soil, and tyrannous sea afford little comfort or luxury to the dwellers in Chance Along, until one of their number, a born leader, awakens them to a realization of the possibilities of wresting a living from the sea in other ways than in perilous and often unprofitable fishing. For years the fishermen on that forbidding coast had gathered in a few scanty luxuries thrown up by the sea after a big wreck. But not until Black Dennis Nolan took the leadership of the harbor-folk did the frequent wrecks become a regular and most lucrative form of livelihood for them. They are a wild, uncouth and savage lot, these Newfoundland fishermen, of Irish descent apparently, by their names and by their unthinking allegiance to the church as represented by good Father McQueen. They have not come to us too often in our fiction yet, and the unusual circumstances of their lives give a tinge of novelty and of romance to this tale.

There are adventures wild and fierce in this story, and yet it is not a tale of adventure in the cheaper sense. It presents a striking and not easily-forgotten picture of an unusual setting, and the character of Black Dennis Nolan, the Harbor Master, is a bit of portrait painting done with rare ability. It was before the days of general steam ocean travel that Dennis Nolan became a wrecker and master of a band of wreckers. The wooden sailing vessels fell an easy prey to the treacherous currents, the wild gales and the ravenous rocks of that inhospitable coast. But one of these wrecks proved Nolan's undoing, for it brought to him, as sole survivor saved by his personal courage and reckless daring, a being from another world, a beautiful singer on her way to New York, fresh from London triumphs. How Flora Lockhart's presence in the little hamlet and the infatuation she inspired in the heart of the Harbor Master almost wrecked the village itself and broke up the bonds of family and friendship, is told in a simple, graphic style that leaves the picture vivid in the mind of the reader. The description of the panic in the submerged cabin of the wreck, when the island looters find themselves unexpectedly confronted by the floating body of a drowned woman, is as good a "thrill" as one could desire. The story holds the reader from first to last, and opens glimpses of a strange corner of the world in pictures that linger long after we have put down the book. An effective frontispiece in color by John Goss adds to the aliveness of the story. J. Marchant

THE NIGHT BORN.*

After putting down a book by Jack London one feels stirred by his bigness, his daring, and his power to create and magnify physical beauty and strength. It seems good to be alive when reading of his women, with their deep sea blue eyes, and of his men with their giant forms and their brute force. Sometimes, however, it is the women who are brutal, as in "Under the Deck Awnings," when the girl deliberately lets a boy jump to his death to satisfy her power and curiosity. The boy was a dazzling creature, "looking at him it was as if a whiff of ozone came to one's nostrils—so fresh and young was he, so resplendent with health, so wildly wild," and yet this boy jumps at her bidding—and the sharks await him.

Another story in which the woman does not play fair is "To Kill a Man," in which a burglar trusts a woman, and she pretending to believe in him, and promising to help him escape, has her foot on the electric button through the tense conversation. When her trick is revealed to him he turns upon her, lashing her with words that she will never forget.

The best stories in the collection are "Night Born" and "When the World Was Young." Such stories as these have contributed towards giving Jack London the position he rightly holds among the writers of the day, as they are classics in their way. The Night Born is a girl who wants to run at night, who is quick in every primitive instinct, but who marries a man and spends four years toiling and moiling in a "vile little hashjoint" in Alaska. But she still has her dreams and a copy of Thoreau. It is a sentence from "The Cry of the Human" that makes her leave the cooking and dishwashing, to jump into a canoe, and from that time to become a part of Romance itself. Her trail leads her to a lot of painted canvas sacks, beside the skeletons of eight horses, and these sacks contain streams of gold. When the reader first meets her she is chief of an Indian tribe, a beautiful nut brown creature, with a woman's desire for her mate. All this is told by the man who was too much of a coward to respond to her need of him and to join her in the life she leads.

"When the World Was Young" has ironic humor, and a dual personality idea with Jack London's own particular twist. The man is a dignified, successful man by day, and by night a huge blond thing, who runs naked among the beasts of the dark. These two personalities are several thousand years apart. The delicious humor of the story is brought out when James G. Ward, business man, becomes engaged, and desires to curb his other personality. To that end he does his courting by day, has himself locked up in a sleeping balcony as soon as it is dark, and exercises until he drops fatigued into slumber. But one night the household is aroused from slumber by the sounds of blows being struck, and a smashing and crashing of underbrush by heavy bodies. Here is a glimpse of Lilian, who "gazed horror stricken at a yellow-haired, wild-eyed giant whom she recognized as the man who was to be her husband. He was swinging a great club, and fighting furiously and calmly with a shaggy monster that was bigger than any bear she had ever seen. Never had she dreamed so formidable and magnificent a savage lurked under the starched and conventional garb of her betrothed." Thus James G. Ward is cured. When we leave him he is married to Lilian, is afraid of the dark, and he has taken to burglar proof devices. But to his wife he will always be a hero.

Fortunate the writer who has discovered a fictional formula adaptable to popular consumption with but slight variation, especially when all the stock characters of fiction fit with easy precision into their respective parts. Mr. Farnol wrote "The Broad Highway," so blithe and withal virile a romance that it won deservedly wide reading.

If period and characters and plot and style are liked once of my public, evidently reasons Mr. Farnol, why not again—for 'tis easy to do it so. Especially easy when, as here, the story rambles on in a good old-fashioned way to a full measure of pages, bristling with duels and lovering and hairbreadth 'scapes and fortuitous meetings that would strain all credulity —except in romances—far past the breaking point.

Barnabas Barty, "our hero," son of an innkeeper, heir to a fortune, and paragon of all manly virtues, sets out Londonward to become an "amateur gentleman" and conquer the great world. How he conquers himself, wins the love of the Lady Cleone, thwarts the villain (or rather several villains, richly assorted), becomes the gilded idol of the town and favorite of royalty itself and anon is cast out in disgrace—all this makes up a story of more than average interest.

What matter if the main characters are all from stock and the plot one defying all reasonable probability? At least the characters are greatly varied; there is action every minute; the canvas is crowded and colorful and the flush of youth is over it. It too will find many readers.

Two Books on the Balkan War

TWO BOOKS ON THE BALKAN WAR.*

"The Balkan War," by Philip Gibbs and Bernard Grant, is a timely and vivid account of the recent European imbroglio. The book makes no pretense to thoroughness or accuracy of detail; it is the rapid-fire work of two newspaper men at the front, and is accordingly sketchy and impressionistic.

But it is dramatic and it is picturesque. The writers have centered their attention upon the high lights, leaving for others the more detailed historical and political aspects of the war. Wives and sweethearts parting from stalwart youths; troops tramping to the roll of drums; greedy-eyed, black-bearded men sharpening long knives on their boot-soles; hordes of panic-stricken Turks flying in wild disorder; interminable caravans of ox-carts wallowing hub-deep in miry, cross-country trails; cannon thundering and belching smoke and fire; gory warriors staggering to earth never to rise—such are the scenes which constitute the major part of the book. Opening almost at random, I find the following characteristic passage:

> Looking back upon the days that passed I seemed to have been living in a continual nightmare full of black and white beasts, of curly horns, of trampling hoofs, of armed men surging like a living tide, through narrow streets incessantly by day and night, of gun-carriages, and bullock-wagons in a great tangle of spokes and wheels and shafts, of bayonets glistening like silver, of bearded faces and black eyes staring at me as a great army passed onwards through the town of Mustafa Pasha.

This quotation, as it happens, brings out another prominent feature of the work—its thoroughly intimate, personal nature. Much of the time the reader will find his interest captivated not so much by the war itself as by the experiences and adventures of Mr. Gibbs and Mr. Grant, their encounters with press-censors, their foraging and cooking, their hardships in transport, their exciting scrambles in many a narrow quarter.

Yet with all its faults, largely the product of haste, the book carries the reader along with a somewhat epic sweep from the mobilization of the troops to the last stand at Chatalja, and appears to be true to the spirit of the war.

A much more valuable study of the war is Lieutenant Hermengild Wagner's "With the Victorious Bulgarians." He, too, is a newspaper man, but his long experience in the territory under discussion, his familiarity with men prominent in the struggle, his exceptional capacity as a war correspondent, and his broad comprehension of the subject in hand result in an excellent discussion of the vital features and significance of the war.

The uprising of Bulgaria and the allies was not a sudden affair. For a quarter of a century they had been watching the hated Turk and drilling their troops. Meanwhile, the Balkan League was formed, primarily a political and economic combination, but with a military agreement just before the war. "The one vital unifying principle which could possibly reconcile and combine the clashing interests of the Balkan kingdoms was the deep-rooted desire of all of them to wipe out the disgrace and remedy the disaster of the defeat of Christendom by an Oriental power five centuries ago." The motive was sufficient to bring into the hazard the entire resources of the country. The people rallied to the call to arms; "cooks, waiters, porters, clerks, butchers" —everybody shouldered a rifle or sheathed a blade and augmented the trained forces. The treasury was strained; supplies were requisitioned on every side; the soldier first was the word. All this demanded quick and decisive results.

The Turk, on the other hand, needed, as usual, not so much victory as avoidance of crushing defeat. But the Sick Man was not in the best condition to realize even that. The army, though formidable on paper, was not so in reality. Then, again, owing to the fact that the Young Turks had impressed military obligation upon the Christian population, the Ottoman troops lacked that unity which had hitherto bound them together. Moreover, worn with struggles in Albania, Arabia and Italy, the army was weary at the outset. In addition to all this the Turks made at least two vital mistakes: they neglected to strengthen the frontier fortifications, and they adopted, in part, an offensive attitude for which they were ill-fitted. As a result, when the determined allies rushed into the fray at Kirk Kilissé, Lule Borgas, and other notable actions, the Crescent went down before the Cross. It was largely owing to good fortune and a decided geographical advantage that Turkey was saved from rout at the final issue at Chatalja.

FROM "THE GAY REBELLION" BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

D. Appleton & Co.

Not the least valuable features of Lieutenant Wagner's book are the clear expositions of manœuvres and fortifications, the fine maps and illustrations, and the excellent biographical sketches of the statesmen and military leaders who figure in the war. One's respect and admiration for the Balkan States must be increased by this introduction to such broad-minded statesmen as King Ferdinand, Messrs. Gueshoff and Rizoff, and such able generals as Savoff, Fitscheff and Dimitrieff. The author is eminently fair to the "enemy" also, and speaks highly of various men who headed the Turkish hosts.

SOCIALISM SUMMED UP.*

Just what Socialism is, and what it has done, has not always been the easiest thing in the world to find out. Some of the papers you read will proclaim that any new measure of a slant recognized as socialistic is sheer foolishness, and others will call it pure humanity and justice. But in the midst of all the snapping and barking, and when all the clever young men you know are joining the Socialist party, and even your daughter comes home from college with the announcement that she belongs to a Socialist club, you will grasp gladly at ready help to be found in this little book by Morris Hillquit.

The author confines himself strictly to definition and exposition. There is not one sentence of rant or buncombe in the whole one hundred snappy, clear-cut pages. You will not be likely to agree with all of Mr. Hillquit's proposals. Not all Socialists would. But it is the fairest, lucidest and, incidentally, the briefest comprehensive explanation of Socialism so far published. Better even than the development of the theory of Socialism is the statement of how Socialism stands today. What is the party trying to do? What does the movement mean? What are the planks of its platform? Why do they insist on nominating always a full ticket? How many votes can they poll? What have they done in Europe, and what do they want to do here?—all these things the little book answers.

It is above all things reasonable. The tone of it is so calm, so logical, and so straightforward that you find yourself arguing ahead of the author. That, in itself, is a very clever thing for him to have made you do.

We have talked of Socialism as if "it" were a movement or a party. Mr. Hillquit says it is a state of society, and that we are all getting there fast—Democrats, Republicans, social workers, and just plain every-day citizens that wish the best state of society for themselves and for the greatest possible number of other people. Read this year's Inaugural and "Socialism Summed Up," and even if you are not prepared, with the author, to abolish the Senate and the Presidential power of veto, you will see how and why we are all being "humanized."

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF AN INDIVIDUALIST.†

There are two incidents in the early life of James O. Fagan, related in his autobiography, which are significant in a study of the man's character. One is that incident of the rocky cliff. With a boy companion he had attempted to scale a perpendicular rock to reach a desired ledge. To do so it was necessary to cut a series of steps with their pocketknives. The task was half accomplished when the boy companion slipped, and with one scream, fell to certain death. Young Fagan, unable to go back, hacked on with his knife till the ledge and safety were attained. The other is the incident of his school days relating to a case of cheating in examination. Seeing his fellow schoolmate with the crib but half concealed, Fagan rose without hesitation and, in the interests of justice, informed on the cribber. In both instances, I think, the author of "The Confessions of a Railroad President" justified his right to the title—individualist. Both foreshadow in a way the after career of this singularly courageous, upright-minded man.

The individualistic tendency in the boy's nature, fostered by the stern Biblical teaching of his home, with its insistence on individual responsibility, was further developed by his experiences in South America and South Africa, where, revolted by the moral looseness and licentiousness of society, he was thrown back upon himself in his uncompromising determination to maintain his personal integrity. There was nothing in this period of his experience to awaken feelings of social sympathy with his fellow men.

These early chapters, recounting the experiences of his boyhood and youth, are but the introduction to the real story which begins with his arrival in America in 1881. His first impression of the country is given in a picture of Boston in the early eighties—dirty, but intellectual, its interest centered in self-culture.

"In the year 1881 self-culture was the supreme topic in the public mind, much as is social and industrial betterment in the present day."

Interest in Mr. Fagan's own narrative, after he secured employment as a telegrapher in East Deerfield, follows two lines—his own efforts toward self-culture, and his analysis of the industrial problem. His methods of self-training are worthy of study, and this part of his narrative would tempt one to linger, were it not that the larger interests touched on in the book demand first attention. For the value of the book—especially to those who have read its predecessor—lies in its analysis of industrial problems, in particular, of the problems of the labor movement, the beginning of which Mr. Fagan saw.

Anti-union man though he is, he sees in the beginning of the movement only good intent. "A reasonable revolt," he calls it, "against the intolerable state of affairs I have described." This intolerable state of affairs refers especially to the accident problem, analyzed at greater length in the "Confessions of a Railroad Signalman," and to overtime without pay. "Overtime in those days," he says, "was never given a thought. It had simply not been invented." The first organizations of labor among railway employees with which he came in contact were interested in two things—in improving their own condition and in improving the service of the road. "Loyalty to the old Fitchburg Railroad was an ever-present and distinguishing feature" of all discussions. It is the passing of this loyalty that the author laments, yet, with a narrowness of view, he fails to see that the conditions that called forth that loyalty have passed. His quarrel with both organized labor and organized management is that they have substituted machinery for personality. The first mistake was made, he says, in taking from the immediate superior the authority and individuality that belong to his office. One superintendent in Boston now does the work of a dozen or so superintendents.

Yet these were moves on the part of organized management which has acted, he thinks, to a great extent from compulsion, while labor has followed the mechanical course from "free will." What he fails to recognize, it seems to me, is the "compulsion" on both sides—the compulsion of circumstances, the force of events by which "the old order changeth." Organized labor, he claims, calls on a man to sink his industrial personality in the interests of class. What he does not see is that that personality has already been sunk. Men can no longer feel a loyalty to the old Fitchburg Railway. The "old Fitchburg" is no more; it is a part of somebody's consolidated lines. The individual has no personality—can have none—except as having sunk itself in the interest of class, it may be enabled, by a united effort, to emerge again.

Mr. Fagan is a singularly clear-seeing man; his analysis of the genesis of the labor problem is remarkably lucid. His weakness lies in a certain narrowness of vision. He sees the good in the old order, but does not see that it cannot return. His type of individuality is a fine type, produced by an old, stern order—an order which, alas, is no more. The workers who, like Mr. Fagan, could not fit into the new system of things and were turned away, were heartbroken men. The loss of a job to a man to-day is a mere financial loss, he says. To those men it was a tragedy, because it meant a repudiation of their lifework and principles. This contrast tells the story; it tells the tragic result of the mechanization of industry. It was a fine type of individuality bred by the old system when a man's "job" was his "lifework." Our problem to-day is to discover how to develop and maintain an individuality of as fine a grade under the present order, which, whether, with Mr. Fagan, we dislike it or not, is the present order. We cannot go back.

SARDOU AND THE SARDOU PLAYS.*

This book gives a thoroughly ship-shape account of the man and his works. It does not pretend to deal in critical estimates, although in presenting the facts of the production of some of the plays it occasionally has to consider contemporary critical comment. What it sets out to do, then, it does in a well-organized and adequate way. The record of Victorien Sardou from the statistical side will never need to be compiled again. To this biography, pleasantly narrated and with much anecdotal color, the author adds the stories of over twenty of the plays. These little narratives are for the most part clear and fluent and well-proportioned—by no means an easy task. Finally, a statistical record is given of the Sardou plays in America. It is not always that a book so well accomplishes its entire purpose.

At the age of ten, Victorien had learned by heart the plays of Molière, but his father told him that only idlers wanted to write. He gave up his pet idea to go into medicine, but when his father's failure threw him on his own resources, he took up his pen. While he waited for success at the theater, he became copyist, bookseller's clerk, and teacher of languages. His first two plays were terrible failures, though that of the first seems to have been brought about by a political exigency. His next four were never produced, but all the while he was writing them and supporting himself by supplying articles for a biographical dictionary at a franc a day he was making a methodical analysis of the plays of Scribe—too wise to sneer at him in the fashion of the younger literary men of the day as a mere theatrical carpenter. Sardou's first acknowledged success was "A Scrap of Paper," his eleventh play and in his sixth year of writing. This play revealed both his strong and his weak points—his astonishing skill in construction, his witty and salient dialogue, and his lack of emotional depth. It also foreshadowed how great was to be his reliance in his plays on letters. Mr. Walkley once remarked more flippantly than critically that this constituted his chief claim to consideration as a man of letters.

For six years he now produced diverting comedies. But he needed a wider and more crowded stage and a more intricate plot to develop his chief resources. He widened his scope by slow degrees, however, and passed through a set of satires next. In these—of which one was so successful that all kinds of articles in the shops were christened "Benoiton"—he scourged customs laughingly but carefully kept from subordinating his plot to his idea. In his next set of plays he began to get a little below the surface of things and to depict moral conflicts, yet he eschewed the psychological problem as such and saw it only in the terms of a theatrical story. "A kind of philosophical equation appears to me," said he, "and my problem is to discover the unknown quantity." What for instance, is the greatest sacrifice a man can make for his country, or under what circumstances will the profound charity of woman show itself in the most striking manner. By universal consent, the plays in which he depicted these two "philosophical" problems are his greatest; yet "La Haine" was an utter failure on account of its sombreness, and "Patrie" is by no means his widest known. The only time he ever lost sight of his rooted idea that the stage is a place for action and not discussion is in "Spiritisme." Profoundly concerned with spiritualism (after his discovery that he was capable of producing himself spiritistic phenomena), this play often becomes a mere pamphlet. Even his thorough grasp of archeology and history of the periods he dramatized never tempted him to leave legitimate theatrical limits as he conceived them. The period of the French Revolution, which forms the setting of six of his plays, was no more completely mastered than the Byzantine or medieval Greek periods of Theodora and Gismonda.

Notable was his skill to seize and turn to account whatever ideas happened to be uppermost in the public mind at the time, and he was always very susceptible to his environment. He always maintained that the garbled English versions of his plays did him gross injustice. "Diplomacy," perhaps the widest known of the adaptations in its day, is so unlike "Dora" that it cannot justly be criticised as Sardou's. In his method of work he planned generally his great scene for the close of the next to the last act, and he made four drafts of his play before he began to fill and polish the dialogue. So versatile was he that a manager said that every theater in Paris might have a Sardou night and still produce the type of play with which it was identified. The stage-hands represented to him the average mind of the average audience, and he watched carefully their impressions; with the opinions of actors and critics he would have nothing to do, and the play once produced he never appeared at the theater. All his life he was at war with the critics, but, contrary to a very general impression, the French critics as a group held him in esteem.

PIPPIN. By Evelyn Van Buren. Illus. by Reginald B. Birch. 316p.12mo. Cent. $1.30n.

First book of a new writer. Tale of the London streets, with a pretty stranded American actress one of the chief characters. Pippin has had to provide for a small brother and a shiftless father for three years. Picking pockets was the quickest and easiest way and she became expert. When Dandy, the valet of a playwright, falls in love with her, she realizes her dishonesty and tries to go straight. Her struggle and those of the young actress, whom she befriends, make an entertaining, sometimes pathetic, sometimes humorous story, which ends happily for everyone.

SIMON BRANDIN. By B. Paul Neuman. 301p. 12mo. Doran. $1.20n.

Hero, a survivor of an anti-Semitic massacre in Russia, comes to America to earn a living and determined to avenge the wrongs of his race. By dint of honesty, industry and business capacity he amasses a competence, and then vast wealth. He adopts a little Jewish girl whose parents have been murdered like his own and brings her with him to London, where he lives. Child develops into a sort of modern Rebecca, and both she and her guardian interest themselves on behalf of their suffering co-religionists. Simon learns that love, not vengeance, is what his race needs. By author of "Roddles."

THE DAY OF DAYS; an extravaganza. By Louis Jos. Vance. Illus. by Arth. Wm. Brown. 300p.12mo. Little, B. $1.25n.

Title is taken from play of "Kismet." In New York a young man has his "day of days," when in twelve short hours he breaks the bank at a gambling-house, is held up for his winnings at the pistol's point, escapes during a raid, enters a private residence, saves its mistress from murder at her husband's hands, and plays no small part in events at a fashionable masquerade ball and in the deadliest dive in New York—all of which has its bearing on the plot of the story in which little Mr. Sybarite saves the girl he loves from the machinations of a rascally trio.

NEW LIVES FOR OLD. By Will Carleton. 222p. 12mo. Small, M. $1.20n.

Author of "One way out" in this book carries on his story of how he started over again in New England from the viewpoint of the immigrant. His business prospered, he bought a farm, and in the country village he encountered a fresh set of conditions. The town was asleep, and unless the American inhabitant woke up he would find that the foreign element was going to own it. THE DAUGHTER OF BRAHMA. By Ida Alena Ross Wylie. 432p.12mo. Bobbs-M. $1.25n.

By author of "The native born," "The Germans," etc. Heroine is a Brahmin priestess who is wooed, won and carried off by a determined young Englishman, who takes her to his country home, where she tries to help him through an election. Out of such a union, tragedy must arise and this is no exception. In telling the tale the reader gets a vivid picture of both East and West—the fraud and bloodthirstiness of the former, the brutality and hypocrisy of the latter.

THE DAUGHTER OF A REBEL; a novel. By G. Vere Tyler. 323p.12mo. Duff. $1.25n.

The story of a daughter of the new South. Out of touch with the old ways of her neighbors, and out of sympathy with the new people that have come among them, she leaves her native town and comes to New York to have a try at making her own fortune. Her experiences in the metropolis, and her final return home and acceptance of her lover make the story.

WAKING UP BOLTON. By Wm. Ganson Rose. 73p.16mo. Duff. 50c.n.

By author of "The ginger cure" and "Putting Marshville on the map." Young Bolton, a physically perfect specimen, who has not yet found his special sphere of usefulness in life, is sent to John Hancock Barker, the ad-man, for supervision and rehabilitation. What Mr. Barker does with Bolton in the way of waking him up is calculated to wake up readers, too.

BOBBIE, GENERAL MANAGER; a novel. By Olive Higgins Prouty. 354p.12mo. Stokes. $1.25n.

Bobbie is a girl who mothers a New England family, managing them all without their knowing it. The problems and struggles of her brothers and sisters, their difficulties in college, in business, in love, and in marriage she makes her own, and she has her love story, too.

VEILED WOMEN. By Marmaduke Wm. Pickthall. 312p.12mo. Duff. $1.25n.

English woman, poor, without relatives, good-looking, but feeling herself of no particular importance, accepts the position of governess in the household of an Egyptian Pasha. The son of the house falls in love with her and she marries him, accepting Mohammedanism and renouncing western ways and civilization. The story of what follows gives an intimate view of the daily life of an Oriental harem, and the pros and cons as to the position of women in the eastern world are pictured without bias.

THE LIFE MASK; a novel. By the author of "To M. L. G." 346p.12mo. Stokes. $1.30n.

Anita Durrand, known as Mrs. Lippincott, has a tragic secret, which she and her devoted servant seek to keep from the world. They take a house in Grenada, thinking that they are safe, but Hugh Shannon sees Anita, falls in love with her, and manages to make her acquaintance. Though she loves him, the girl refuses to marry him and will not explain her reason, until his sister comes, recognizes her and insists upon her telling him about herself. What the secret is and how the cloud is dispersed end the tale.

ST. QUIN. By Dion Clayton Calthrop. 303p. 12mo. Lane. $1.30n.

Fantastic London love story. Shows how Edmund St. Quin married well, in the approved manner, at the right church, surrounded by the right people, all doing the right thing. His wife, Felicity, is very beautiful in the right way, has the right amount of income, knows as much of life as is good for her, and is the proper, recognized society product of two recognized society people—a French-American mother and a highly-bred Englishman. How the iron clutch of society and the still more effectual pull of romance influence these and the other characters of the book make the story.

BACHELORS' BUTTONS; the candid confessions of a shy bachelor. By Edw. Burke. 413p. 12mo. Moff., Y. $1.30n.

Imagine a bachelor who has been teaching school for many years and is approaching middle age, suddenly enriched beyond his wildest dreams. What will he do with his fortune? Everyone asks and a good many make suggestions, particularly his managing sister, Pansy, who goes beyond mere suggestions. He escapes from Pansy's thralldom and marries the right girl, but before that happens many things take place in the quiet English village where he lives.

THE LOVERS OF SKYE. By Frank Waller Allen. Illus. by W. B. King. 261p.12mo. Bobbs-M. $1n.

To the staid, old-fashioned folk of Skye, "spoon" had come to mean only a common carrier between table and mouth; courtships were as rare as hobble skirts; "love-marriages," as impossible as the Tango. But one day Hyppolite Pac, son of the most straight-laced family, kicked over the traces, fell in love with Eve Mulligan, a music teacher, and started a general revival of all the old, half-finished romances in the little Ohio River village. Maids with ringlets and "old-beaux" with beards defied convention and sat together for tintypes and the village "priest" put snap into his wedding services.

THE ISLE OF LIFE; a romance. By Stephen French Whitman. 498p.12mo. Scrib. $1.35n.

Central figure is a man who believes in living for himself alone. What he wants and cannot buy he takes. He wants a beautiful American girl, who dislikes and dreads him and sets sail for Italy to meet her fiancé. He takes her by leaping into the Mediterranean at night with her in his arms. They are picked up by a fishing-boat and carried to an island near Sicily. Here amid a semi-wild people he imprisons her in a deserted villa. From this point adventures come with a rush until the surprising denouement is reached.

THE LAND OF CONTENT. By Edith Barnard Delano. 333p.front.12mo. Apltn. $1.30n.

Rosamund Randall, a young woman of wealth and social prominence, goes, mainly because of a whim, to live in a little mountain community in Virginia. There she meets Dr. Ogilvie, a brilliant young physician, who is devoting his time and talent to the service of the mountaineers. The story deals principally with Rosamund's efforts to make a place for herself in the community, the growth of affection between herself and Dr. Ogilvie, and her struggle out of selfishness and dissatisfaction into usefulness and "the land of content."

THE DEVIL'S ADMIRAL. By Fredk. Ferdinand Moore. Illus. in col. by Anton Otto Fischer. 295p.12mo. Dou., P. $1.25n.

A pirate story whose action covers only a day and a half and never loosens the tension until the final chapter. Trenholm, a war correspondent during the Russo-Japanese war, goes to Manila to await further orders. On arrival he finds he must go on to Hong Kong, and engages passage in a boat sailing the same afternoon. All day long he is followed by a missionary and a red-headed sailor, both of whom embark on the same boat. Trouble arises as soon as the steamer is well started and excitement follows thick and fast, first one side on top, then the other, until at the end of thirty-six hours there are but four survivors, one of whom is the red-headed man.

THE LOST DISPATCH. By Natalie Sumner Lincoln. 309p.illus.12mo. Apltn. $1.30n.

First chapters are taken up with Captain Lloyd's (United States Secret Service) endeavors to prove that Nancy Newton is a rebel spy. He follows her to Sheridan's winter quarters at Winchester and succeeds in obtaining an incriminating dispatch. Nancy is arrested at a ball. Lloyd, on being sent to testify against her is found dead in bed. There is no sign of a struggle, and the mystery is deepened by the surgeon's report after the autopsy. The denouement is surprising.

THE LADY WHO SMOKED CIGARS. By Rupert Hughes. 48p.pls.16mo. FitzG. 50c.n.

Little story told by a rich, unpolished American woman at a formal English dinner, where she is regarded as an interesting freak. She tells how she learned to smoke to please her husband and stopped for the same reason.

CHILD OF STORM. By Sir H. Rider Haggard. front. in col. and 2 illus. by A. C. Michael. 347p.12mo. Longm. $1.35n.

In "Marie" author tells the first part of the story of the vengeance of Zikali, "the Thing-that-should-never-have-been-born," and of the fall of the House of Senzangakona, ruler of Zululand. This is the second part, and a third is promised. In this Mameena, a beautiful Zulu Helen, but with craft and brains, such as were never possessed by the fair cause of Troy's downfall, tries and almost succeeds in making herself queen. Allan Quatermain tells the story.

CONCERT PITCH. By Frank Danby. 380p. 12mo. Macm. $1.35n.

Scene London. A millionaire who made his money in South African mines bought an English peerage and married his children's governess. Her treatment of an impulsive, sensitive stepdaughter makes the girl run away to meet a musical genius. After marriage the man works to create national opera for England. His eighteen year old wife slaves for him to the verge of starvation. Her wild brother comes to the rescue, and through him a former lover, also a peer of England, hears of her plight and throughout the musician's career watches over the wife. She might have been a great singer, but devotes herself wholly to keeping her husband at "concert pitch" as composer. Gives a telling picture of the unfitness for practical life of a wholly self-absorbed genius.

PRECIOUS WATERS. By A. W. Chisholm. Illus. by Clarence Rowe. 422p.12mo. Dou., P. $1.25n.

Author of "The boss of Wind River" tells another western tale. Scene is the foot-hill country of the dry-belt and the action, of which there is plenty, centers round an irrigation company's endeavors to divert all the water to the railroad lands away from the ranchers, who have struggled and fought for their foothold. Two girls, one from the East, the other from the West, and two men representing the opposing interests are the chief characters.

YONDER. By E. H. Young. 309p.12mo. Doran. $1.20n.

When Edward Webb asks his little daughter what he shall bring her she replies, "An adventure." In pursuit of the adventure the little traveler in dressmaker's fittings wanders all night on the mountains, and in the morning, almost exhausted, reaches a friendly house. Three people live here, a man, his wife, a fine woman, who tries to make him amount to something, and their son, a poetic boy, at swords points with his father. When the boy grows up he falls in love with Edward Webb's daughter. But she becomes engaged to a richer man. But it all comes right in the end.

THE MYSTERY OF THE BARRANCA. By Herman Whitaker. 280p.front.12mo. Harp. $1.25n.

Records the struggles of two young American engineers, Billy Thornton and Robert Seyd, in Mexico, while trying to develop a Mexican copper mine, The Barranca. Fighting against underhand wiles, delays and evasions, boycotting, dynamite and assassination, their life is anything but calm. Francesca, the beautiful Spanish-Irish daughter of their chief enemy, whom Seyd woos and finally wins, makes the romance of the story.

ON BOARD THE "BEATIC." By Anna Chapin Ray. Front. by Edmond Frederick. 379p. 12mo. Little, B. $1.30n.

Romance of a trip across the Atlantic, with a London and Belgium background as well. A middle-aged captain of industry, Carl Clode, and Aileen Warburton, a self-assured, independent woman of thirty-two, are the principals, but there are other characters, each with a distinct personality. Aileen Warburton believes that her freedom is the greatest thing in life to her, but learns that loneliness and so-called freedom often go together and there is something better and greater for her. and forced to play the drum in the music hall, and a young acrobat with beauty but no stability. Jane married Curley Merino, the acrobat, learned many things to her sorrow, but kept her white soul. Book closes with promise of happiness for her.

THE GAY REBELLION. By Robt. W. Chambers. Illus. by Edmond Frederick. 299p. 12mo. Apltn. $1.30n.

"Votes for women" is the groundwork on which this modern fantasy is based. The suffragettes, incensed at the men's continued obduracy, go on strike. A number of the most beautiful go off to the Adirondacks to a huge tract of land in the woods, where they live in caves, and sally forth to capture perfect specimens of masculinity, whom they net and drag back into their enclosure. Individual girls attempt to live up to these modern theories, but each in the end succumbs to the old order and falls in love.

VANISHING POINTS. By Alice Brown. 352p. 12mo. Macm. $1.25n.

THE WEAKER VESSEL. By Edw. Frederic Benson. 458p.12mo. Dodd, M. $1.35n.

A young girl in a country vicarage, the inmates of which are sketched with fidelity to life, has within her the latent seeds of genius, and of a noble character. In the course of time she escapes from her quiet nest into the outside world, and later she marries. Then comes her test. The husband, like her, is lovable, and in his way a genius; but he possesses one fatal defect of character—drunkenness, which warps his whole nature. As he sinks lower, his wife rises higher. And when the inevitable catastrophe comes she meets it with a noble and sunny fortitude, and from the wreck builds up at last an enduring happiness. By author of "Dodo," "The climber," etc.

WINDYRIDGE. By W. Riley. 328p.12mo. Apltn. $1.30n.

Love story of a young woman who, tiring of London, goes to live in a quaint little Yorkshire village, where she still does the artistic photography by which she earns her living. The sketches of village characters are full of both humor and pathos and the heroine learns that evil thoughts and actions are not the exclusive possession of the city dweller, but she also learns much of true nobility.

THE STORY OF STEPHEN COMPTON; a novel. By John Edw. Patterson. 367p.12mo. Doran. $1.25n.

Hero rises from poverty to the premiership. He is handicapped by a dwarfed left leg, due to a street accident; by a good-for-nothing brother, who turns up irregularly; by a wife who has married him, as he never knows, for the purpose of changing his politics. Stephen sells papers in his boyhood. Later he has experience in cotton spinning and in iron works. He gets rich through a successful invention and goes into politics. A sort of a Socialist at first, he devotes himself at length to a scheme of industrial betterment originated by himself, and with the substantial aid of an American multi-millionaire secures a great advance in labor conditions.

A DREAM OF BLUE ROSES. By Mrs. Hubert Barclay. 346p.12mo. Doran. $1.25n.

Barbara Claudia Vincent grows up knowing nothing about her parents or family. At seven she was given over to the care of a fine old French couple, a sufficient sum for her maintenance being sent each year. When Père Joseph dies, Barbara and the Petite Mère find themselves in very straightened circumstances, and the girl, now of age, goes to London, to the lawyer, whose name was given to her guardians to claim the fortune she believes is hers. Disappointment is the only result of her visit and she is obliged to find work. How she does this, the people, some of them quaint, some of them merry, whom she meets, and her love for a fine man finish the story.

SUCCESS. By Una Lucy Silberrad. 316p.12mo. Doran. $1.20n.

Hero is a young inventor in employ of firm of government engineers. He invents a new and most deadly weapon of war and is accused of selling it, not to his own employers, but to certain foreign powers. Effect is to discredit him and make it impossible for him to earn his living in his chosen profession. Story hinges upon this point of patriotism and honor, and also shows how inefficient a skilled man may appear in this day of specialized labor, if he works at a task for which his education unfits him. By author of "The good comrade."

PRINCESS MARY'S LOCKED BOOK. Front. by Max Cowper. 190p.12mo. Cass. $1n.

Diary of Princess Mary of Thule, a lovely girl, who is of sufficiently royal blood to be a pawn in the game of politics, but not important enough to take a prominent place in the world. She visits her governess in London as plain Mary Smith, and circumstances throw her in contact with Prince Milo of Crete, whom she had never before met, but whom she had been expected to marry, until a plot against him drove him from his country. The Princess recognizes Milo from his picture, but he does not know her, and the young people promptly fall in love. It only takes them a week to overcome all obstacles, clear Milo's name, and throw aside incognitos.

THE MAIDEN MANIFEST. By Della Campbell McLeod. Illus. by Harriet Roosevelt Richards. 365p.12mo. Little, B. $1.30n.

Impressionable young man, while looking at a blue frock hanging in a Fifth Avenue cleaner's window, suddenly has a vision of its fair owner. The vision recurs at intervals, and so ensnares the young man's heart that he resolves to find this fascinating, tantalizing "Dream Girl," as he comes to call her. Thereupon begins his quest, which leads him into a web of difficulties and sadly upsets his order of life, until his ideal girl is discovered in a real one.

WITCHING HILL. By Ernest Wm. Hornung. Illus. by F. C. Yohn. 274p.12mo. Scrib. $1.25n.

Eight distinct stories, through all of which runs the same sinister influence. Uvo Delavoye, descendant, not in direct line, of the infamous Lord Mulcaster, comes to live in one of the suburban villas erected on his ancestor's estate. Crimes and tragedies follow, which have their counterpart in Lord Mulcaster's career. Uvo believes that there is a malign influence at work, which in some mysterious way is transmitted by his presence. After he is convinced of this he goes away.

NO OTHER WAY. By Gordon Holmes. 312p. 12mo. Clode. $1.25n.

Story opens with the divorce of Mrs. Claude Waverton from her husband, who is a worthless, dissipated young man. He has been injured in an automobile accident in Florida and is nursed by the woman, Mrs. Delamar, with whose name his has been coupled for some time. Upon his recovery he is a changed man, apparently in every way. The death, under suspicious circumstances of Mrs. Delamar's husband leads to the shadowing of Waverton, who has repudiated the woman, and also throws him with his wife. The evidence seems to show that Waverton was killed in the accident, and that he is being impersonated by another man. Who Waverton really is, who really killed Mrs. Delamar's husband and the part two detectives play in tracing the crime make a surprising story.

CLEEK, THE MAN OF FORTY FACES. By Thos. W. Hanshew. 305p.12mo. Cass. $1.25n.

Adventures of a detective who had first been a thief who baffled the skill of the police of two continents. Cleek has a gift for twisting his face out of all semblance of its real appearance, which, added to his extreme cleverness, makes it quite possible to disguise himself beyond any one's power of recognition and greatly aids him in his many cases.

CHRISTIANITY AND COMMERCE; a study in western expansion. By Fk. Ilsley Paradise. 191p.12mo. Dodd, M. $1n.

The tremendous changes now going on in the East are already producing and with time will in a more marked degree, produce a new type of eastern people. But these changes have brought Christianity face to face with a great and perplexing problem. The old methods of propagandism no longer avail to meet the conditions of the new life; something different must be devised; and the question before the churches is how they can best present to the new nations of the East the Christian ideals which underlie the civilization of the West. Book is a study of this problem of Christian missions and their relation to the great forces which are astir in eastern life.

Author is a journalist who worked for an Anglo-Japanese newspaper for some years and saw a good deal of Japanese life. His interest in this volume is chiefly in athletics and more than half his book is devoted to explaining jiu-jitsu. As he takes up the psychological side of the art also, he is led to describe forms of occultism, religious belief and superstitions. He tells also of other forms of amusement, fencing and the theater, and he winds up with an article on the woman question.

VEILED MYSTERIES OF EGYPT AND THE RELIGION OF ISLAM. By S. H. Leeder. 427p.illus. 8vo. Scrib. $3.75n.

Author has been given special facilities for preparation of this work by the head of the Islamic faith; and has been living in Egypt, not only in the cities, but in the remote villages and desert. Book gives an intimate survey of the mysteries of the inner life and thought of the Orient. Contents of the books are: Moslem life in town and village; Reflections and observations in the mosques; Great feasts and festivals; The great questions of Islam as interpreted through the Moslems themselves.

IN FRENCH-AFRICA; scenes and memories. By Matilda Barbara Betham-Edwards. Illus. by orig. and copyrighted photos. 333p. 8vo. McClg. $2.50n.

France governs one thousand miles of North Africa, made up of burning sands, fertile valleys, magnificent mountains, and dotted over with Arab cities and hamlets. This is the country here described, with accounts of the hospitality of rich and poor, fellowship with French soldier and Arab peasant. There are anecdotes of famous persons and some adventures. Portions of book are from two of author's works, "A winter with the swallows," and "Through Spain to the Sahara," now out of print.

MY SUDAN YEAR. By Ethel Stefana Stevens. 315p.40illus.8vo. Doran. $3.50n.

Records a journey up the Nile to Khartoum and thence striking into the interior, going up tangled waterways where no white woman ever before traveled. Author narrates anecdotes both serious and amusing, tells of English residents in contact with natives, and also recounts the folklore and tribal traditions she gathered on her journey.

IN THE SHADOW OF THE BUSH. By P. Amaury Talbot. 514p.illus.map.8vo. Doran. $5n.

Close and detailed account of a remarkable but almost an unknown people, the Ekoi, dwelling in southern Nigeria. Much of the book is taken from the lips of the natives themselves, superstitions, beliefs and folklore. Author is in the Nigerian political service and has studied every aspect of Ekoi life, their religion, marriage ceremonies, secret societies, hunting laws, etc. He also adds much to our knowledge of African fauna and flora. Index.

MAKING GOOD IN CANADA. By Fred'k A. Talbot. 292p.illus.12mo. Macm. $1.50n.

DOWN THE MACKENZIE AND UP THE YUKON IN 1906. By Elihu Stewart. 270p.illus. map.12mo. Lane. $1.50n.

Author was formerly inspector of forestry to the Government of Canada, and the experience thus gained, supplemented by the journey here described, make this a book of value to those interested in the commercial growth of Canada. Latter portion deals with the various people, animals, industries, etc., of the country.

THE DIFFERENT WEST AS SEEN BY A TRANSPLANTED EASTERNER. By Arth. Elmore Bostwick. 184p.12mo. McClg. $1n.

Author formerly connected with the New York Public Library, is now librarian of the St. Louis Public Library. The strong impressions made upon him by the differences between the eastern states and the middle western led to his recording his conclusions and generalizations, covering the land features, vegetation, weather conditions, transportation, education, politics, art, science, literature, speech, etc. Index.

CALIFORNIA COAST AND TRAILS. By Jos. Smeaton Chase. Illus. fr. photos. by the auth. 344p.8vo. H. Miff. $2n.

Story of two journeys on horseback, in the course of which the author covered practically the entire coast line of California. Index. By author of "Yosemite trails."

PANAMA CANAL: WHAT IT IS, WHAT IT MEANS. By John Barrett. 120p.illus.maps. 8vo. Pan-Am. Union. $1n.

Author is director general of the Pan American Union, formerly United States Minister to Panama at the beginning of the work on the canal in 1904-5. First part of book is descriptive; second considers such questions as What the canal means; The great Latin-American Pacific coast; Get ready for the Panama Canal; Conquest of the tropics. Last part of book is historical.

LATIN AMERICA; its rise and progress. By F. Garcia Calderon. Trans. by Bernard Miall. 400p.8vo.34illus.map. Scrib. $3n.

By a Peruvian diplomatist. Author gives his chief study to an analysis of Latin-American psychology, inclusive of its literary as well as political expression. He makes a searching study of the racial qualities of South American peoples, and also treats frankly the relations between the South American republics and the United States. He emphasizes their apprehension of the new Monroe doctrine. Index. (South American Ser.) early years at least were spent in that part of England. Author takes up the towns of Devon one at a time, and discusses the notable men who belonged to them.

RAHEL VARNHAGEN; a portrait. By Ellen Key. Trans. fr. the Swedish by Arth. G. Chater. Introd. by Havelock Ellis. 331p.port.12mo. Put. $1.50n.

Rahel, daughter of a Jewish banker, Levin-Markus, was born in Berlin in 1771. She married Varnhagen von Ense in 1814. She was the Madame de Staël of Germany, her salon being frequented by Humboldt, Ranke, Schleiermacher, Conrad Oelsner, Prince Pückler Muskau, and other famous people. She was more than a social leader, she was a feminist who anticipated many of the ideas for which progressive groups are contending to-day.

THE LIFE OF SIR ISAAC PITMAN (Inventor of Phonography). By Alfred Baker. Centenary ed., rev. 103p.illus.ports.8vo. Pit. $1.

First issued in 1908, now somewhat enlarged and corrected—in honor of Sir Isaac Pitman's centenary. The Father of Phonography was born at Trowbridge, in Wiltshire, January 4, 1813. His work won him fame, fortune and knighthood; and long before the end of his useful and honorable career, in 1897, he had witnessed the triumphant establishment as a universal standard of the shorthand system that he invented and with a lifetime's faithful labor brought to its perfection.

KING EDWARD IN HIS TRUE COLORS. By Edw. Legge. Appreciations of Edward VII. by Comte D'Haussonville & Arminius Vambéry. 424p.8vo. Small, M. $4n.

Gives an intimate picture of the King, both as Prince of Wales and sovereign, and amplifies author's uncompromising criticism of certain portions of Sir Sidney Lee's "Dictionary" monograph. Book also deals with the personal relations between the King and the Kaiser, "the baccarat case," "the prince's debt scandal," and in the section entitled "the great figure" treats of King Edward from many points of view, including the anecdotal and amusing.

FROM STUDIO TO STAGE; reminiscences of Weedon Grossmith, written by himself. 367p.ports.8vo. Lane. $4n.

Recollections of the well-known English actor from his earliest boyhood days. His career has brought him into touch with all the famous men and women of his time, and his book is filled with anecdotes of the doings of his friends as well as his own experiences on and off the stage. His reminiscences concerning Sir Henry Irving are especially interesting. He began his career as an artist, but abandoned painting for the stage. Some of the illustrations are his own work. Index.

JAMES FENIMORE COOPER. By Mary Eliz. Phillips. 392p.illus.port.8vo. Lane. $2.50n.

Tells the personal life of the author of the "Leather Stocking tales." Pictures the men, women, places and things of Cooper's association in order to reproduce a background of his time and to make the man—not the author—the central figure.

OUR BOOK OF MEMORIES; LETTERS OF JUSTIN MCCARTHY TO MRS. CAMPBELL PRAED. 471p.illus.facsims.8vo. Small, M. $4n.

Author collaborated in several novels with Mrs. Campbell Praed. This collaboration was the fruit of a life-long friendship, and until his death Mr. McCarthy was in the habit of keeping her informed by letter of all his political and literary activities. Volume consists of these letters, edited and annotated by Mrs. Praed. Owing to the fact that a great deal of the book is occupied with the stirring events arising out of the Gladstone Home Rule Bills, as with other moments of English history, it presents vivid pictures of the political, social and literary life of the time. Book contains personal memories of Parnell, Gladstone, Lord Morley, and distinguished members of the Irish party, as well as of many other men and women, American as well as English. Index.

THE TWO HAGUE CONFERENCES. By Jos. Hodges Choate. 123p.12mo. Princeton Univ. $1n.

Book is made up of the Stafford Little Lectures for 1912, delivered at Princeton University. Mr. Choate was First Delegate from the United States at the Second Hague Peace Conference, and devoted much energy to the creation of an International Court of Prize and a Court of Abitral Justice. He tells here the results of both conferences, and also incidents connected with them. Index.

PAN-GERMANISM. By Roland Greene Usher. 720p.8vo. H. Miff. $1.75n.

Most momentous result of the Balkan War is the present tense situation in Europe, in which the interests of the Triple Alliance, composed of Germany, Austria and Italy, are arrayed against those of the Triple Entente, composed of England, France and Russia. Book discusses the situation with thoroughness. Beginning with an account of the great international movement known as Pan-Americanism, author considers the grounds for the existing jealousies between England and Germany, the relation of Russia, France, Italy and Austria to the affair, the actual effects of the war in the Balkans upon the balance of power in Europe, the relation of the United States to these new conditions in European diplomacy, and, finally, the close connection between the European imbroglio and the new nationalism that is appearing in the Orient.

REPUBLICAN FRANCE, 1870-1912. By Ernest Alfred Vizetelly. 522p.9ports.8vo. Small, M. $4n.

"Her presidents, statesmen, policy, vicissitudes and social life." Story of the present French Republic, from its foundation onward and of the careers of its most eminent public men. Among the contents are: Thiers; The National Assembly; The Elysée Palace; Under Macmahon; Grévy's presidency and Gambetta's predominance; "The great ministry"; Carnot's presidency; The great Panama scandal, etc. Index.

From actual unsolicited letters

STRANGER:

"It is a perfectly delicious book. I finished reading it to my sick husband this afternoon and his face fell when I told him it was ended. It has brought much sunshine to this home, and we are greatly indebted to you.

"'MARTHA BY-THE-DAY' is the cheeriest philosophy and we treasure it much."

FRIEND:

"A— and J— have both finished reading the book and judging by the chuckling and exclamations, they were being highly entertained. Only they insisted on reading extracts from the story and I had literally to stuff my ears. I like to read a story without having advance information."

BOOKSELLER:

"You certainly have a winner in 'MARTHA BY-THE-DAY.' I have not read a book in years that I like so well as I do this. It is piled full of good wholesome humor and quaint philosophy."

You'll do well to keep your eye on

The DREAM GIRL

By Ethel Gertrude Hart

THIS is as charming a love story as you'll find in a whole shelf of books.

"The Dream Girl" wrote the most intimate, delightful, fanciful letters that ever beguiled an invalid's weary hours. Max, to whom the letters were directed, needed comforting just then. He hated people and he hated violets. Why, you will have to read the book to find out.

"I have just been out," the Dream Girl wrote, "into the garden in the wind and rain to pluck two of my special violets for you. I don't think the gale of yesterday has beaten all the perfume out of them. I shall put them in this letter, and burn them if you dare!"

He didn't burn them.

And when he gets voluminous letters about "Winsome," and "The Man-from-Mallee," and returns in kind letters about "Polly," and Herr Lindt, who plays Rubenstein's "Melody in F" on his 'cello, he commences to want very much to know this girl who interprets his moods so absolutely. She writes that her garden is a great deal more of a dream than she is herself. But just the same he wants to see her "little Dresden china" grandmother, and their house up in the hills.

One day, when Max was well on the road to recovery, this letter came:

"Do you know the summer is trying even up here among the mountains. And I cannot think of another word to write. Shall this be the last of your Dream Girl? She has gone far enough along the road of life with you and wants a long rest. Imagine her vanishing in the mists, and the purple distance. D. G."

That day, and the next and the next came, and still no letters from "The Dream Girl." Finally Max set out to find her She wasn't really a dream; but she was a great surprise to Max—and she will be to every reader, too.

Dear Sirs -

With the delivery by you of Volume 15, The Catholic Encyclopedia is completed and we take this opportunity to express our gratification at the satisfactory way in which you have performed your share of the work, which has been called by a high authority "one of the chief literary events of the day", and by another authority "a perfect piece of bookmaking."

We trust you also feel gratified that you have been associated with an enterprise that has been called by an eminent Protestant authority, "a far sighted undertaking splendidly carried through, testifying to the enterprise and wisdom of the great organization it represents."

We consider that you have fully lived up to the terms of your contract. The last volume matches the first and no fault can be found because of any lack of uniformity in the edges, leather, stamping, marbled paper, or as to any of the details.

Very truly yours,

RUNNING SANDS

By REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN

Author of "The House of Bondage," "The Girl That Goes Wrong," etc.

A story of the way people don't do things,—often ; and of very cogent reasons why. A man who has spent thirty years in making his fortune in Western mining, and makes it, comes to New York at fifty, as strong, vigorous and young, to all appearances, as if he were twenty-five He is twenty-five, he tells himself, and sees nothing out of the way in falling madly in love with a beautiful girl of eighteen. She thinks she loves him ; is willing to love him ; wants to love him ; but at eighteen how can she tell? And so they marry — Mr. Kauffman has been writing novels that are not only good artistically, but good commercially. In other words, they sell. This novel is his best yet.

This is just such a light, bright, clever spring novel as Robert W. Chambers might write. He didn't, and Rowland did. Just the book for young lady customers. Illustrated. 12*mo*. $1.25 net.

FIGHTING WHOLESALE COMPETITION.

MR. SCHOLLMEYER'S righteously indignant letter, reprinted elsewhere in this issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, revives, of course, an old, old complaint. One might have thought the condition he complains of a past issue; as an issue it is indeed past, for, regarding the justice or even expediency of publishers or jobbers competing directly with the local dealer for his local business, there is no longer any question.

It seems incredible, after all the analysis made of selling conditions, currents of effort and reactions of interest, not only in the book trade, but in more general lines of merchandising, that any wholesale house should be so shortsighted as to seek to injure the retailer, on whose success its own prosperity to a large extent depends. But men are shortsighted oftentimes; little immediate gains loom larger than the future strong standing of the trade as an efficient and unified whole. Most potent of all, even to the wholesaler who realizes the pitfall he is digging for his business when he undercuts a local dealer's bid, is the urge of competition. Jones says: "I don't like to do it; I think it's dead wrong. But Smith does it, and I've got to keep up with him to hold my trade." And how often, if you accuse Smith of treachery toward the retailer—for that is what it is—he replies that he does it only because Jones does it!

But what, under the circumstances, is Mr. Schollmeyer to do? What is any retailer to do in any similar case? Cut prices below the wholesaler's so as to hold the order at any cost? Emphatically no. It doesn't help matters a bit to take any order that means a sure loss. Don't for a moment think that this kind of a "sale at less than cost" has the slightest advertising value. Quite the reverse. Your purchasers will merely think they can and ought to beat you down on every other purchase made; they will not and cannot respect you as a business man.

The first and obvious thing is a courteous but emphatic letter of protest to the offending jobber or publisher. Oftentimes there has been a misunderstanding of some kind that is gladly rectified—for the great majority of publishers, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY sincerely believes, desire to deal honestly with the bookseller. If the letter of protest can be endorsed by all the local booksellers—and here is where local co-operation and a spirit of mutual trade helpfulness will work wonders of good—so much the better. Protest should also be lodged at once with the efficient and ever-active committee of the American Booksellers' Association having just such assaults on trade welfare in charge.

Most important of all, however, talk with your customer. Point out to him that you are a taxpayer, helping to support the community and deserving well of it. But don't let it go with that; a good many men don't let their local pride and loyalty to home industries reach the dollars-and-cents point. Show the purchaser how you can give him, and do give him, better service than the foreign dealer—opportunity to inspect goods before purchase, experienced advice and suggestion, better credit perhaps, convenience in ordering, cheaper and quicker delivery. Make sure, first, that you really are giving him service; and then submit to him that this service requires, and, in fairness, deserves, payment.

In the case cited, editions of non-copyrighted items were not specified, and Mr. Schollmeyer believed, and probably rightly, that the wholesale bid proposed cheaper editions there than his own bid had, editions which, in use, would probably prove unsatisfactory. Point this out to the client; and offer, if the purchaser seeks cheapness at any cost, rather than the quality and durability that you earnestly recommend, to put in a lower bid than your first one, with such editions specified.

In nine cases out of ten, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY believes that such a frank talk as this will convert the customer to your point of view. As we have said many times before, competition in price is the lowest grade, the cheapest kind of competition; competition in quality of service rendered requires brains, and is compensated by the buying public on a proportionate scale. Generally, the difference between the foreign bid and your own on a given order is but a few dollars in any case, and down in his heart the buyer is half ashamed of himself in advance. What you have to do is to show a legitimate reason and offer him an opportunity to be fair with you and his community.

THE rights of patentees (and, incidentally, of owners of copyrights) were slightly strengthened by a decision of the United States Supreme Court last Monday. The case was one in which The Fair, the Chicago department store, had cut prices on a patented gas heater upon which the manufacturer had set a net retail price. The Fair had attacked the jurisdiction of the United States Circuit Court, which had handed down a decision adverse to the defendants, on the ground that price-cutting had no relation to patent law. The Supreme Court held, however, that federal courts might take jurisdiction over suits for alleged infringement of patents when patented articles were sold below a price fixed by the patent holder. This does not, however, decide the main point at issue, which will be considered on its merits in a case to be argued April 7. It comes from the District of Columbia, and is expected to settle the much-disputed question of cut rates in the resale of patented articles. The Supreme Court has taken a recess until April 7, so no decision in the Macy case can be expected before that date.

VOLUME I. Number 1, of the Industrial Arts Index, the new cumulative index of trade and engineering periodical literature published by the H. W. Wilson Company, of Minneapolis, came to hand last week. Undertaken in response to repeated requests, the new periodical, if we may judge by its scope and appearance, is amply justified. Format and style follow the well-known Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature, published by the Wilson house; the new Index will, however, be a bi-monthly, omitting a summer number, and will cumulate straight through the year. Forty-three periodicals are indexed in this first number, including in engineering proper American Machinist, Engineering Magazine,—News and,—Record, Electrical World, Power, Railway Age Gazette, Scientific American and,—Supplement, etc., and in the trade field such standard periodicals as Iron Age, Inland Printer, Journal of Accountancy and Automobile. The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY extends its congratulations to Mr. Wilson upon the latest addition to his bibliographical family, and to all users of trade and engineering periodicals for what will undoubtedly prove an invaluable tool.

CRANE AMERICANA BRING HIGH PRICES.

$5100 FOR A UNIQUE VIRGINIA ITEM.—GEORGE D. SMITH THE HEAVIEST BUYER.—$32,792 TOTAL FOR THREE SESSIONS.

THE sale of the library of Americana of the late Edward N. Crane, of Newark, N. J., began last Monday at the Richmond Company rooms, 19 East 45th Street, New York City.

The best figure for the first day was $5100, which George D. Smith paid for Sir William Berkeley's "Discourse and View of Virginia." Only one other copy of this work is known to be in existence, and that is in the British Museum. There is no record of a copy ever having been sold at auction. Sir William was Governor of Virginia and author of most of the laws of the colony. He was appointed to the office by Charles I., deprived of it by Oliver Cromwell's Parliament, and restored to this position upon the accession of Charles II. Walter M. Hill, of Chicago, was the unsuccessful second bidder.

Mr. Hill was successful, however, in winning another fine item, the Columbus letter, but was forced to pay $1950 for it. This letter, published by Plannck, in Rome, 1493, was the announcement by Columbus of his discoveries, and as all the known copies of it are in public libraries, this left but one other copy besides Mr. Crane's that could come on the market. This copy had once been purchased by Waldorf Astor in London and given to the Astor Library. Upon the amalgamation of the New York libraries it was sold.

The voyages of Samuel de Champlain, Paris, 1613, which, in the famous Hoe sale, brought $700, went still higher yesterday, bringing $955. L. C. Harper was the purchaser.

The first book printed in America by William Bradford, the "Good Order Established in Pennsylvania and New Jersey," by Thomas Budd, published in 1685 at Philadelphia, sold to George D. Smith for $1700.

The rare "Character of the Province of Maryland," by George Alsop, London, 1666, which had appeared but once previously in American auctions, sold to Dodd & Livingston for $1130.

The total for the first day was $16,384.36.

SECOND DAY.

At the second day's session, the first book printed in English on the subject of New York, Daniel Fenton's "A Brief Description of New York, Formerly Called New Netherlands," was sold for $1050 to George D. Smith. This book, which was printed in London in 1670, presents itself on the title page as describing New York "with the place thereunto Adjoyning. Together with the Manner of its Scituation, Fertility of the Soyle, Healthfulness of the Climate and the Commodities thence produced. Also some Directions and Advice to such as shall go thither: An Account of what Commodities they shall take with them; The Profit and Pleasure that may accrew to them thereby."

Two other record auction prices were made —$200 for John Haywood's "The Natural and Aboriginal History of Tennessee," Nashville, 1823, which went to Mr. Smith, and $350 for Thomas Henderson's "Observations on the Chipeway Nation of Indians," Lexington, 1812, which went to Walter N. Hill, of Chicago.

The rare first edition of Richard Hackluyt's "Divers Voyages Touching the Discouerie of America and the Ilands Adjacent, &c.," printed in London in 1582, went to Mr. Smith for $550, and a copy of the 1589 edition went to the same bidder for $250.

The first collection of voyages in English, Richard Eden's "The Decades of the Newe Worlde or West India, Conteyning the Navigations and Conquestes of the Spanyardes," London, 1555, was sold to Mr. Smith for $255.

The total of the second session was $7806.

THIRD DAY.

The third session, Wednesday, brought in $8450.

Walter M. Hill, of Chicago, paid the highest price of the day—$1100—for "The New Life of Virginia," by Robert Johnson, quarto, London, 1612, a fine copy of this extremely rare work. It is the Marshall C. Lefferts copy, and is in binding by Stikeman. Mr. Hill also gave $475 for the same author's "Nova Britannia," London, 1609. It is the Griswold-Ives-Lefferts copy, and is in binding by F. Bedford.

George E. Littlefield, of Boston, obtained for $200 "Historical Memoirs relating to the Housatunnuk Indians," by Samuel Hopkins, small quarto, Boston, 1753. Sabin calls this one of the rarest of books relating to New England.

A fine Revolutionary letter of Francis Hopkinson, dated from the Continental Navy Yard, Borden Town, N. J., October 7, 1777, and signed also by John Wharton, brought the high price of $160. It refers to the Battle of Germantown, and mentions General George Washington. A set of "The Jesuit Relations," edited by R. G. Thwaites, was bought by S. H. Clarke for $167.90.

Mr. Hill paid $200 for the "Journal of the First Session of the Senate of the United States of America begun and held at the City of New York March 4, 1779, and in the thirteenth year of the Independence of the said States." A collection of the rare original treaties, containing the nine parts, complete, of Bartholome de Las Casas' work upon the Indians, published at Seville, Spain, 1552-53, went to George D. Smith for $305. He also obtained a set of the collection of "Voyages," by Levinus Hulsius and his successors, for $800. The rare first English edition of "The Spanish Colonie," by Las Casas, a small quarto, printed in London in 1583, was also knocked down to Mr. Smith for $420, and he obtained for $135 the rare "Account of the First Voyages and Discoveries made by the Spaniards in America," by Las Casas, published in London in 1699.

Dodd & Livingston paid $400 for the rare first edition of Marc Lescarbot's "Histoire de la Nouvelle France," small octavo, Paris, 1609. This copy contains the three original maps, and is in binding by Chambolle-Duru. "Novo Francia, or the Description of that part of New France which is one Continent with Virginia," an English translation of the fourth and sixth books of the first edition of Lescarbot, went to Mr. Smith for $235. Lathrop C. Harper gave $120 for another edition of the same work, Paris, 1611, and Mr. Smith $165 for another edition, Paris, 1612. Still another edition, Paris, 1618, went to Mr. Littlefield for $250. Sabin says of it: "This edition differs from all the preceding. The arrangement is altered, and there are many additions. It may therefore be considered the best."

A fine copy of the rare "Semper Eadem John Huighen Van Linschoten. His Discourse on Voyages into ye Easte and West Indies," folio, London, 1598, was knocked down to Mr. Smith for $250. This edition was not in the Robert Hoe collection.

NEWSPAPER MAGAZINE SECTIONS MUST PAY MAGAZINE RATE.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission, on March 25, handed down an important decision in the case of the Denver News-Times Publishing Company against the Atchison, Topeka

Digitized by Google

& Santa Fe Railway Company, holding that Sunday magazine supplements are properly to be classified as in the first class, as magazines, and not in the second class, as newspaper publications, when shipped in bulk.

The rate on magazine supplements at first-class freight rates from New York to Denver is $2.34 per 100 pounds, while the second-class rate is $1.91 between those points. The publishing company asserted that the railroad company owed it $4342.97 for express charges on such shipments of supplements during the past two years.

The record showed that the supplements in question were printed only to be folded in with the news edition of several newspapers, and that they were never sold or distributed directly in single copies. The total number printed was shown to be 1,450,000. The outside cover was printed in lithographic colors and on better paper than is usually used for newspapers. The publication was stitched, and its pages were folded like those of a book. The printing was all done in New York City three weeks in advance of the date for which each issue was to be used.

The supplement contained no matter that could be classed as news, but its space was devoted to essays, fiction, short stories, and novels, verses, cartoons, anecdotes and advertising.

The commission held that it was clear from the character of the publication that it should be classed with other magazines, notwithstanding the fact that it was never sold separately from the paper with which it was issued.

SIMPLIFIED SPELLING BOARD ISSUES FURTHER SIMPLIFICATIONS.

THE Simplified Spelling Board issued, last week, a new list (its fourth) of proposed simplifications.

Briefly stated, these new rules are:

Dropping the silent "h" after "c" in words like "chameleon," "chaos," etc.

Dropping the final silent "e" after a single consonant preceded by a short vowel, as in "have," "give," etc.

Dropping silent initial "k" or "g" before "n," as in "gnash," "knack," "knot," etc.

Changing the "ph" to "f" when so pronounced, as in "telephone," "phonograph," and thousands of similar words.

Dropping one of double final consonants, as in "ebb," "egg," etc.

Dropping the silent initial "w" before "r" in words like "wrong," "wreck," etc.

Dropping the unnecessary "o" in the termination "ous," as in "enormous," "famous," etc.

Changing final "some" in "handsome," "winsome," etc., to "sum."

Changing final "ed" to "t" when so pronounced, as in "passed," "missed," "danced," "forced," etc., dropping any unnecessary letters and changing "c" to "s" where so pronounced (i. e., "past," "mist," "danst," "forst").

The previous list (the third) published by the "Simplified Board" came out in 1908. A year later the three lists were combined in one "Alfabetic List." Since that time the board has been engaged in the preparation of a provisional "Vocabulary of Simplifications," intended to "include all the ordinary words of the English language that admit of simplification, according to existing rules and analogies, without increasing the present alfabet." The fourth and last list is issued to "remove many minor irregularities, and thus clear the ground for the work that remains to be done." The first list came out in 1906. The work has now covered practically every form of word in the English language.

In publishing the fourth list, the board and its advisory counsel go on to say that many thousand professional workers and their other supporters, for whom they speak, desire to bring about an improvement in English spelling. Allowing for the necessary and desirable criticism and doubt that always accompany new proposals, the board declares that the great body of educated men and women, no matter in what degre they may use simplified spellings themselves, will hereafter "advise teachers to teach and children to use the new spelling."

Some of the best-known members of the board are:

Dr. Charles Grandgent, of Harvard University, the president; Professor Brander Matthews, of Columbia; Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews, of the University of Nebraska; William Archer, the London dramatic critic; Hamilton Holt, the publisher; Dr. Calvin Thomas, of Columbia; Dr. Thomas R. Lounsbury, of Yale; Andrew D. White, former president of Cornell University; Professor David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford University; Professor George Hempl, and the late Benjamin E. Smith, former managing editor of "The Century Dictionary."

FAVORABLE DECISION TO INGERSOLL WATCH PRICE CUTTERS.

JUDGE WILLARD, of the United States Circuit Court, recently decided in Minneapolis that Henry McColl, a druggist and alderman of St. Paul, was not compelled to sell Ingersoll watches at $1. He held that the contract for the price maintenance is unreasonable as the question of a trademark rather than a patent is involved. He holds it is beyond the power of the watch company to compel the sale of their product at the fixed price. Mr. McColl sold watches for 83 cents and was sued by the company. He bought the watches from a jobber rather than from the manufacturers and set up that the contract to maintain prices did not extend to him and the case was dismissed, and costs were assessed against the Ingersoll Company.

The makers claimed that the contract accompanying each article tended to restrain the retailer from disposing of the goods at less than the price fixed by themselves.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE March meeting of the Booksellers' League's school for book salesmen was held Tuesday evening last, at 8 p.m., at Brentano's. Evidently the evening session idea is a popular one, for the attendance was over eighty, a considerable increase over any previous meeting.

The subject of the evening was "Some Things About Series Publications that the Book Clerk Should Know," Fremont Rider, of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, being the speaker. After a short introduction on series publications in general, their importance, raison d'etre and selling possibilities, he ran over very briefly about 150 specific series which were either typical or of importance in themselves. Mimeographed lists of these were distributed, Mr. Rider annotating these as he went along. In conclusion, on suggestion, he gave a brief description of the Decimal Classification, its theory and use, outlining some of its main classes, mentioning what use has been made of it by the book trade, more especially abroad, describing the slightly modified form of it which has been adopted for book-trade statistics (and is used in the lists of new publications in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY'S monthly Book Review), and discussing its possible further use as a guide to the arrangement of bookstore stock.

Following the school session, which adjourned at 8.15, a meeting of the board of managers of the League was held at the Players' Club, President Shoemaker entertaining the members at dinner. Officers of the League were elected as follows: First vice-president, E. Byrne Hackett; second vice-president, E. Eisele; secretary, A. G. Seiler; and treasurer, W. T. Haskell. Fremont Rider was elected to membership in the board. The president called on members for suggestions for the work of the new year; the responses were general and enthusiastic.

COMMUNICATIONS.

FIGHTING WHOLESALE COMPETITION

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., March 1, 1913.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

FOR your information, we are enclosing a list of books from a local public school, with prices attached, said prices being furnished on application of the principal of the school named. The prices were made to this school by a so-called wholesale house that seems to want business from the dealers in this section very much, especially during the holiday season.

The prices are misleading, in that certain copyright books are offered at wholesale prices, same as made to us by this house, while other non-copyright books are quoted at prices that we can reduce considerably, no editions being specified.

The result is the same, however, for the purchasers, actual or prospective, are led to believe that they are getting all the books at a greatly reduced price, and the outside house gets the order away from the local house, whose owners have to pay the taxes to support these same schools. In this case the teachers let us get a sight of the lists, and we made the books at the same prices to keep the money in the community, and also to take it away from the wholesale house referred to.

Another ugly feature of the transaction is the fact that the money for these books is furnished by a subscription of the patrons of the schools, and affords a means, not infrequently resorted to, for said patrons to get books for their own libraries or for their holiday gifts at wholesale prices.

We do not know that this complaint will do any good, but we do not propose to remain silent. We will also say that if there were less of this cutthroat practice there would be fewer past due accounts on the first of February, and the collection departments of certain agencies would have less reason for existence. The question the dealer has a right to ask is: "Does the publisher and wholesale dealer give a rap for the bookseller, except as a means of advertising his wares?"

Just before Christmas, the principal of one of our schools came in one business day, took up nearly four hours of our time to select $50 worth of books, made a list of them, wrote to this same wholesale (?) house, also to an Eastern publisher from whom we had bought goods, and a few days later came in to tell us that we could put the books back in stock, as he had ordered from outside the city and saved about $7 on the order. The wholesale house and the publisher referred to made wholesale prices on the books, in some cases less than they would make to us for the same editions. We are not writing to the WEEKLY for publication, but if you can start anything that will end in the cessation of this cutthroat business we shall be satisfied.

J. H. SCHOLLMEYER.

[Although this letter was not sent "for publication," the instance it cites is so clear and flagrant that for the good of the trade, as a whole, we venture to print it and make some editorial comment upon it.

The list enclosed by Mr. Schollmeyer included such older books as "Little Women," priced at 95 cents; "Two Little Confederates," $1.05; "Peterkin," papers, $1; and a few new titles, as "Anne of Green Gables, $1; "Mary Cary," $1, etc.—ED. P. W.]

THE LAMENT OF A LOST BOOKSELLER

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: A man, I think, is entitled to talk with authority after a business career of more than a quarter of a century. It is understood, of course, that a small bookseller has nothing to say of interest. Enough for him is to live and pay toll.

I have been closely identified with the book business for more than thirty years. In this time a revolution has taken place, especially in retail bookselling. It was possible, twenty-five years ago, to modestly start in the retail selling of books and allied trades, and by diligence and economy earn a living and a competence, but it is a rare case to-day where such a thing is possible.

Digitized by Google

On figuring the maintenance of a small bookshop, thirty years ago, the following figures are accurate and given from experience. Of course, it is understood that this will apply only to large cities:

1882.		1912.
Rent.....	$600.00	Rent	$1200.00
Gas....	25.00	Electric light..	100.00
		Telephone	50.00
	$625.00		$1350.00

In thirty years the rents have increased 100 per cent.; lighting, 400 per cent., and the telephone has not helped the business, but injured it, as it prevents personal contact with the patron. As will be noted, the difference thirty years ago will be $725 in favor of the shopkeeper. Then, again, it will be noted that the small shopkeeper did double the business before the development of the department store.

A few years ago the landlord came in personal touch with the tenant; now it is an agent who is after the last drop of blood. Electric light, instead of an increase of 400 per cent., it is claimed by experts, could be made as cheap as gas. But he, the small shopkeeper, must carry the burden, and he is taxed to the limit. The telephone, which should be about $15 a year, under our present system is run to create millionaires, who, in return, make handy doormats of the meek shopkeeper. Electric light and the telephone go with the rent. Clerk hire costs the same as it did thirty years ago. The cost of living has gone up, but the wages of helpers remain the same. This is another point that clearly proves that the people holding the purse-strings are exacting the utmost.

In the line of books, discounts on quantities is another phase that clearly proves the dominance of the man with the dollar. Where does the little shopkeeper stand with the department store in buying? Wanamaker's head book buyer receives a salary that will compass the entire earnings of ten small shopkeepers in New York. Let us look at facts as they are. It pays many dealers, who go to Wanamaker's sales and buy books at retail to sell again at an advance. This indictment rests with the publishers, who, in the near future, will pay for their want of vision. Fixed or net prices have not helped the small booksellers in cities, as the public are educated to the fact that they can buy in hotels, railway stations and druggists at the same price.

Booksellers who keep stationery are confronted with an envelope, ink, paper and other trusts. Here again the big buyer gets the advantage.

Take the magazines for another example. A few years ago nearly all magazines were returnable, and dealers were given larger discounts. Gradually and insidiously the wholesale prices are raising and the returns are being cut off. In the course of a year each and every dealer must lose many dollars from this.

Journey back with me in your memory thirty-five years ago in Boston: Little, Brown & Co., the Old Corner Book Store, Lee & Shepard, De Wolfe, Fiske Co.; A. K. Loring and Joseph Lockwood. These firms were all on Washington, from State to Franklin streets. James R. Osgood was on Tremont, opposite the Park Street Church. Only two remain in the retail business. Not a firm is left on Washington Street. There was Walker's and Carter's library that did a big business. I know about Clarke's well-equipped stock, but it in no way compared with that of Osgood. Who is getting the business?

In our own city, we can compare Broadway with Washington Street, Boston, twenty-five years ago. Who have taken the place of John Ireland, Leggett, and Dillingham? On Broadway, the great business artery of the Western hemisphere, not a single bookstore, except one in a basement and a few small stores above 72d Street, in the residential section.

In Philadelphia, where is the retail business done by J. B. Lippincott Company and Porter & Coates? The Lippincott stock was immense. It is easy to guess who is doing the business now.

Statistics will prove my assertion that, notwithstanding the increase in population, the retail sellers of books have decreased.

Does the future hold any hope? Not an atom. The tendency all along the line is for the worse. Department stores are going to grow more mighty, and W. D. Howells nailed the small shopkeeper when he claimed they were parasites. "Who will sell books?" you will ask. My answer is, "Who are selling them now?" For a clear look into the future, the figures that are given above are referred to.

The attitude of the public toward trade is one of mild benevolence, seasoned with sympathy; and, note you, this tendency is a growing one and of recent date. The same attitude toward the butcher or baker would cause well-deserved rebuke.

Who ever heard of a bookstore being robbed? Along with the school and almshouse, the burglar has a scorn for the trade. Ten dollars in the exchequer, and Mr. Bookman is as rich as the three prize pork eaters of Wall Street.

As a boy, in Boston, I will never forget the gatherings in the office of William Lee, that Grand Old Man of the book trade. It was a frequent occurrence to see Ralph Waldo Emerson, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Wendell Phillips and Colonel Higginson in jest and rhyme with Billy Lee. Where could you match this gathering to-day? Where are the men? you will ask. Many times I have seen Emerson talking with A. K. Loring. Each had his joke to exchange. Let a publisher and author meet to-day, and its brass tacks at once. All you will hear is per cent. and cash from start to finish.

There are booksellers and booklovers; there are second-hand booksellers and junk dealers; scarce bookdealers and cash registers; first-edition dealers and pawnbrokers; there are book talkers in bookstores and parrots. You cannot measure the distance that separates a bookseller from a booklover. There was Whiting, who called himself a bookseller, but who never wanted to sell. There is Casey, who sleeps on books; also Kelly, who cries when hunger compels him to sell one of his heart treasures. These men are out of place in a world without system or order, where only the dollar counts and man not at all. Money will never count against a thing a man really cares for. Nature has fixed it so that her treasures can be preserved.

Parker became discouraged and started raising chickens, but he soon came back to his first choice. McLean began to feed the physical man, and he had to return to feed the mental hunger. I have a more substantial plan than these. It is on my programme to write a book of a singular people that I ran across some years ago in a new Utopia in southern California. Of course, the book is a crazy idea, as it deals with a people who are well fed, clothed and housed. For this they return service to the community of three hours' work each day, and there is no waste, misery or sin. I am not going to sell this book, as I have a better plan. In conjunction with John Moneymaker, the book will be given free with a twenty-volume edition of a new encyclopedia containing thirty million illustrations and seven million pages. To move these books, I have invented a patent cover that, when cooked properly, will taste better than any imported cheese. Another ingenious plan I have worked out is a paper that, when soaked, will taste better than any Coney Island frankfurter you ever ate. Needless to add, the books will be made of this paper, so that if you do not read my book you can eat it.

Benjamin Franklin is quoted as saying that the bookseller who sold a good book at a small profit, rather than a poor book at a large profit, combined the worth of a great educator and humanitarian.

It is ordained, in the great make-up of things, that the lamb must graze on the verdant hillside; and by the same token, the swineherd will follow their natural bent. It is also written that there is good in everything; and carrying the message still further, you will find that every package of old books contains a volume that has a mission and a right to life.

Poor Richard says, "Keep thy shop, and thy shop will keep thee." True, but in Franklin's day the landlord was of different species. The department stores were not the market places. Candles did the lighting instead of a 400-per-cent. electric company. Fifty dollars is not much for a telephone, but it paid two months' rent for Franklin's small bookshop in Philadelphia.

This is my message of protest against a growing system that permits no development and forces me to pay unjust toll. With the Boston Tea Party, I will throw my shop overboard.

Fraternally,

JOHN J. DALY.

POSTAL NOTES.

NEW PARCEL POST STAMPS.

A NEW design for the parcel post stamps has been ordered as a result of many complaints received from the public and postmasters. The present series of parcel post stamps are all of one color, making it difficult to tell one from the other. The new series will consist of stamps of different colors.

OBITUARY NOTES.

As we go to press, we learn that Edwin Young, head of the firm of E. & J. B. Young & Co., died at his residence in New York on March 26, in his ninetieth year.

LADY DOROTHY NEVILL, a noted society leader and the author of sundry piquant books of recollections of English political and social life, died in London March 24. Her works include " History of the Walpoles, Earls of Orford"; "Recollections," 1906; "Leaves from the Notebooks of Lady Dorothy Nevill," 1907; "More Leaves," 1908; "Under Five Reigns," 1910; "My Own Times," 1912.

JOSEPH NEWTON HALLOCK, author and editor, died in Brooklyn last Monday. Since 1880, Dr. Hallock has been editor and proprietor of Christian Work. His works include "How to Teach," 1857; "A History of Southampton," 1860; "First Impressions in Europe," 1878; "Twice Across the Continent," 1880; "The Christian Life," 1890; "Family Worship," 1892; "First Principles of Temperance," 1892; "What is Heresy?.," 1894; "Mormonism," 1896; "Life of D. L. Moody," 1900.

FIELD-MARSHAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY died March 25 at Mentone, France. He was born in 1833. Viscount Wolseley was one of the most famous of modern British soldiers, and had seen service in all parts of the world—America, China, the gold coast of Africa, Turkey and India. He was famous alike for his medals awarded for distinguished service and his scars received in hand-to-hand fighting. Among his published works are: "The Soldier's Pocketbook for Field Service," 1886; "Life of the Duke of Marlborough," 1894; "Decline and Fall of Napoleon," 1895; "The Story of a Soldier's Life," 1903.

PARKER P. SIMMONS, the publisher, whose death, due to pneumonia, occurred Monday at his home, 330 West 59th Street, had been active in business in this city for more than thirty years. Born in Kingston, Mass., in 1852, he was graduated from Bowdoin College in the class of 1875. After spending several years in teaching, he became the Western agent of Ginn & Heath, publishers, with headquarters in Chicago and Kansas City. He next was connected with the publishing house of Clark & Maynard as its New York agent. In 1886, Mr. Simmons was appointed to the Board of Education of Brooklyn, and served for three terms. In 1891, he was made superintendent of the book department of the Brooklyn schools, and in 1901 superintendent of school supplies of New York City, serving in the latter capacity until 1904, when he entered the school-book publishing business at 3 East 14th Street. Surviving him are his wife and two sons—Harold Stetson Simmons and John Standish Simmons.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

Bedrock, a quarterly journal of scientific thought, will be published in this country by Henry Holt & Company, beginning with the April issue. Bedrock has been appearing for a year in England with marked success. The editorial committee consists of Sir Bryan Donkin, E. B. Poulton, G. Archibald Reid and H. H. Turner. The contents for the forthcoming April issue includes: "Mimicry, Mutation and Mendelism," by E. B. Poulton; "Modern Vitalism," by W. McDougall; "Japanese Colonial Methods," by Ellen C. Semple, etc.

A PRIVATE company, the Statesman Publishing Co., Ltd., including in its board of directors Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Webb, Bernard Shaw, E. Whitley and H. D. Harben, has been formed to own and control a new weekly newspaper, to be called The New Statesman, which will deal with public affairs from the standpoint of a sane and practical Collectivism. The general format will be that of a political and literary review, of the type of the Nation or the Spectator, and the price will be sixpence. It is hoped that the first number will appear April 12. The offices are at 10 Great Queen Street, Kingsway, London, W. C.

AN analysis of the "Catalogue des périodiques recus par les bibliothèques suisses," recently published by the Association des Bibliothécaires Suisses, made under the direction of Dr. Johnston, librarian of Columbia University, shows that of about 7000 serial publications, only 235 are American, and these, for the most part, publications of State scientific bureaus and scientific societies. Among the latter are 55 publications of universities, the University of California leading with 17. There are only nine periodicals of a general character, viz.: the Atlantic Monthly, Century, Chautauquan, Forum, Harper's Monthly and Weekly, Nation, Science, and Scientific American.

THE Southern Christian Advocate, a magazine issued weekly by the South Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, blossomed out, March 20, in an "original poetry edition." Verses on a great variety of subjects by all sorts and conditions of men, women and children, are published. Stephen A. Nettles, the editor, says, in a preface, that the poems have been accumulating in the Advocate office for years. He professes not to have been able to distinguish between the good and the bad. Perhaps, through his neglect to publish them to the world, he thought he was blighting some genius. Perhaps there were real gems in the verses. But how was he to distinguish? It was a fearful responsibility. The solution of the problem flashed upon him—he would publish all the poems. "We gathered together," he says, "every piece of original poetry we could put our hands on, and, without daring to attempt any criticism or correction, we gave them into the tender care of the linotyper. It is especially appropriate that this poetry should appear at the vernal equinox."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

CASSELL & Co. will soon publish "Social Environment and Moral Progress," by Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, the English scientist.

COINCIDENT with its being ranked at the head of Bookman's "Best Selling List" for February an eighth edition of "The Happy Warrior" is announced.

Two interesting musical biographies soon to appear are Berthold Litzmann's "Life of Madame Schumann," and J. F. Runciman's "Life of Richard Wagner."

CHARLES A. CANNER, former sales manager for the John Lane Co., is ready to re-enter the book field. His home address is 404 Amity Street, Flushing, N. Y.

THE eleventh impression of John Masefield's Polignac prize poem, "The Everlasting Mercy," is just issued by Sidgwick & Jackson, of London, a fact which bears witness to a popularity probably unprecedented in the case of a poem in the twentieth century.

E. GUILMOTO, of Rue de Mézières, Paris, will shortly publish "The Geography of Newfoundland," by R. Perret. The book is fully illustrated, and deals completely with the oceanography and the meteorology of that region, and the maritime and diplomatic history of the island.

THE Funk & Wagnalls Company will move soon to new quarters in the new twenty-story building on the corner of Fourth Avenue and 26th Street, three blocks north of their present location. In connection with their removal, they are announcing a sweeping clearance sale of many of their publications.

MRS. JEFFERY FARNOL, the American wife of the author of "The Broad Highway," etc., is ill at the home of her father, in Englewood, N. J. Mrs. Farnol was operated upon for appendicitis a few days ago, but is now pronounced out of danger. She recently came from Kent, England, to visit her parents. She was about to return home when stricken. Mr. Farnol is now on his way to this country.

PLAYERS of to-day — Sothern, Marlowe, Blanche Bates, Mrs. Fiske, and others—are to be included in William Winter's series of "Lives of the Players," the first volume of which, "Life of Tyrone Power," is published to-day by Moffat, Yard & Co. "My Lady Peggy Leaves Town," by Frances Aymar Mathews, and "Barbara," by Alice and Claude Askew, are also ready.

DR. L. OPPENHEIM, M.A., LL.D., Whewell Professor of International Law in the University of Cambridge, honorary member of the Royal Academy of Jurisprudence at Madrid, and member of the Institute of International Law, has written a study of "The Panama Canal Conflict Between Great Britain and the United States," which will be published this month by Putnam.

P. Blakiston's Sons & Company have just issued an interesting little envelope-size catalogue of "Portraits of Famous Authors," consisting entirely of reproductions of photographs of some of their distinguished medical authors. The cuts are fine-screen, printed one side of the paper in sepia, and, as the publishers suggest, are good enough to cut out and frame, or may be "pasted opposite the title page of the author's book."

The first edition of "A Heritage of Honor," by Alan Hudson, published March 22 by Richard G. Badger, has already been exhausted, and a second printing is under way. The scenes of this romance of the Revolution are confined to what may be called the Greater Boston district. Mr. Hudson, now the pastor of the largest church in Brockton, Mass., and a full-fledged American citizen, was born and brought up under the British flag.

G. P. Putnam's Sons have acquired the American rights of "My Past," an autobiography by a relative of one of the reigning monarchs of Europe. The memoirs will be published in May, but, under the terms of their agreement with the personage in question, the publishers are unable to give particulars at present. The identity of the author, and full details regarding the book, will be announced about the middle of April.

It is reported that Emperor William is not willing to entrust unknown posterity with his obituary, but is at work upon his autobiography himself—a work which is expected to run into three volumes and to reveal many secrets of the German Empire. So far the Emperor has taken into his confidence only his intimates who are pledged to secrecy, but rumor has it that here at last will be told the true story of his break with Bismarck.

Katrina Trask's play, "In the Vanguard," has for its hero a man who finds, when war breaks out, that he is not made of fighting stuff. How he proves that there are other kinds of bravery is the theme of this peace play, just published by Macmillan. Masefield's "The Daffodil Fields," Gerald Birney Smith's "Social Idealism and the Changing Theology," and "Educational Administration," by E. L. Thorndike and G. D. Strayer, are other books of the week from this house.

The bi-centenary of the birth of his ancestor, Andrew Foulis (the youngest of those two brothers whose work in printing and publishing won for them the title of "the Scottish Elzevirs"), is commemorated by his descendant, T. N. Foulis, of London and Edinburgh, by the issue of a catalogue raisonné of his own publications. It is a handsomely printed volume of nearly a hundred pages, with twelve fine plates in color inserted on hand-made paper mounts.

William Le Queux has returned to England from the Balkan war. He has been with the Servians in Macedonia, and is at present engaged on a new novel, the scenes of which will be laid in Belgrade and the conquered province of Uskub during the recent troublous times. Three years ago Le Queux was decorated by King Peter, and also by the King of Montenegro for an adventurous journey he took among the Skreli, a brigandish Albanian tribe.

In "Stella Maris," William J. Locke understandingly tells the story of a girl who comes from an unreal world of beauty into a world sordid and tragic. Another theme—the suggestion that the spirit freed from ugliness of body and mental limitation can come into its own and find the love denied on earth—is beautifully developed at the end of the story. The book was published yesterday by Lane, together with Clara Viebig's "The Son of His Mother," and "The Governor," by Karin Machaelis Stangeland, author of "The Dangerous Age."

Francis P. Harper, of Princeton, N. J., will issue, April 7, "Colored Plate Books and Their Values," a reference work for collectors, librarians and booksellers. Mr. Harper has selected colored plate items from recent English and American catalogues of reliable dealers in rare books, and included are sporting books, works on natural history, travels, etc., both in English and foreign languages. The prices are given in each case. Added is the remarkable library of colored plate books, collected by the late William C. Dulles, with the figures they sold for at a recent auction sale.

Houghton Mifflin Company announce that they have put forward their publication day in April from the 12th to the 26th. The books to be published on that day include "Gettysburg," by Elsie Singmaster; "Justice and the Modern Law," by Everett V. Abbott; "The Value of Organized Speculation," by Harrison H. Brace; "Strange Stories from the Lodge of Leisures," translated from the Chinese by George Soulié; "Stowe Notes," by Edwin Martin Taber; "A Naval History of the American Revolution," by Dr. Gardner W. Allen; and "Polly of Lady Gay Cottage," by Emma C. Dowd.

Woolf's "A Village in the Jungle," about to be issued by Longmans, Green & Co., pictures the tragedy of a remote jungle village in Ceylon. Other spring announcements by the Longmans include "College Sermons," by Dr. L. C. Stewardson, former president of Hobart College; a new book of "Sermon Notes," by Cardinal Newman; Monsignor Robert Hugh Benson's "Confessions of a Convert"; and Frederick A. Cleveland's "Organized Democracy," in which the author approaches the theme of popular sovereignty from the viewpoint of the present-day concept that government should exist for common welfare.

As a commentary on buying books at auction in New York, we are in receipt of the following note from the New York State Library:

"As an instance of the ridiculous prices at which books sometimes sell at auction in New York City, the following facts and figures are submitted. The New York State Library sent to its agent bids upon 32 certain items in Part IV. of the Hoe sale. It was not able to secure a single one of these items, which sold for an aggregate of $583. The library thereupon commissioned this agent to secure these books at any price within the amount of the original bids. Within four months of the sale, the 32 items were delivered at a net cost to the library of $175.35. In many cases the copies received were better bound than those in the Hoe library, and in no case were the books apparently inferior in condition."

MEMBERS of the Hobby Club, New York City, gathered for dinner at the home of George A. Plimpton, of Ginn & Company, 61 Park Avenue, last week, Thursday night, while Mr. Plimpton gave his hobby free rein. The latter happens to be a collection of school books that date away back to the earliest time; in fact, it is said to be the finest in the world. Part of it was recently exhibited in the New York Public Library. Among the members of the club attending were Darwin P. Kingsley, Henry C. Folger, Jr.; William F. Havemeyer, Henry E. Huntington, Alvin W. Krech, Prof. William P. Trent, Phoenix Ingraham, John C. Tomlinson, William M. Schaltzer, George F. Kunz, William B. Osgood Field, John C. Tomlinson, Jr.; David Wagstaff, John Quinn, R. T. H. Halsey, John G. Milburn, Albert Gallatin, John D. Crimmins, Adrian H. Larkin and Henry H. Harper.

AT the southerly end of the garden of the Country Life Press, where the path which leads down from the Italian pool enters a special "cedar room," there has recently been placed a sun dial, a description of which is given in a well-printed little pamphlet, just issued by Doubleday, Page & Co. Its special interest to the book trade lies in the fact that it is a "printer's sun dial." For its central feature nothing seemed so fitting as an open book, and the choice appropriately fell on the book to be desired above all others, the Gutenberg Bible. Through the kindness of Mr. Henry E. Huntington, a photograph of the famous Hoe copy of that Bible, open at the nineteenth chapter of the Book of Job, was secured, and a faithful reproduction, even to the illumination, was made in brass. The other decorations of the dial were planned to cover the first century of the art of printing, twelve marks of the early printers of various countries being used to mark the hours. The printers chosen were: Fust & Schoeffer, 1457; Bernardinus de Vitalibus, 1494; Hans & Paul Hurus, 1488; Aldus, 1494; Jenson, 1471; Caxton, 1477; Wynkyn de Worde, 1491; The St. Albans Printer, 1480; Thierry Martens, 1474; Guillaume de Rouge, 1489; Gering & Rembolt, 1470; and Plantin, 1555. The pedestal, designed by John H. Petit, architect of the Country Life Press, is of concrete, the rim of brass, the face of cement, with inlays of brass.

Picture of a New England village in which the comatose Americans are being driven out by industrious foreigners, in this case Irish and Polacks. There is a callously selfish American youth with no sense of honor, who flees to Paris to dabble in art, and contrasted with him charming, educated Irish people of the new Gaelic school and a Polish prince with a genius for music. These easily captivate the cultured, deserted American spinsters, left to defend the land. The heroine's experiments in scientific farming are curious. It is a pleasant story to read, the love affairs are interesting, and many of the people attractive.

Arson is rampant in New York; it is responsible for one-fourth the fire losses, involving an annual destruction of not less than $4,000,000 worth of property. Despite the efforts of conscientious officials and fire marshals, suspicious fires are on the increase. This report not only exposes the evil, but suggests a remedy.

Johnson, Owen M'Mahon. The sixty-first second; il. by A. B. Wenzell. N. Y., Stokes. c. '12-'13. 383 p. D. $1.35 n.
By author of "Stover at Yale." A ruby ring worth $30,000 is stolen by one of the guests of a Bohemian supper-party. The hostess discovers the theft, locks the door, turns out the light, and demands that the ring be placed on the table before she counts 100. At "61" it drops, but when the lights go up it is gone again. From this startling situation is evolved a plot in which Wall Street financiers and a panic are deeply concerned, and a young man, fresh from college, plays an important part vitally concerned with a youthful actress and an intellectual adventuress.

Veronica, a princess of Herod's court, living in the palace, is secretly infected with leprosy. Story is interwoven of a lover's quest of Veronica and hers for healing. She hears of Jesus and the cures He has wrought, and summons Him. But He is not to be commanded, compelled nor bribed. In the end His noble patience touches Veronica, she follows Him to Golgotha, and when He falls under His burden offers her handkerchief to wipe the blood and sweat from His face. He returns the gift and Veronica is cured. By author of "Titus, a comrade of the cross."

Morgan, Jacque Lloyd. The coup d'etat; il. by H. L. Grout. N. Y., Fenno. c. 320 p. D. $1.25 n.

Just on the eve of his inauguration Farlow, the first democratic president for twenty years, is kidnapped. No trace of him can be found, and his absence enables Joel Hardacre, a multimillionaire, to begin operations which are to culminate in the country's becoming a monarchy. His schemes interfere with old Jim Holladay and Dick Wharton, who have struck gold, and the two honest westerners come east to fight for their mine. They determine to find Farlow, and their success turns the tables completely and democracy once more reigns supreme.

Snaith, J: Collins. An affair of state. Garden City, N. Y., Doubleday, Page. c. 368 p. D. $1.25 n.

By author of "The principal girl," etc. The British Government, with its back to the wall and organized labor at its throat, the monarch on a very unstable seat, endeavoring to prevent the complete paralysis of national life which threatens in a universal strike; and the reins of control in the hands of a very clever duchess and James Draper, once haberdasher, now prime minister, are some of the contending forces in the story. Tale is told entirely in conversations.

Stevens. Ellen Yale. A guide to the Montessori method; with 4 il. from photographs. N. Y., Stokes. c. 12+240 p. pls. D. $1 n.

Book is an interpretation of the Montessori method for American mothers and teachers, with practical directions as to how to apply it, and a coherent explanation of its psychological basis. It includes a logical presentation of the successive steps of the method, a description of the proper use of the material, suggestions as to adaptation of the method to American conditions; and it focuses the attention on the deeper, spiritual side of Dr. Montessori's message to our time, a side of the highest importance too much overlooked.

Stevenson, Burton Egbert. The gloved hand; a detective story; with il. by T: Fogarty. N. Y., Dodd, Mead. c. '12. 343 p. D. $1.30 n.

Once more Godfrey, the reporter of "The Marathon mystery," "The Holladay case," etc., has a baffling enigma to solve. In the Bronx lives a wealthy old man in a very retired house. Every night at midnight a light like a falling star moves toward that house. Godfrey and his friend Lester find this interesting, but when old Vaughan is murdered, Fred Swain, their friend, is accused of the crime, and a Yogi and his servant are found in possession of the house and with designs on Vaughan's daughter, they find it something more than interesting, and many thrills result for the reader.

Strindberg, August, i.e., Johan August. The inferno; tr. by Claud Field. N. Y., Putnam. 4+230 p. D. $1.25 n.

Autobiographical novel. It has to do with a period of Strindberg's life when he plunged into scientific speculation and experimentation and believed himself in possession of the solution of some of the most sought-after and baffling of nature's mysteries. His health, through prolonged labor and an unnatural mode of life, became impaired, his mental state abnormal. It is the hostile impressions of life then experienced which are here described.

Sturgis, Granville Forbes. The influence of the drama. N. Y., Shakespeare Press. c. 203 p. D. $1.25 n.

Playwright's analysis of the American stage to-day, with many examples, and an appendix listing plays with long runs in New York, and authors of plays given in New York within ten years. Upholds the dignity of the profession, and gives hints for playwriting. Chapters include. The drama technical; The drama moral; The psychology of interpretation; Pantomime and the dance, and their places in the drama; The play and the issue of the hour; The influence of commerce on the drama; The moral effect of the drama.

Taylor, Ernest, comp. The Taylor papers; being a record of certain reminiscences, letters and journals in the life of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Herbert Taylor, G.C.B., G.C.H., Master of St. Katharine's Hospital, Military Secretary to H. R. H. the Duke of York, Adjutant-General of the forces, 1828-30; who, at various stages in his career had acted as private secretary to King George III., to Queen Charlotte and to King William IV.; with portraits and other illustrations. N. Y., Longmans. 12+520 p. O. $5 n.

Thanet, Octave, [pseud. for Alice French.] A step on the stair. Indianapolis, Bobbs-Merrill. c. 43 p. D. bds., 50 c. n.

Dr. Roger Hamilton lay dying and nought could save him, not even the thought of the unfinished work on his great discovery for the relief of human suffering. His spirit left his body and his mother came to him and took him out beyond space and told him something of the mysteries, as much as one just come could grasp. Then she told him he might choose to stay or go back, take up his burden of pain and years again and complete his work. He chooses the latter for the sake of suffering fellowman.

Ward, Mary Augusta Arnold, [Mrs. T: Humphrey Ward.] The mating of Lydia; il. by C: E. Brock. Garden City, N. Y., Doubleday, Page. c. 512 p. D. $1.35 n.

Lydia Penfold, a young and charming artist, drawing in the Lake country for her living, is of a poetic and unworldly temper. Equally poetic and unworldly is Lord Tatham, a young landowner who falls in love with her. But she loves a briefless barrister, Claude Faversham. The old eccentric and tyrant, Edmund Melrose, who is immensely wealthy, and has a house full of art treasures, gets Faversham into his power and bribes him with the hope of a vast inheritance. In Lydia's eyes Melrose's wealth is poisoned, and the novel is a study of rival passions between Faversham and Tatham and of conflict of conscience between Lydia and Faversham.

A HISTORY OF THE METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART

with an introductory chapter on the early institutions of art in New York. By INIFRED E. HOW: xvi –|– 361 pp. 64 illus. 8vo. New York, MCMXIII. For sale at the Museum. Price, $2.50. Postage, 22c.

An event compared with which all Panama-Pacific Expositions will fade into insignificance was the publication in the U. S., March 15th, 1913, of: PEOPLE (thither coming out of a region wherein disasters are met as if they were a jest) WHOM YOU MAY MEET AT THE FAIR, by ADAIR WELCKER.

A handsomely gotten up book, cloth bound, of 162 pages, besides a portion of an appendix. It is more than one of Britain's great journals said of another work by the same author, saying that he "like a true humorist, sets some of the hard facts of life before us in quite new lights." A book that vast numbers, owning, throughout life afterwards will study. Passing all "best sellers" added together, copies are going to be called for until millions, instead of hundreds of thousands will, within no great length of time, so urgently be desired, that the presses and book binders of San Francisco alone could not keep up with the demand. Sent carriage prepaid. One copy, 95 cents; 5, $4.25; 10, $8.00; 20, $14.00; 40, $24.00; 80, $44.00; 160, $80.00.

ADAIR WELCKER, 508 Berkeley National Bank Bldg., Berkeley, California.

The ROAD of LIVING MEN

By

WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

will be pronounced the Year's Greatest Romance.

The early sale shows that it will be even more popular than which sold Ten Large Editions and is still selling. The first scenes of the new story are laid in China during the Boxer Rebellion, and recall the big war episodes in "Routledge."

It is a Splendid Romance of Love and Adventure
